Hancock First Governor Under Constitution

The first governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts under the Constitution was born little more than a mile from the birthplace of the Constitution itself.

His name was John Hancock and, like many of the 60 men who followed him in that office, he appeared to be unpopular—until it came time for the people to cast their ballots.

There are those who say that Hancock started running for governor in the fall of 1779 as soon as he got a glimpse of what his old friend, John Adams, author of the Constitution, had in mind for the job.

From 1780 until the advent of the United States presidency nine years later, the governor of Massachusetts, under the powers vested in him by the Constitution, was the most powerful politician on the continent.

No other governor had such broad powers to appoint. No other governor had the power of veto over legislation. Hancock wanted that job badly. And there was a band of equally dedicated men determined to see that he didn't get it.

Hancock was among the wealthiest men in Massachusetts. He was vain to the point of absurdity, in the minds of Puritan Boston, at least. He loved pomp and ceremony. He was first president of the Continental Congress, yet he never really got over his failure to be named commander-in-chief of the Continental Army.

His chief opponent for governor was James Bowdoin, another well-to-do Bostonian with impeccable patriotic credentials. The campaign was one of personalities for there were few real issues around which parties could coalesce. Some didn't like either one.

"Mr. Bowdoin has again come into public life that he may . . . stand as a candidate in competition with Hancock for the highest honor and rank in this state," Hancock's severest critic, James Warren, reported to John Adams in Europe.

"Who will carry the election, is very uncertain . . .

"The vanity of one of them will sting like an adder if it is disappointed; and the advancements made by the other, if they don't succeed, will hurt his modest pride."

"It is thought that Mr. Bowdoin or Mr. Hancock will be chosen governor," grumbled the Rev. William Gordon, another Hancock foe. "Heaven grant that it may be . . . not the latter, who is one of the most egregious triflers I know."

Evidently everyone was against Hancock but the people for in the election that was held Sept. 4, 1780, he collected 9,475 out of 10,383 votes cast. Bowdoin had only 888. In his native Braintree, Hancock prevailed by a margin of 95-11.

The inauguration was held on Oct. 25 with all the pomp and ceremony that the new governor loved so dearly.

The day began with the pealing of church bells and the roar of cannon. A committee from the General Court waited upon the governor-elect at his mansion to escort him to the state house. He rode in a chariot, wearing, it was reported, "a suit of crimson velvet, plain."

"I venture to offer myself, ready to comply and regularly attend to the duties of the department in which my country has been pleased to place me," he said, and some critics thought he was thinking ahead to the presidency of the United States.

Afterward, he took the oath of office and Secretary John Avery proclaimed him "His Excellency John Hancock Esq.,

John Hancock
Governor of the Massachusetts Commonwealth."

Cannon boomed out a salute from Fort Hill and from the ships in the bay as Gov. Hancock and members of the Senate, House and Council went to religious services at the Old Brick Meeting House and then repaired to Faneuil Hall for what was called an "elegant entertainment," including no less than 13 toasts to the new governor.

Samuel Adams, another Hancock foe, adopted a wait and see attitude on the chief executive.

"It is to be presumed that they (the voters) have been influenced to this choice by the pure motives of public affection," he wrote to his wife. "A due attention to the administration of government, I fancy, will soon determine whether they have acted with wisdom or not."

But Warren was adamant. He attributed Hancock's election to "balls, public and private entertainments, and feasts, more suitable to the effeminacy and ridiculous manners of Asiatic slavery, than to the hardy and sober manners of a New England public."

Hancock's first term in the governor's chair was undistinguished. For one thing, there was a war on, which occupied most men's thoughts. For another, his term lasted only seven months because the Constitution specified that the election be held on the first Monday in April and the results announced on the last Wednesday in May.

He advocated stricter laws "for the suppression of idleness, dissipation, extravagance, and all those vices that are peculiarly inimical to free republics" but indications are that he failed to live up to those strictures himself and it cost him the support of Sam Adams once again.

"I am afraid there is more pomp and parade than is consistent with those sober republican principles upon which the framers of it thought they had founded it," he wrote to the merchant John Scollay.

"Does it become us to lead the people to such public diversions as promote superfluity of dress and ornament when it is as much as they can bear to support the expense of clothing a naked army? Will vanity and levity ever be the stability of government?"

Apparently it was for Hancock, anyway. He was reelected governor in 1781 and, with one brief interruption, he held the post until his death in 1793.

QUINCY...a city of "firsts". GRANITE... a bank with a history of "firsts".

Originally "North Quincy Co-op" . . . Now Two Offices Serve North Quincy, Quincy Center and the South Shore.

The Granite Co-operative Bank is observing over a quarter century in Quincy marked by the steady growth and progress that are hallmarks of the American success story.

It opened in 1953 with only two employees and was located in the Old Regent Theatre building shared with the neighborhood branch of Crane Library. Now Granite looks back six years to its 20th birthday and points with pride at the assets which then were $12 million.

Now, on the eve of its 26th anniversary it boasts assets that have grown to over $24 million. This represents an increase of twelve million dollars in just six years.

The bank was originally known as the North Quincy Co-operative Bank. It immediately established a reputation as a "very friendly and neighborly place to do business."

One of those first two employees, now retired Treasurer and Executive Officer Mrs. Mary Holmes, attributes the bank's speedy rise to prominence within the banking community to its spirit of innovation... a spirit originating from its Board of Directors.

That spirit was evident from the beginning as Granite became the first bank in Quincy to open its doors at night. The Friday evening hours appealed at once to customers. Moreover, the bank was among the very first to do machine posting rather than hand posting, an early step towards computerization which made Granite sought out by other banking colleagues.

Granite recorded another popular first when the Quincy Center branch was opened in 1965, introducing Saturday hours. In addition, it was the first bank in Quincy to pay daily interest and to offer totally free checking.

"You name it, we did it first," comments Mrs. Holmes.

Under the helm of Mr. Bernard C. Cohen, President, and the Board of Directors chaired by Mr. Nissie Grossman, the bank has inspired loyalty throughout its history... both among staff and customers along with its obvious affinity for innovation.

Customers even brought in coffee cake for the morning break during those early years. Before her retirement in 1975, Mrs. Holmes had the pleasure of seeing the third generation of the same family turn to Granite Co-operative Bank for its financial needs... "you go where you're comfortable" as she says.

Mrs. Holmes elevation to the post of Treasurer and then to Executive Officer was another of Granite Co-operative's firsts. Indeed, Mrs. Holmes was also the first woman bank director in the Commonwealth.

Today the Treasurer is Barbara C. Lynch who first joined the bank when the Quincy Center branch opened in 1965. She replaced Mrs. Holmes as Treasurer ten years later.

Both women remark about the hospitable atmosphere engendered by the Board of Directors, one in which promotions are invariably made from among the staff.

Growth of the bank's plant has kept pace with the financial expansion. Ground was broken in the 20th anniversary year for Granite's new headquarters facility in North Quincy. It was opened in June of 1974.

As a member of the Co-operative banking community, Granite took pride in helping to make possible the construction of Schaefer Stadium, home of the New England Patriots and now of the North American Soccer League Tea Men. Co-operative banks keep a keen eye on community needs. When $7 million was necessary before construction could actually start on the stadium, Granite joined in the drive as the state's Co-operative banks came through.

Creativity, innovation, continuity... these qualities along with the unique loyalty of the staff and the directors have made it possible for a small neighborhood bank to take its place among the leaders in Co-operative banking.

That sense of the past has continued into the present and its link with the future is evidenced by the guiding wisdom of the Board of Directors as the bank makes its transition into a new quarter century.

Those current directors are: Nathan T. Belt, Henry G. Berry, Jr., Bernard C. Cohen, Richard C. Cohen, Sidney Dockser, Nissie Grossman, Thomas S. Grossman, John F. Hallisey, Richard J. Koch and Peter F. O'Connell. Honorary directors are Henry G. Berry, Sr., and Albert Dockser.

Customers recognize that sense of caring as they continue to go where "they are comfortable," drawn there by old-fashioned friendliness reminiscent of those early days and in the tradition of professionalism that has kept Granite a step ahead of the times all along the way.

Reflect Revolutionary Times But-- Little Red Farmhouses Were Probably Once Cream

The little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill where John and John Quincy Adams were born appear to be accurate reflections of their condition in Revolutionary times in structure only.

The U. S. National Parks Service, which took charge of the two cottages in April, 1979, is discovering new things about them daily as it strives to restore them to their appearance in 1807, the last year an Adams lived in them.

For one thing, they weren't painted red, probably a cream color, says Carole Perreault, architectural conservator from the North Atlantic Historic Preservation Center, a regional research arm of the USNPS.

Indeed, at least one of them was white at one time, as this passage from the memoirs of John Quincy Adams, dated Sept. 9, 1824, will attest:

"I took a ride of almost three miles with my father in his small carriage, called at Mr. Marston's and rode to the foot of Penn's Hill by the houses where my father and myself were born. That of his nativity has within the last year, at his request been painted white."

John Adams law office, in which most of the Massachusetts Constitution was drafted, probably looked different in 1779. For one thing, the ceiling, where the beams have been exposed since an earlier restoration in 1896, probably was plastered.

"There is no evidence that the beams were charred by smoke from the fireplace so they must have been covered," says Ms. Perreault. "Holes in the lathe lines in the beams were made by hand-wrought nails, which indicates the covering was there in pre-19th century."

The outside entry door at the corner of the law office probably was there in 1779, although it was not necessarily cut through the wall as an entrance to the office. It is there in a water color of the Birthplaces, done in 1822. But it is missing in photographs taken later in the 19th century.

"When the building was restored in the 1890's, they took the plaster out and found the door just as it is today," says

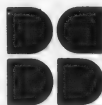

Ms. Perreault.

Indications are that the fireplace was there in 1779, but it probably was larger and of a different shape. The lintel is

THE PAST

In the special Historic Quincy edition of The Quincy Sun, published June 17, 1976, we presented a message which we felt was pertinent to the times. In the three years intervening, conditions have developed which seem to make that message even more pertinent today. For that reason we present again our thoughts stated at that time.

If the founding fathers could look upon us now, what wondrous changes they would see--witchcraft, perhaps they would think--because only magic could explain airplanes, space shuttles, automobiles, radio, TV, the myriad electronic and medical marvels and even the taken-for-granted comforts of the modern home.

We've come a long way in these 200 years--change has been rapid and seemingly phenomenal. There is no reason to think it will all stop now.

What wondrous sights will grace the eye one hundred--two hundred years hence!

But change, per se, need not always be good. It can bring increased benefits to mankind and it can bring woe and misery. Now, more than ever before we must guard and control our changes, seeking not just the whim and emotion of the moment, but the really meaningful change which truly bodes well for all living things, human kind, animal kind, and the precious products of the land and of the sea.

We, the human race, have the destiny of that race and of the world in our scientific and political control now. How wisely we respond to the needs, how much we are willing to sacrifice to attain those needs, will determine the path and the end results.

Can we respond? Will we respond?

probably the hand-hewn original but the hearth almost certainly has been rebuilt. The small bricks are not characteristic of the 18th century.

The John Quincy Adams Birthplace is the older of the two. There are indications that one Samuel Belcher was living there in 1663 in a one room structure with fireplace. It was expanded to its present size in 1716. During the 1896 restoration, a brick dated June 6, 1716, was discovered in the main part of the house.

The house was purchased by Deacon John Adams for £500 in 1744 and rented to Dr. Elisha Savil until 1761 when the Deacon's son John inherited it from his father and moved in. John Quincy Adams was born there Jan. 11, 1767.

John and his wife, Abigail, moved out and into the larger Mansion on Adams St. in 1788, leaving the cottage and its farm to tenants. But John Quincy Adams moved back into his birthplace in 1803 and stayed until 1807, just before he was named U.S. Minister to Russia. He was the last Adams to live there.

The John Adams Birthplace originally was the home of Joseph Penniman but its age is not known. A brick inscribed with the date 1681 was found during restoration in the 1890's but dated bricks are not regarded as indisputable evidence of age by the National Park Service.

Deacon John Adams purchased the house and seven acres of land from James Penniman in 1720 and it was in the southeast bedroom next to the Coast Road that the future president of the United States was born on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). The Deacon left it to his second son, Peter Boylston Adams, when he died in 1761.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650, and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49. They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the USNPS in 1979.

He called out the militia and the insurgents were dispersed.

But the constant struggle for financial stability cost him popularity. Hancock came out of retirement in the spring of 1787 and was elected governor by a decisive margin and Bowdoin returned to private life once again.

But one more public service remained.

He was chosen delegate from Boston to the Massachusetts convention that was to consider adoption of the Federal Constitution. It was ratified by a narrow vote and it may have been Bowdoin's plea that the alternative was anarchy that turned the tide.

He died on Nov. 6, 1790, leaving his name to Bowdoin College in Maine, which received its endowment from his son, James.

59 Years Of History And Progress In The 'City Of Presidents'

An occasion like this the Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial is not complete without a brief tracing of the Bank's development from that cold December 9, 1919 meeting when a handful of Fore River Shipyard men sought a banking charter, to the present day Presidential Cooperative Bank. On January 16, 1920, the charter was granted, and a month later, the bank opened for business in the shipyard itself.

As the bank grew, quarters were moved into the city on Hancock Street, over the present offices of the Burgin, Platter Insurance Company. Growth again dictated a move; this time to the South Shore National Bank Building on Chestnut Street, in 1947. And in 1965, the bank moved to modern, more spacious quarters on Granite Street, where we now celebrate our 59th birthday. From its beginning as a facility for shipworkers' savings at Fore River, the bank has grown steadily to the point where depositors now come from many parts of the country as well as the greater South Shore area.

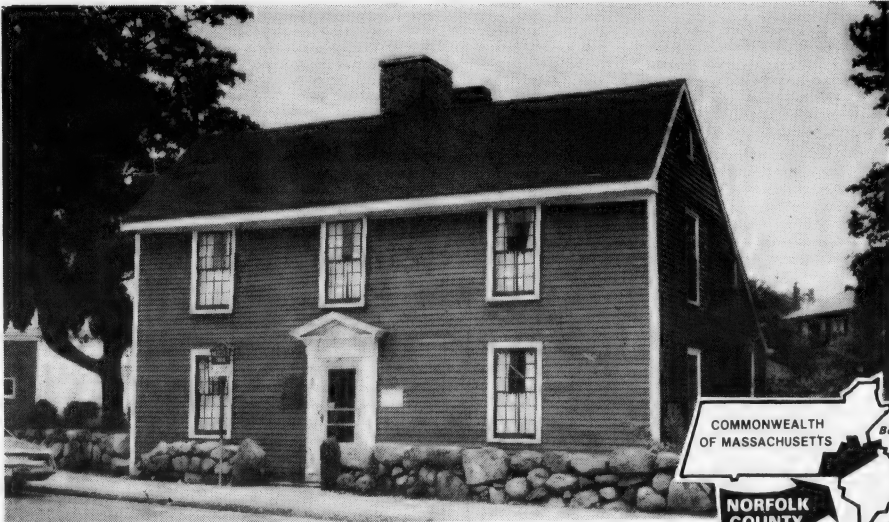

We are proud to be part of Quincy's past and of its future.

In September, 1779, the constitution which was to transform Massachusetts from colony to commonwealth, was drafted in the home of John Adams — the home where his son John Quincy Adams was born.

During the current 200th anniversary celebration, you'll be able to see the original document on display at the Adams' birthplace.

The drafting of the Massachusetts constitution is only one of the many things that have happened in Norfolk County.

Norfolk County is the home of three presidents: John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John F. Kennedy. All three birthplaces are on the Patriots Trail, which also includes Ben Franklin's books, the oldest frame house in the country, and the Coleman Map, the largest revolving globe in the world.

Preston.

The trial and the General Court left him weary. He moved back to Braintree in 1771 to enjoy "the air of my native spot . . . the fine breezes from the sea on one side and the rocky mountains of pine and savin on the other." Part of the time he spent taking the water at the mineral springs in Stafford, Conn. "Farewell, politics," he wrote in his diary.

But the situation in Boston was worsening and Adams found it difficult to stay away. He became involved in the growing controversy over Crown-granted salaries for governors and judges. He was elected to the Governor's Council in May, 1773, but the governor vetoed the choice. He was named a delegate to the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia in 1774.

For the next 26 years as revolutionary, legislator, diplomat and statesman, John Adams was a man "on call" by his state and country during their most critical formative years.

As a member of the Continental Congress, it was he who proposed "the modest and virtuous, the amiable, generous and brave George Washington" as commander-in-chief, and he helped to write the resolutions of May 10, 1776, that led up to the Declaration of Independence.

The Congress dispatched him to Paris in 1778 to help negotiate a commercial and military alliance with France and, 17 months later, he arrived back home in Braintree just in time to be chosen a delegate to the Massachusetts Constitutional Convention. He wound up writing the whole first draft of the Constitution himself.

Adams had barely finished that assigned task when Congress sent him abroad again in November, 1779. This time he was gone for nine years, negotiating loans from the Dutch that saved the credit of the United States, negotiating a treaty of peace with Mother Britain and the last four of those years as minister to London. Abigail joined him in 1784.

It followed that immediately upon his return to the United States in 1789, Adams was elected the first vice president, serving under George Washington. It was a post that he despised for its inactivity.

"My country," he wrote, "has in its wisdom contrived for me the most insignificant office that was the invention of man."

Washington, the all but unanimous choice, retired from the presidency in 1796 and Adams was elected to replace him, but not without a fight as the Federalist party of Adams and Alexander Hamilton split and the Democratic-Republicans of Thomas Jefferson surged to the fore. He barely edged Jefferson, 71-68, in electoral votes.

Adams' four-year term as President was marked by intra-party strife. Perhaps his highest achievement was keeping the peace with revolutionary and belligerent France, with whom a treaty was concluded in the last year of his administration. But it was not enough to save John Adams.

He lost the presidency to Jefferson in a rematch in 1800 by eight electoral votes, 73-65. This time he really was through with politics. He retired to write and farm on his estate, Peacefield, in Quincy, where he died July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Sam Adams was elected to the House of Representatives that same year (1765) and it gave him a larger stage from which to dispense his revolutionary doctrine. Emissaries from the Caucus Club fanned out across the colony, preaching passive resistance to the Stamp Act and inveighing against the presence of British troops in Boston.

Again, it was his articles in the Gazette that stoked the fires for the Boston Massacre in which the British troops were provoked into firing into a crowd, killing five. Strangely, while Sam Adams helped to incite the incident, his young cousin, John Adams, the lawyer from Braintree, defended the British soldiers from a murder charge.

By 1772, Parliament had repealed most of the repressive measures and radicalism was on the wane in Boston. Sam Adams barely held his seat in the House in the election. As one observer put it, "there was not enough British tyranny left to keep active opposition alive." If there were no issues then, of course, it was necessary to create some.

In May, 1773, Parliament placed a three penny duty on tea imported into the colonies, a rather innocuous measure. In November, three tea ships arrived in Boston Harbor. The radicals refused to let the tea be landed. Gov. Hutchinson refused to send it back. On the night of Dec. 16, at a signal from Adams, some 50 men disguised as Indians, seized the ships and threw 342 chests of tea into the harbor.

Six months later, as a man sent by the Royal governor, Gen. Thomas Gage, waited outside the locked door to dissolve the General Court, it was voted to send Sam Adams, cousin John, James Bowdoin, Thomas Cushing and Robert Treat Paine, as delegates to the first Continental Congress. The door was locked because Sam had the key in his pocket.

The Congress, meeting in Philadelphia, was not really ready for Sam Adams and the radicals from the Massachusetts Bay. Nor were they prepared for Patrick Henry and the men of Virginia. One delegate from Maryland complained that "Adams with his crew, and the haughty sultans of the South, juggled the whole conclave of the delegates."

But the fire in Sam Adams was burning low. He withdrew from the Congress in 1781 and returned to Boston. But it was not the same. There were new leaders, new ideas, new issues. He broke with his old ally, John Hancock, and the latter's election as the first governor was a deep disappointment to him. The people, he wrote to his friend, James Warren, were deceived "with false appearance for the moment."

He ran for lieutenant governor in 1788 but the old magic wasn't there. He finished a poor third behind Benjamin Lincoln and Warren. He ran for Congress that same year and lost to the Young Turk, Fisher Ames of Dedham.

Finally, he was elected lieutenant governor under Hancock in 1789 and, when Hancock died in 1793, he succeeded him. By this time, the American political system was old enough to split up into parties, and he was elected governor in 1794 as a Democrat.

He declined to run again in 1797 and, on Oct. 2, 1803, Sam Adams died in quiet retirement in his native Boston.

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR

ARTHUR H. TOBIN

September 6, 1979

Dear Friends:

To me, the Constitution "coming home" and the four day celebration itself marks the start of a new awakening of the historical value of the City of Presidents. This new beginning has happened because of the generous, unselfish support of members of the business and banking community who are helping to turn this City around.

As Mayor, I would like to express my sincere appreciation to those members of the business and banking community that gave their generous support to the City of Quincy Constitution Bicentennial Celebration. Without their community spirit and generosity, this celebration would never have been possible.

I would also like to express my sincere appreciation to the members of the City of Quincy Constitution Bicentennial Celebration Committee, all elected and appointed City officials, my staff, City Department Heads and City employees, for their many hours of hard work in preparing this celebration.

Sincerely,

Arthur H. Tobin
Mayor

A Constitution Is Born In Quincy

Committee of Thirty submitted its report to the second session of the convention in Cambridge on Oct. 28, 1779. The report was read and printed copies distributed.

John Adams attended the second session of the convention but left for France the day after it ended to join Benjamin Franklin in negotiating a treaty of peace. The efforts of the second session were devoted entirely to a discussion of the Declaration of Rights. A third session, which met in January, 1780, discussed the organization of the new government. Copies of the proposed constitution were sent to every town where special town meetings were to be called to discuss the document, paragraph by paragraph. A fourth session of the convention declared the constitution formally adopted on June 15, 1780.

John Adams' Constitutional Proposals

Professor Samuel Eliot Morison contends that in 1779 John Adams "was undoubtedly the greatest expert on constitutions in America, if not in the world. . . ." For 20 years he had made a study of constitutions and of political theory. During these years he had practiced law, served in the General Court and in the Continental Congress. Thus he had practical political experience as well as theoretical knowledge. Adams was recognized as a student of history and politics as well as an authority on constitutional law in colonies other than Massachusetts.

In January, 1776, George Wythe of Virginia asked Adams for his suggestions on how a colony could "get out of the old government and into a new one." Adams replied in a letter, which he later permitted to be published anonymously: "Thoughts on Government: Applicable to the Present State of the American Colonies." In the same month, the delegates to the Continental Congress from North Carolina were authorized by the colonial legislature "to apply to Mr. Adams for his views of the nature of the government it would be proper to form, in case of a final dissolution of the authority of the Crown." In response to this request, John Adams wrote a letter to John Penn including ideas expressed in "Thoughts on Government" but amplified in some respects so that both documents should be read to understand the political system proposed by the author. Three years later Adams was invited to incorporate his "thoughts" into a practical model for his own Massachusetts.

Following a brief preamble, there are two main divisions of the Constitution drafted by Adams and adopted in 1780. "A Declaration of the Rights of the Inhabitants of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts" and "The Frame of Government." Massachusetts owes its designation as a Commonwealth to John Adams, who followed the example of Virginia in the matter. From the signing of the Declaration of Independence until the Constitution was written, the official title had been the "State of Massachusetts Bay." "Commonwealth" was the translation of the Latin "res publica," which referred to things under Roman law, owned by no one, but subject to public use.

John Adams' statement of man's rights is the distillation of the wisdom and experience of men through many centuries. Adams took the abstract ideas of natural rights, which go back before Christianity to Judaism and Greek civilization, and applied them in pithy statements of practical principles which are as useful today as they were two centuries ago. The following excerpts from the Massachusetts Constitution are engraved on the panels of Constitution Monument on Constitution Common:

ARTICLE I. All men are born free and equal, and have certain natural, essential, and unalienable rights; among which may be reckoned the right of enjoying and defending their Lives and Liberties; that of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, in fine, that of seeking and obtaining their safety and happiness.

ARTICLE II. No subject shall be hurt, molested, or restrained, in his person, liberty, or Estate, for worshipping God in the manner and season most agreeable to the Dictates of his own conscience, or for his religious profession or sentiments. . . .

ARTICLE IV. The people of this Commonwealth have the sole and exclusive right of governing themselves, as a free, sovereign, and independent State;

ARTICLE VII. Government is instituted for the common good; for the protection, safety, prosperity and happiness of the people; and not for the profit, Honor, or private interest of any one man, family or Class of men;

ARTICLE X. Each individual of the society has a right to be protected by it in the enjoyment of his life, Liberty and property, according to standing Laws.

ARTICLE XII. No subject shall be held to answer for any Crimes or offence, until the same is fully and plainly, substantially and formally, described to him; or be Compelled to accuse, or furnish evidence against himself.

ARTICLE XXIX. It is the right of every Citizen to be tried by judges as free, impartial and independent as the lot of humanity will admit.

ARTICLE XXX. In the government of this Commonwealth, the legislative department shall never exercise the executive and judicial powers, or either of them. The executive shall never exercise the legislative and judicial powers, or either of them: The judicial shall never exercise the legislative and executive powers, or either of them: to the end it may be a government of laws and not of men.

John Adams was not a staunch believer in government by the people, rather he advocated government for the people, or "mixt government" as he called it. Adams considered three possible principles of government: rule by one, rule by a few, or rule by the many. Each of these principles had strengths but also weaknesses and so Adams' proposal called for a mixture of all three of these elements.

The "Frame of Government" incorporated the democratic principle in the House of Representatives and in annual elections. On the other extreme, he proposed giving the governor more power in Massachusetts than that official exercised in any other state. The aristocratic principle was incorporated in the Senate where senators must meet high property qualifications. An independent judiciary insured that the constitution would be observed and that the rights of the people guaranteed. A unique feature of the Constitution provided that any citizen may present a petition for legislation. All petitions are referred to standing committees; public hearings are held on nearly all bills; and all bills are reported out of committee.

The Constitution of Massachusetts has virtues that were later included in the Federal Constitution. It outlines a workable structure of government with separation of powers which serve as checks upon one another. It establishes basic principles to guide legislators and judges in guaranteeing the rights of the citizens while providing the services for which citizens look to their government. Some states have tried to provide for every eventuality in their constitution rather than by legislation and judicial process with the result that the constitution was long and cumbersome and quickly became outdated. Because of the insight and the foresight of its author, the Massachusetts Constitution retains its vitality after 200 years. It was with justifiable pride that John Adams wrote:

"I made a Constitution for Massachusetts which finally made the Constitution of the United States. . . ."

BRACE OF ADAMSES'

Retired Royal Gov. William Shirley coined the phrase "this brace of Adamses," by which Samuel and John Adams were known whenever they worked together.

Shirley, living in retirement in Roxbury, was told that Thomas Cushing, John Hancock, John Adams and Samuel Adams occupied the Boston seat in the General Court.

"Mr. Cushing I know and Mr. Hancock I know but where the devil this brace of Adamses came from, I know not," said Shirley, who left office in 1756.

AS MUCH A PART OF QUINCY AS JOHN HANCOCK

Since our namesake was the first Governor of this state, it's fitting that we should congratulate the city of Quincy on being the temporary home of the Massachusetts Constitution.

Hancock Bank . . . named after our first Governor, president of the Continental Congress, the first signature on the Declaration of Independence and one of Quincy's most celebrated citizens. As the city of Quincy grows and prospers, so does the Hancock Bank.

We have 16 branch offices (five in Quincy) and offer a full range of banking services . . . checking, savings and NOW accounts plus loans to businesses and individuals. Come into any of our branches and let us tell you more about the bank that named itself after John Hancock.

In The Beginning

In the early months of 1836, many of Quincy's merchants gathered in Fowle's Tavern to lay the foundation of a commercial banking enterprise in a town of only three thousand inhabitants - mostly farmers, shipbuilders and granite cutters.

Andrew Jackson had just been elected president of the United States at the height of the Young Republic's Federal Period. John Quincy Adams's presidential term was over and he was then serving as a congressman for Massachusetts. New England was still the maritime center of America, with the ports of Salem and Boston doing a booming business. In February of that year, Jim Bowie and Davey Crockett had died at the Alamo, and by the time the new bank had received its charter to open its doors in March, New England volunteers to fight Santa Ana were struggling back to their homes - the battle was over before they could get to Texas. By the time the last of them returned, the town had its new enterprise - The Quincy Stone Bank. Curiously, it was the first in the United States to capitalize through public subscription of its stock. More than two hundred families came up with the one hundred thousand dollars required by the General Court for a charter.

Having no building for its quarters the bank rented the front room of Elisha Turner's house on Hancock Street for its first "banking rooms". For 143 years and three bank buildings, the home of the South Shore Bank has remained within 200 yards of its first - all on Hancock Street.

But everything else has changed. Then the bank printed its own money, a practice frowned upon today. Then there were three employees and one office. Now there are over 600 employees and thirty-four offices located in Norfolk County, five of which are located throughout the Quincy area. In 1836, whale oil fueled the lamps at Turner's house, while electricity which today powers the bank's computers was the plaything of primitive scientists.

Since the start of the bank, a great deal of time has passed and neither the nation nor the bank bear much resemblance to the days of 1836. Of utmost importance, however, one thing has not changed - the bank's continuing dedication to the progress and development of the communities it serves.

Raise Jerry's Kids

It's 8 p.m. Monday, Labor Day, and Ken Runge is standing, half asleep, in the window of The Quincy Sun office scooping money out of the fishbowl. Or, trying to.

John Fantucchio is beside him, tired, digging into the bowl, too. Peter Gacicia is lugging sacks of the stuff—pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, dollars, $10 bills, checks, etc. to Rita Kelleher and Tom McDonald who are rolling it and stacking it, before its trip to night deposit at the Hancock Bank.

The reason they are scooping it and lugging it is that the fishbowl is too heavy to lift from the window. There's over $9,000 in it. -- Mostly hundreds and hundreds of pounds of coins.

The fishbowl symbolizes what The Quincy Sun based Quincy-South Shore pledge center did this Labor Day weekend for Jerry's Kids.

And it again proves, beyond a doubt that there are still a lot of nice people in this cynical old world and a lot of them live right here in Good Reason To Smile . . .

THERE WAS PLENTY to smile about for Dick Koch, Ken Runge, Peter Gacicia, Norma Gacicia, Henry Bosworth and Agnes Costello at the end of the long Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon. Figures on the tote board at The Quincy Sun based Quincy-South Shore Pledge Center shows $40,241 in pledges and $8,938 in the bowl. But these figures were later revised to $42,272 in pledges and $9,120 for the fishbowl as money continued to come in. This, plus $46,128 raised in pre-telethon activities brought the total Quincy-South Shore figure to $97,615. This is $20,390 more than last year.

3-Candidate Primary

Only 15% Voter Turnout Forecast

By TOM HENSHAW

The quietest preliminary election campaign in 39 years comes to an end Tuesday, Sept. 11, when only a handful of Quincy's 47,205 registered voters are expected to go to the polls.

The lone contest on the ballot pits Mayor Arthur H. Tobin against two challengers, Abe M. Irkin and Michael Jovanovic, for two places in the general election, Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Tobin is seeking a second term against Irkin, a hospital social worker who ran for governor as a write-in candidate in 1978, and Jovanovic, a professor who garnered 211 votes in his last run for mayor in 1975.

Lack of public interest in the preliminary election is such that veteran City Clerk John Gillis predicts a 15 per cent turnout at the polls and an election wrap-up by 9:30 p.m.

There will be eight other races on the November ballot but candidates are so scarce that preliminary voter screening was not necessary to trim the fields, except that for mayor.

Gillis estimates that the one-race election will cost the city $35,000, mostly in payments to election workers who will have to man the polls in all the city's 39 precincts. The only comparable election in recent years in Quincy was in 1940 when no preliminary balloting was held because of the death of candidates.

But in those days, the mayor, three councillors at large and two members of the school committee were elected in even years while ward councillors and other school committeemen were chosen in odd years.

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin was unopposed in the 1940 election, the only time that has happened in Quincy's 90 years as a city.

A more exciting election is promised for Nov. 6, when former Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia seeks to return to public life as a councillor at large in a five-man race.

His opponents in the November race will be incumbents John J. Quinn and Francis X. McCauley as well as Michael E. Faherty and Richard J. Koch Jr. Three are to be elected.

Since there will be no preliminary election in that race, it will be difficult to assess the strengths of LaRaia, once a strong vote-getter, and Koch, bearer of an old political name in Quincy.

Strike Possible

Angry Teachers Plan Protests

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Contract problems with the city's employees seem to be escalating from discontent to open revolt, with public school teachers leading the way.

Leaders of the Quincy Education Association met with over 1000 teachers at the Strand Theater Tuesday morning to plan demonstrations during this week's Constitution Bicentennial and hinted at a possible strike and a protest vote in this fall's elections.

"No progress was made," reported Robert Garner, QEA president after a Tuesday afternoon negotiating session.

When asked when the teacher would contemplate a strike, he said "I don't care to speculate on that right now."

On other labor fronts, unions representing about 4,000 city employees plan a strategy meeting tonight (Thursday) at the George F. Bryan Post, 24 Broad St., Quincy Center. City employees at the mass meeting will reportedly discuss a variety of actions, including a strike, a protest vote in the elections and a boycott of downtown merchants.

The QEA, which represents the city's teachers, is not yet asking the teachers to make a decision on whether or not to strike. But, it could come to that if negotiations don't take a turn for the better, according to Mary Curtin, chairwoman of the QEA negotiating committee.

During the meeting at the State Constitution Arrives Today For 4-Day Visit

The final article in the Massachusetts Constitution that was drafted in 1779 specified that it "shall be enrolled on parchment and deposited in the secretary's office, and be a part of the laws of the land."

This is the copy that is being put on display today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in a corner room of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace, the law office where in 1779 John and Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin drafted the historic document.

That draft, which was used by the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge as a working copy, is believed to have been thrown away when it was no longer needed.

The original parchment copy of the Constitution is kept in a fire proof box inside a steel cabinet in a vault two levels below the State Archives Museum in the State House, according to Dr. R. Nicholas Olsberg, the archivist.

Environmental conditions in the vault are controlled at a temperature of 68 degrees or under and a humidity index of 50 per cent or less. Temperature and humidity readings are taken every morning.

Nevertheless, the Constitution is in extremely fragile condition

Tobin, O'Neill To Confer

Historical Society Joins Plea For Shipyard Work

William A. O'Connell, president of the Quincy Historical Society, added his voice this week to the general plea to President Carter for Navy work to keep the General Dynamics Quincy shipyard open. Meanwhile, Mayor Arthur H. Tobin was to leave this morning (Thursday) for a 2 p.m. meeting in the office of House Speaker

Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. on the future of the shipyard.

The yard is faced with the loss of some 4,300 of its 4,800 jobs and a possible shutdown of the facility when the last of 10 liquefied natural gas (LNG) tankers is finished next August.

In a letter to President Carter, O'Connell said the Historical Society is "worried about the lack of U. S. Naval contracts for the Quincy Shipbuilding Division of General Dynamics."

"To a major extent, as the health of this local industry is maintained, so goes the economy of our area."

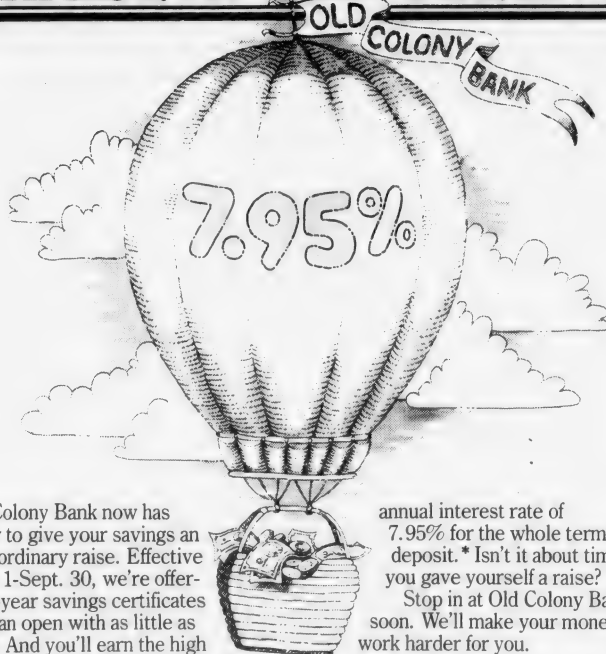

"Historically, ours is a shipbuilding community with a tradition of work skills scarcely surpassed elsewhere."

"We are very sure that our U.S. government must be deeply concerned with the possibility of losing the services of an industry that has contributed so much to the health and security of this nation."

"One of the prime objectives of a historical society is to observe and to record our living present which, even now, becomes our historic past."

"Mr. President, we respectfully request your intercession in behalf of a proud and responsible shipbuilding society."

City Loses Tax Case To State Street South

The Quincy tax rate for 1980, which has yet to be set, went up $4.66 this week.

Mayor Tobin said he has been notified that the city has lost the $1.3 million "Tregor decision" tax case brought by State Street South before the State Appellate Tax Board.

Under the Tregor decision handed down by the State Supreme Court a municipality cannot assess commercial or industrial property at a higher percentage than the lowest placed on residential property.

In Quincy, the lowest assessment on residential property is 18.7 per cent, according to Assessor Chairman John Comer, while State Street South was assessed at 30 per cent.

"We are terribly concerned about the ripple effect of this decision," said Tobin. "If everybody says, 'What the hell, State Street won. Let's pursue it ...' then we're in a very sensitive area."

"The assessors have informed me that if other property owners pursue the same course of action, with the number of cases pending against the city, we could be facing a potential tax rate increase of $50."

"With this one decision we are talking about another $4.66 on the tax rate."

Comer said a previous board of assessors raised the valuation of State Street South property more than $1 million.

"It didn't hold up," he said. "State Street got back that $1 million plus another $1.3 million under the Tregor ruling. They have been living with the higher valuation and they have been paying it but now value has been pushed back."

Tobin said the case was tried before the Appellate Tax Board last Friday and they had no recourse but to hand down a "Tregor decision."

Tobin Calls Union Rally '3-Ring Circus'

One person unlikely to attend the city employees' rally Thursday night is Mayor Arthur Tobin.

While he's less than thrilled about the idea behind the rally, the manner in which it was scheduled has him up in arms.

John Keefe, chief negotiator for the Hospital, Library and Public Employees union "has turned a very sensitive issue into a three-ring circus and I will not be part of his zoo antics," Tobin said Tuesday.

The rally is scheduled for the George F. Bryan VFW Post, at 24 Broad St., Quincy Center at 8 p.m. tonight (Thursday).

Tobin will be in Washington, D.C. that day to attend the debriefing session on the General Dynamics shipyard's recent loss of a cable ship contract. He'll fly back to Quincy that day to take part in the city's Constitution Bicentennial celebration.

"I have a busy schedule that day," Tobin said, and there lies the cause of his anger.

"Thursday, Aug. 30, I got a letter from Keefe, hand delivered, inviting me to the mass rally. On Aug. 27, at a news conference, I told the press I would be in Washington with Brian Donnelly (at the General Dynamics meeting).

"Keefe sends a letter to me three days after I make that announcement, without the common decency and courtesy to the office of the mayor to ascertain my itinerary, my schedule.

"I hand delivered a letter back to him on Aug. 30, informing him of the conflict in my schedule. Then he goes to the press and says, 'Well, we'll wait until he shows up.'"

"When I first received the letter, I took it as a cordial invitation. I thought he would accept my explanation. But within minutes of my receiving that letter, another city employee walked into my office and showed me a pre-printed poster: 'Come meet the mayor at our rally.'"

"This was all pre-planned by John Keefe to turn this very serious issue into a three-ring circus," Tobin said.

"John Keefe is not running the mayor's office and he's not going to degrade the mayor's office. He's not going to treat my office the way he's handling this problem with the city employees," Tobin said.

How has Keefe been handling the problem?

"Mr. John Keefe is leading the rank and file union people astray. All he is doing is protecting his high salary and his expense account," Tobin claimed.

"He is leading this massive union demonstration into the biggest layoff and job loss in the history of this city. There is no way the taxpayers of this city can withstand a huge, whopping tax increase," the mayor said.

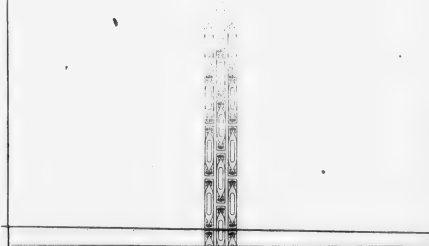

"This administration is doing more for the rank and file employees because we're keeping people employed," he added.

Tobin seemed baffled by Quincy Education Association President Robert Garner's description of him as "intransigent" at a Tuesday morning meeting with teachers.

"That's absolutely not so. I talked to school officials this morning and it's the union that won't budge an inch," he said.

Tobin has met with representatives of the teachers' union and describes the discussions as "cordial".

"It was a friendly meeting," he said.

$35,000 BALLOT ---Only one race is on this ballot that will be given out at Quincy's 39 polling places for the preliminary election Tuesday and City Clerk John Gillis estimates that it will cost $35,000 to service an expected 7,000 voters, or about $5 a vote.

Strand Theater, she was purposely vague about the QEA's plans for the bicentennial weekend, saying "we don't want to tip off what we're going to do."

But, she said, 25 friends and relatives of teachers will be recruited for "sign displays" at some of the bicentennial events Thursday and Friday. She also expects "a very large turnout" of teachers during Sunday's parade, when they will display signs along the route giving their point of view.

The teachers will soon be forming a political action group, she said, "independent of the QEA but controlled by QEA members." The group could control as many as 3000 votes, including the teachers, and their friends and families, she said.

The first target of this group will probably be Patricia Toland, vice-chairwoman of the School Committee and a member of the committee's negotiating team. Mrs. Toland is considered the most hardline member of that team, Mrs. Curtin said.

She urged the teacher to "let her (Toland) know we do not like her position."

"I suppose I should take that as a compliment," Mrs. Toland said when informed of the remarks. But, she added, she feels she is representing the wishes of The School Committee and the community as a whole.

"I know a lot of teachers, they're a good group," Mrs. Toland said. "But times are tough."

A variety of circumstances - inflation, Governor King's tax cap, poor relations with "an intransigent mayor" and School Committee have created "a crisis of monumental proportions," Garner told the QEA Tuesday.

The city's elected leaders, he said, "are using you as a scapegoat for the problem of runaway inflation."

"Your elected officials are smart enough to know that denying you a salary increase, cutting your retirement pension and making you work longer hours isn't going to make a gallon of gas cost less," Garner said. "But you're an easier target than the oil companies."

Garner ended the mass meeting on an ominous note by introducing Margaret O'Brien of the Massachusetts Teachers Association. Garner noted, she helped organize last year's Somerville teachers strike.

"We hope we won't have to ask for her help," he said.

$341,931 Federal Grant For 'Earn-It'

Quincy District Court's 'Earn-It' program has been awarded a $341,431 federal grant, according to Congressman Brian Donnelly.

'Earn-It', instituted by Presiding Judge Albert Kramer, allows juvenile offenders to repay the victims of their crimes with their services in lieu of sentencing.

The grant will cover salaries over about 20 months of 11 court staffers who work full time on 'Earn-It'.

The program will deal with about 320 youths during the term of the grant, which runs from July 1, 1979 to March 11, 1981, according to Donnelly.

The grant was awarded by the Department of Justice, through its Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

The Issues:

Hours, Layoffs, Pay Raises Hold Up Teachers' Contract

Persons on each side of the fence report that the teachers' contract is being held up by disagreements on layoffs, hours and pay raises.

Mary Curtin, chairwoman of the Quincy Educational Association's negotiating committee, told over 1000 teachers Tuesday morning that those three points were at the heart of the contract squabble. The school committee negotiators have shown "no flexibility on the major issues," she said.

Patricia Toland, vice-chairwoman of the School Committee, confirmed that those problems were the major points of disagreement, but said she could not discuss details of the negotiations.

"We're apart at the moment," Mrs. Toland said before Tuesday afternoon's session. "I don't know how much closer we'll get today."

Mrs. Toland has insisted that teachers work an extra 45 minutes each day - 15 before school and 30 after without extra pay, Mrs. Curtin said.

The QEA's viewpoint, Mrs. Curtin said is "if you want us to work, and it's that important, pay us."

Mrs. Toland, on the other hand, "has insisted with a fury that we will work that extra time and she will not pay," Mrs. Curtin said.

Teachers' pay raises are the second major bone of contention, Mrs. Curtin said. The school committee's original proposal was for a total eight percent raise spread over three years - three percent in each of the first two and two percent in the third.

"We told them we would accept it if it (the eight-percent raise) was all in one year," Mrs. Curtin said.

That original offer has since been amended to a 12-percent raise over three years (four in each year), eight percent over two years (four percent each year) and nine percent over two years (four percent in the first year and five in the second.)

Mrs. Curtin said she told the school committee negotiators she would recommend that the teachers accept the extra 45 minutes if they received a 14-percent pay raise spread over two years.

The final major hangup is the method in which the school department will conduct teacher layoffs in the future. Because of declining enrollments expected in the 1980's, layoffs will probably be an annual event.

The QEA favor layoffs in reverse order of seniority the so-called "last hired-first fired" method. The school committee reportedly favors layoffs on the basis of competence with a yet-to-be-determined system for deciding which of the less competent teachers should be let go.

A seniority system, Mrs. Curtin said, would be "fair, objective and not subject to abuse."

Negotiations are now "at a critical point - there is not much room for maneuvering on either side," Mrs. Curtin told the teachers.

The QEA entered the negotiations with 40 proposed changes in the basic contract, Mrs. Curtin said. Half of them have since been dropped, she said.

The school department started out with 22 items and all of them have been eliminated but eight.

Based on those facts alone, she said, "it would appear that a lot of progress has been made. To a certain extent that's true."

"We're down to the items we feel we can't cut very much," she added.

A Lot Of Nice People Raise $51,392 For Jerry's Kids

Quincy and around the South Shore.

The evidence:

The Quincy-South Shore pledge center racked up $42,272 in pledges over the weekend plus the $9,120 in the fishbowl.

In addition to that, the Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Telethon Committee raised another $46,228 in cold cash in pre-telethon events.

That's $97,615 to help fight muscular dystrophy - one of the cruellest of all diseases to strike children.

That's some $20,390 more than the committee and pledge center raised last year.

And, more money is still coming in from the pre-telethon events. We could hit $100,000 this year.

The three-year total for the committee and pledge center now is $238,478.

We're proud of that figure. But more important, it's a tribute to YOU -- the people of Quincy and the South Shore. You're the ones who make it possible.

Several thousand of you, in fact. We'll never be able to remember everyone. But many we can. People like:

Norma and Peter Gacicia, Ken Runge, Agnes Costello and Brian Donovan, of the Civil Air Patrol, who spent 24 hours here. And Norma, Peter and Ken are still here after 10 p.m. -- so make that 27 hours... Mayor Tobin.

Dick Koch, another old faithful who gives you his all, all the time... Joe Brett who worked on the phones and donated $25... Mrs. Violet Devlin of Granite Place who made the very first pledge before the telethon even started. It was for $5. She's a double amputee... James Cappellano of Quincy who pledged $100 from Milton Hospital--where he's a patient... George Parker of the Yellow Cab Co. of Quincy who came by: with two checks: $500 from the company and $200 from himself... Mrs. Ann Conklin of the Robin House Nursing Home who pledged $5 in behalf of her two children, 12 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren... The Jones Children of Appleton St., North Quincy who brought in $155... Simon Fireman who again came through with a $100 pledge... Ronald Seaman of Southern Artery, Quincy, who gave $1,000... Richard O'Brien Jr., who was in seven or eight times with his cannister, dumping $112 into the fishbowl... The Riccatones -- who not only played outside the pledge center but collected $50 or $60 from those who stopped to listen... That's Paul and Joe Ricca, Angelo Paglioca and Wally Farrell... Baron Hugo, Ken Lodge and Bill Meleski who also entertained. And who'll ever forget Baron and Ken Lodge dancing through the pledge center playing "Happy Days Are Here Again" when we went over the top!!! George Tobin, father of Mayor Arthur Tobin, donated jars of pennies he had saved, just for this telethon... WJDA's Win Bettinson and Roy Lind whose live coverage played a major role in the spectacular fishbowl total. And Win, in between broadcasts, grabbing a phone and taking pledges when things got real busy... JoAnn Runge, Debbie McGovern and Barbara Gussman who as Mickey and Minnie Mouse and Donald Duck collected over $372 outside The Sun office... Karen Runge who sold popcorn and helped count the cannister money. Fr. William McCarthy, pastor St. John's Church who donated $1,000 and the use of a pop corn machine and also answered phones... John Poreca of Vesco Vending Co. who for the second year donated a microwave oven for a prize to help bring money to the fishbowl. His wife, Joan, and daughter, Tessie came down to answer phones... Mario Salvatore of the Sons of Italy who spent his birthday working at the pledge center, along with lodge members John Fantucchio, the fastest tabulator in the east... Mimmo D'Arcangelo, John Marella, Jim Mastrantonio, Jack Brown, Eddie Pellegrini, Sebastian Papagno. The lodge donated $2,000. Leo Nunnari, John MacPherson, of the Elks whose lodge contributed $1,750... Joe Sullivan and Vera Sullivan who helped get the thousands of pledge envelopes into the mail and fast... Charlie Alongi, who chaired the Swimathon that raised over $5,000 worked at the pledge center... Leo Kelly who co-chaired the softball doubleheader that raised approximately $1,000 also worked at the pledge center... Alfred Archibald, chairman of the board of the South Boston Savings Bank called in a pledge of $100... Audrey Tenneman of North Weymouth who pledged $5 and challenged all mothers with healthy children to do the same... Bill and Jackie Monahan and Herb and Anne d'entremont who answered phones for the third straight year... Others who worked the phones or helped out in other jobs like: Fire Chief Edward Barry... Dan and Sharyn Raymond... Jack Lydon... Bea Lindewall... Marion Ricca... Joan Picard... Marilyn Neston... Aiciia Coletti... Dave Rowell... Joanne Condon... Linda Trubiano... Walter Mason... Abe Itkin... Robert

I could fill a whole newspaper with names of those who helped, but I just can't remember them all. There were too many and my mind is getting blurry.

It sure was a long holiday weekend! Somebody said holiday?

I'm getting punchy. I am punchy. We're all punchy. But what a wonderful feeling. Imagine: over $97,000 to help Jerry's Kids.

Thank You!

Bible Theme At Bethany Congregational

"Through the Bible In A Year" will be the theme for worship and Christian education at Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center, starting on Rally Day, Sunday.

Nine months of weekly readings in Old and New Testaments will be based on a plan developed 20 years ago by the Rev. John D. Banks, minister of the church. The study guides written by the pastor have been printed by Whittemore Associates and may be used as a correspondence course by participants.

Hymns, anthems and sermons are related to each week's readings, and church school pupils will have lesson materials and home study aids on the same themes.

The Rally Sunday service at 10 a.m. will be followed by a picnic on the church grounds. This will conclude in time for church families to see the parade celebrating the Bicentennial of the Constitution of Massachusetts.

Board Grants Gasoline Storage Increases

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Three Quincy businesses were granted requests to store a total of 22,000 additional gallons of gasoline on their premises as the Quincy Licensing Board resumed its hearings Tuesday following a summer recess.

The businesses are General Dynamics Corp., 97 East Howard St., which requested 6,000 additional gallons; George W. Prescott Publishing Co., Folsom St., 10,000 gallons; and Sun Oil Co. of Pennsylvania, for a Sunoco station at 325-329 Hancock St., 6,000 gallons.

All three businesses intended to store lead free gasoline which John A. Hastings, of Sun Oil, said is approaching 50% of the overall gasoline demand.

He said that the Hancock St. Sunoco station which can now store 19,100 gallons of gasoline, will offer two grades of lead free gasoline by the first of the year.

Thomas F. Ryan, assistant general counsel for General Dynamics, said that his company's additional gasoline would be stored underground in the vicinity of the present tank on East Howard St.

Paul W. DeLorey, of the Patriot Ledger, said that the publishing company's additional gasoline would also be stored underground, and would be used for trucks and cars.

All gasoline storage is subject to the requirements of the Quincy Fire Department.

In a similar request, Raymond Kirpa, of Old Colony Crushed Stone and Construction Co., Inc., 26 Vernon St., requested a permit to store 10,000 gallons of No. 2 heating oil above ground in addition to the present storage.

The request was continued for two weeks.

A request from Vissarion Zaras of Whitman, and Anthanasios Mettas, of Brockton, for a common victualer license for Newport Sub (formerly Ann's Sub Sandwich Shop), 299 Newport Ave., was held in abeyance.

It was learned during the hearing that terms of the original license may have been violated and present owner John S. Isaac, of Quincy, will be notified to appear Sept. 18, to show cause why the license should not be revoked.

Following some neighborhood input, a request from Robert and Patricia Crosby for expansion of a garage and auto repair shop at 487-501 Hancock St. was granted to allow storage of wreckers.

The board had granted the Crosby's of request to store 300 gallons of additional gasoline in tanks of cars June 26. There had been some confusion whether expansion of the premises was indicated at that time.

Restrictions on the request include permanent removal of the watch dog from the premises; limit of 19 cars allowed on the property, and planting of a strip to restrict transient parking.

In other action, the Licensing Board:

- Granted, subject to a police check, a request from Puritan Pantry, 318 Furnace Brook Parkway, for transfer of the retail package goods store - wine and malt beverages license from Furnace Brook Quik Pik.

- Granted a request from the Morrisette American Legion Post, West Quincy, for change of manager to Lawrence T. Visio.

- Placed on file a request from Mrs. John Ford, 45 Dorchester St., Squantum, for a common victualer license for 629 Willard St.

- Denied a request from Murphy-Taylor, 1186 Sea St., for a Motor II license.

- Granted, subject to a police check, a request from Quincy Pizza and Dairy Bar, Inc., 130-132 Washington St., for change of corporation structure and change of manager from Theophilus Raptis to Helen and Thomas Kitsilis.

- Granted, subject to a police check and restrictions set by the Zoning Board, a request from Carl O. Widman for a repair shop at 140 Brook Rd.

- Granted a request for transfer of a common victualer license for Five Corner's Variety Store, 163 Newbury Ave., to Mrs. Mary M. Grillo.

- Granted a request from Harbor Marina Antique, Craft & Flea Show for a Lord's Day license and second hand license. The licenses are subject to a police check, testing of the sprinkler system, and approval by the Health Department for the sale of second hand clothing.

- Granted a request from Bernard M. and Marilyn P. Reiberg for a parking permit for 11 Mechanic St.

- Granted a request from the Renegades Drum and Bugle Corps for a one day liquor license Sept. 7, at the Fore River Clubhouse.

- Granted, subject to approval by the Health Department, a request from the fair committee of Quincy Point Congregational Church for a flea market Sept. 8, in the parking lot of the church, 444 Washington St.

- Granted a request from Committee to elect Frank McCauley for a one day all alcoholic license Sept. 28, 8 p.m. to midnight at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall.

- Voted to notify Henry P. Gregoire, of P.D.M. Corp., a scrap yard on 175 Intervale St., to appear Sept. 18, to show cause why the license should not be revoked for failure to comply with earlier License Board rulings.

Wollaston Plans Sidewalk Sale, Special Events For Bicentennial Weekend

Wollaston merchants have planned their own festivities for this Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial weekend, centering around the Beale St. business district.

A three-day sidewalk sale leads the list of activities, with music and demonstrations by the Quincy Police and Fire Departments also in the offing.

According to Al Williams of A&I Vacuum, president of the Wollaston Center Business Association, the north side of Beale St., between Hancock and Clay Sts., will be roped off Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 7 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Local merchants will offer their wares on the open-air tables, along with arts and crafts created by Wollaston residents and food tables prepared by senior citizens.

Participating stores will offer "legitimate bargains-including some new merchandise at cost," Williams said.

"We are interested in getting people down here that haven't been here before," he added. "Once they're exposed to the wide range of services available in Wollaston, we think they'll come back."

While the sidewalk sale occupies center stage on Thursday and Friday, a full agenda of events is scheduled for Saturday.

Starting things off on Saturday morning at 10 a.m. is a demonstration by the Quincy police "K-9" squad.

A pie-eating contest, sponsored by Arlene's Bakery, will take place at noon. A prize will be awarded to the first person finishing one of Arlene's pies.

Both events will take place in the parking lot of the Hancock Bank, at 20 Beale St. The focus moves to the mini-park at Beale and Cushing Sts. at 12:30 p.m. when a familiar local face is honored.

The mini-park will be dedicated in the name of Mrs. Harriet Sears, former owner of the Wollaston Theater. Her husband, the late Edward Sears, built the theater in 1927 and owned it for many years.

The Quincy Community Theater will take the stage in the recently reopened Wollaston Theater at 1 p.m. The group will present a mixture of mime and music. The theater's new owner, Arthur Chandler, has donated the use of the theater and there will be no admission charge.

The Fire Department will demonstrate its "Jaws of Life" apparatus, used to rescue crash victims trapped in automobiles, at 2 o'clock in the Hancock Bank parking lot.

A rock band, "Nite Stalker," consisting of Quincy youths, will wrap-up the day's activities with a two-hour concert starting at 3 p.m. It will also be held in the bank parking lot.

The band was to perform, Williams said, "because we wanted to do something for the kids of the area. We have a tremendous number of young men and women in the area and they're a pretty good bunch. They don't give us any trouble."

Community Theatre Salutes Bicentennial Saturday

The Quincy Community Theater will help salute the state constitution's bicentennial Saturday by putting on a music and mime performance at the Wollaston Theater at 1 p.m.

The show, "A Myriad of Music and Mime," will be staged as part of the Wollaston Center Business Association's bicentennial weekend activities.

It will be the first live production at the newly reopened theater since it was bought and renovated by Arthur Chandler this summer. Chandler has donated the use of the theater for the performance and there is no charge for admission.

The show will feature songs from recent Broadway shows, like "Cabaret" and "Chorus Line," other contemporary numbers and pantomime sketches interspersed with the music.

The production is produced by Alyce Feathers and features Norma Assad, Geoff Chamberlain, Kathie Erickson, Linda Kelleher, Kevin Kenneally, Kathy Mann and Sean O'Sullivan. The pianist will be Gordon

Over 1,000 Aerial Bombs

Spectacular Fire Works Display Thursday Night

A half hour fireworks display, possibly the greatest in eastern Massachusetts since the big one in Boston on July 4, 1976, will kick off the festivities in Quincy's Bicentennial celebration.

The display, consisting of 1,000 aerial bombs and a grand finale fired from two barges anchored off Wollaston Beach, will begin at 9 p.m. tonight (Thursday), visible over most of Quincy.

The company, Pyrotechnics, Inc., of New York, is the same firm that produced the fireworks gala three years ago as a climax to Arthur Fiedler's famed Fourth of July Boston Pops concert.

The $15,000 cost of the display was raised through donations from Quincy's business community.

It is suggested that Houghs, Neck, Squantum and Wollaston Beach will be the best locations from which to view the fireworks, which will be shot out over Quincy Bay.

City officials have made the Parking will be allowed on both sides of the Squantum Causeway and also on grass areas, provided enough room is left for cars to pass safely.

The Boston Harbor Marina complex and the Myles Standish School also will be available for parking.

The Merrymount Beach is private and will not be open to the public and there is a possibility that Shore Ave. will be closed for the fireworks.

The auxiliary police will set up a communications center at the MDC comfort station on Wollaston Beach and auxiliaries supervising parking will be in touch with the center by CB radio.

Trained medical personnel will be on duty at the first aid station in the comfort station and a rescue truck with lights will be on standby.

MDC police have issued a reminder that no alcoholic beverages may be consumed on MDC property and Quincy's open container law will be enforced.

following suggestions for parking to view the display:

Parking in the Wollaston area will be permitted in designated beach parking areas and on the even numbered sides of side streets only.

The Best Buy parking area at the intersection of East Squantum St. and Quincy Shore Drive will be available for parking.

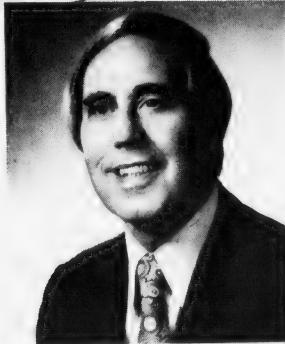

Parking lots at the Beechwood Knoll School and the Caddy Memorial Park also will be used for parking.

Your Dental Health

by Daniel P. Sweeney D.D.S.

Dental floss is a necessary accessory for the proper care of teeth. There are four major types. Unwaxed floss cleans efficiently and is suitable for most flossing needs. Extra fine, unwaxed floss is softer and thinner. It is for the experienced user. Its special quality is that it spreads to provide a broad cleaning surface. Ideal for the beginner is waxed floss. The wax provides easy insertion between teeth. Finally, there is a flat, ribbon-like floss for widely spaced teeth that is marketed under various names. Use the one that is most effective for you.

Get professional advice on good oral hygiene and the use of dental cleaning accessories from your family dentist. At the office of Dr. Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S., 539 Adams St., East Milton Square, we teach our patients good oral hygiene habits to prevent tooth decay and dental problems. We work with all members of the family - from the very young to Golden Agers. Call Dr. Sweeney at 698-3636 for an appointment at your convenience.

Unique Open House At Adams Mansion Friday Night

A rare evening open house at the old Adams Mansion, now the Adams National Historic Site, will be the feature of the Constitution Bicentennial in Quincy tomorrow (Friday).

"We've had open houses before but not very often in the evening," said Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the site of the U.S. National Parks Service.

Open house hours will be from 7 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. in the Old House on Adams St. which was home to four generations of the Adams family, including two presidents, from about 1787 to 1927.

"The house will be shown a little differently than we usually do," said Mrs. Harris. "People who come to the open house will see the house as if the family were living there."

"We plan to have the dining room table set with dishes and silverware of the time. The dining room will be lighted with candles and the garden will be lighted too."

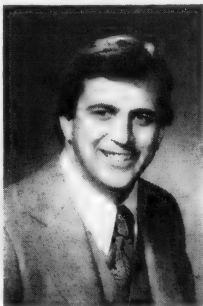

"This is the only house in the United States that was lived in by one family for 137 years and still contains the original furniture."

A trio will play background music of the 18th Century in the Long Room (the parlor) for atmosphere but there will be no refreshments served.

"We are not going to appeal to anything but history, the Adams family and pride in America," said Mrs. Harris.

Host for the open house will be Cong. Brian J. Donnelly, who has a very busy Friday on tap.

First, he is scheduled at 6:30 p.m. to place a wreath at the statue of John Hancock in front of the old Adams Academy building, site of the birthplace of Hancock, the first governor of Massachusetts under the Constitution.

BRIAN DONNELLY

Then, at 6:45 p.m., he is down to place a wreath at the statue of John Adams in Freedom Park on Burgin Parkway.

At 7 p.m., he is due at the Adams Mansion to welcome visitors on the grounds outside.

There is a chance that some current members of the Adams family may be at the open house since the Adams Memorial Society is holding the annual family reunion on Saturday. Last year, 74 family members were present.

And, while there will be no refreshments at the open house in the Mansion, there will be some for the public right across the street in Freedom Park from 9 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.

since, for the first 100 years of its existence, it was kept in simple storage, prey to debilitating handling, light and changes in temperature and humidity.

A hundred years ago, during the observance of the Constitutional Centennial, it was decreed that a copy be made, as close to the original as possible, and the General Court declared the harder copy to be the equal of the delicate original.

"To our knowledge," said Dr. Olsberg, "this will be the only time that the original has been out of the State House since the late 18 Century when it was moved to Beacon Hill from the Old State House on Washington St."

"It is appropriate that it be shown in Quincy but nowhere else."

The Constitution will be brought out of the State Archives at 9 a.m. today and placed in a Brink's truck for the trip to Quincy where it was born.

It will be escorted from the State House by a State Police helicopter and patrol car, an MDC police car, four MDC motorcycles, plus the Quincy police chief's car and the Quincy fire chief's car.

Those riding in the police and fire cars will include Mayor Arthur H. Lohm, Secretary of State Michael Joseph Connolly, James McIntyre, chairman of the Constitution Bicentennial Committee, and Wilhelmina

Harris, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Sites in Quincy.

The convoy will be met at 9:30 a.m. on the Neponset River bridge by police cars from Quincy, Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook, the four communities that made up Old Braintree at the time the Constitution was drafted. They will join the guard of honor.

Mayor Lohm and Mrs. Harris will receive custody of the historic document from State Secretary Connolly at 10 a.m. in John Adams' old law office.

The visit of the Constitution, Connolly points out, "is undertaken as a special exception for the city of Quincy in recognition of the uniquely important role of the Adams site in the preparation of the document and the 200th anniversary of its drafting."

Former Mayor and Sen. McIntyre will deliver a brief address and Mrs. McIntyre and Mrs. Lohm, wife of the Mayor, will be hostesses for a coffee hour.

The Constitution will be housed for its four-day stay in Quincy in a specially built display case, the specifications of which were laid out by Dr. Olsberg and Orville Carroll of the U.S. National Park Service.

It is approximately 23 feet long, with a slight curve for 15 feet. It is long enough to permit the entire first page of the Constitution to be shown along with about two-thirds of each of the remaining pages.

The case is wooden-sided with detachable chrome legs, has a floor of felt-covered perforated masonite for proper air circulation, and a covering of plexiglass that shields the priceless document from ultra violet rays.

It was constructed by Cosmo I. Percecco of the F. W. Dixon Co. of Woburn for $1,787, about half of its true value of $3,400.

Throughout its stay in Quincy, the Constitution will be under 24-hour guard by members of the Quincy Police and Fire Departments and the National Parks Service, which has supervision of the Adams Birthplaces.

The Constitution will be on public display starting at 10:30 a.m. today. Viewing time is from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Monday morning it will be packed up and returned to the State Archives by Brink's truck under escort.

All sixth graders in the Quincy Public Schools will view the Constitution on Thursday and Friday and School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon issued an invitation to school children from surrounding towns to see the historic document.

The first 7,000 visitors to view the historic document will be presented with reproductions of the page containing the preamble and the bill of rights by the National Park Service.

Bonfire To Be Ready Despite Early Torch

The official Constitution Bicentennial bonfire will be touched off as scheduled at 8 p.m., Sunday, despite a premature torching by vandals Monday night.

Forestry Supt. John F. Koegler said some 60 to 75 per cent of the prepared pyre near Pageant Field in Merrymount Park was burned by vandals.

"We got up to about 20 feet of railroad ties," said Koegler. "Now we're back down to about six feet. We've got the rest of the week to rebuild it to 30 feet. We'll do it."

Gathering material for the bonfire has proved to be unexpectedly difficult at a time when wood is going for $125 a cord and old railroad tie up to $10 apiece.

Koegler said the Forestry Department managed to scrounge some from the MBIA yard in Charlestown, the General Dynamics Shipyard and Duane's Lumber Yard.

Bicentennial Mass Of Thanksgiving At St. John's

The most Rev. Daniel A. Hart, D.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Boston, and Bishop of the Brockton region (which includes Quincy) will be the principal celebrant of a Mass of Thanksgiving which is being offered as part of the celebration of the Bicentennial of the Massachusetts constitution.

This Mass will be at 4:00 p.m. on Saturday, September 8th at St. John's Church. Clergy from Catholic, Protestant and Jewish traditions, as well as all Quincy's elected officials, will be represented at this Ecumenical Mass. Our parish choir will prepare a special music program for this celebration.

'Honor Our Contract'

Hospital Workers Picket For Pay Raise

Employees at Quincy City Hospital joined a growing list of city employees to go public with their frustration over contract problems.

Members of Local 880, staged a 15-minute demonstration at the hospital last Thursday, asking the city to honor the contract it signed in February of this year. The union includes laboratory and X-ray technicians, physical therapists, social workers and others at the hospital.

Representatives handed out leaflets headed "We're trying hard to avoid a strike at Quincy City Hospital. The City isn't."

The union represents about 140 QCH employees, according to Local 880 spokesman Jerry Shea. About 30 of those employees took part in Thursday's picketing.

According to Shea, the contract signed this February and scheduled to go into effect this July 1, called for an $800 annual raise for all employees - which about a five percent increase on the average. A seven percent increase about $1,100 per person - would have taken effect in January, 1980.

The contract included a reopener clause - which allowed the city to renegotiate if it was unable to fund the contract. Lohin voided the contract, citing Governor Kings tax and spending cap, said union representative Ed Miller.

Since then, there's been no word from city negotiators, Shea said.

"They just won't take a position. We don't know what his (Lohin's) position is. We're just waiting for some word from the mayor," he added.

Kincaide Playground Group Raises $80 For MDA

summer with participants of the program volunteering their time and effort.

Participants included Michelle Joyce, Kelly Joyce, Patricia Joyce, Cathy Miele, Michael Miele, Marc Miele, Sheryl Brunstrom, Laura Brunstrom, Kevin Steen, George Maze, Vincent Elart, Michelle Elgart, Sandra Smith, Jackie Milone, Kristin Egan, Fiona Hayes. Miss Belmonte was also assisted by Recreation Leaders Ray Coscia and Dennis Donovan.

QJC Offering Non-Credit Courses

The Quincy Junior College Division of Community Services is offering non-credit courses for persons contemplating taking college level courses.

Courses such as Basic Writing, English for Everyday Speech and Writing, and Basic Mathematics Review, enable people to brush up on their skills as well as sample what a college level course is like.

The credit free approach to learning makes it possible to learn in an informal, non-competitive environment. Students can then evaluate whether they have the time, desire and ability to succeed in regular college courses.

Non-credit courses designed to give people business skills include Key punch, Typing, Shorthand, and Preparation for the Real Estate Broker's Examination.

For more information on other credit-free courses, and a college brochure, call 786-8777.

HOSPITAL WORKERS, upset about their 19 months without a pay raise, take to the streets to protest. Members of Local 880, which includes laboratory, physical therapists, social workers and others, signed a contract in February of this year which has yet to be implemented by the city.

Some people think that gold is one of the few safe investments left in the world. The price of gold reflects its astounding demand. Who would ever dream that gold would be selling for over $300 an ounce? While much gold is still bought for investment purposes only, the jewelry industry is still the largest consumer of gold using 69% of the gold sold in 1976 for example. People do not seem to be worried that the gold supply will be exhausted or that the price will rise beyond the affordable for any but a very select few. Whatever the case, as people lose confidence in paper currencies, they tend to turn to precious metals. As a result, it appears that gold is still a very good investment.

If you're interested in a piece of gold jewelry we hope you'll stop by and see our fine selection at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., 696-1490. You're welcome to browse at any time. We strive to make your visit with us a friendly and relaxing experience. Appraisals are done for estates, attorneys, banks and private individuals. Open: 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Mon. thru Sat.

Cites Receipts Deficit

McCauley Praises Tobin ——— But . . .

City Councillor Francis X. McCauley, usually a critic of Mayor Arthur H. Tobin, had a word of praise for His Honor and the city's department heads this week.

"Mayor Tobin promised a fully funded budget and he came in right on target," said McCauley in a statement accompanying his analysis of the city's finances for the fiscal year ended June 30.

"The Mayor and city department heads deserve high praise for living within their budgets despite the double digit inflation which has plagued the economy during the past year."

McCauley noted that Quincy finished fiscal 1979 with a deficit of $2,678,071, "the fourth consecutive year that city revenue failed to cover budgetary requirements."

But, the councillor added, "the city showed a slight surplus of $38,726 on the expense side of the ledger."

"However," he said, "the slight surplus was more than offset by the deficit in receipts from sources other than real estate and personal property taxes."

McCauley said he warned the Mayor last September that the estimate of $35.2 million in anticipated receipts was too high, but the Mayor defended it as conservative.

"The deficit will have two adverse effects in fiscal 1980," he said. "Short-term borrowing will have to be increased to cover the shortage and the deficit will be added to this year's budget."

"The deficit amounts to $9.54 on the tax rate."

McCauley said that the five-year borrowing of $7.2 million authorized in June and July, 1978, to cover the prior year's deficit will cost the taxpayers more than $1,431,000 in interest charges.

"Election year tax rates, while beneficial to the politicians, have proven pretty expensive for the taxpayers," he said.

"The city's credit rating slipped another notch from A-1 to A. This reduction, the second in two years, will make future city borrowing more costly and is the result of the continuing failure of the city to put its financial house in order."

Mayor Tobin conceded that the city's credit rating has gone down to A, but he said it was not the second reduction in two years. He called it "a misleading statement."

"Actually," he said, "there is no such thing as a credit rating of A-1. Moody's (the rating bureau) gave us a temporary A-1 a year ago to indicate a transition because the city was doing all it could to solve its problems."

"We should have gone to A at the time because of the $35 tax rate increase in 1977 and the $7.2 million bond we obtained to cover the inherited deficit last year. The A rating was not unexpected."

"We are netting out the bond issue at 5.66 per cent interest, which is excellent in today's market."

Quincy's Yesterdays

By Tom Henshaw

Plan A Referendum Ruled Off Ballot

The Board of Registrars of Voters and the City Solicitor ruled the so-called Plan A Referendum off the November ballots since its petition contained only 4,338 valid signatures, 181 short of the number required by law.

Miss Elizabeth McCarthy, a Boston handwriting expert, testified before a Board hearing that she found 286 "forgeries" and 194 "altered or edited" names on the petitions that were turned in by Plan A supporters.

The Plan A people were seeking a return to the strong mayor form of government that prevailed in Quincy before the advent of the Plan E, or city manager, type of government in 1950.

DEEGAN BLASTS KEITH

City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. criticized Rep. Alfred B. Keith (R-Quincy) for his opposition to a bill that would have permitted Quincy to borrow $1 million to make emergency street repairs.

The City Council directed Deegan to sound out Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long to see if he would approve the use of $250,000 from the city's excess and deficiency fund to fix the streets.

JUDAEANS WIN NATIONALS

The Quincy Judaeans won their national basketball title for the second year in a row beating Pittsburgh, 89-52, and Georgia, 70-42 and 42-33, in the tournament at Hendersonville, N. C.

HEDGES TO SUPPORT MAC ARTHUR

Sen. Charles W. Hedges (R-Quincy) disclosed that he will seek election as a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1952, a post he held in 1936, 1940 and 1948.

"If Gen. MacArthur decided to run, of course I would support him," said Hedges, who supported Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York at the 1948 convention.

SETTLEMENT REJECTED

The City Council refused to appropriate $44,000 to pay for taking a piece of property in the east of Hancock St. parking area that was assessed for only $10,700.

The owner of the property, the Foster Realty Trust, had turned down a city offer of $13,375, the assessed value plus 25 per cent.

QJC Offers Financial Aid For Incoming Students

Dr. Edward Pierce, president of Quincy Junior College, is encouraging students planning to attend QJC this fall to apply for financial aid through the college.

Although the college's tuition is relatively low, and will remain the same as it has for the past seven years, college authorities realize that higher education costs today are often a financial burden for students and their families, whatever their income.

"Our financial aid policy recognizes the need of the middle income family as well as others," Dr. Pierce said.

Full time tuition at QJC is $300 a semester for Quincy residents and $350 for non-residents.

The college is also encouraging students to apply for the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant. This is a federal program from which students can receive from $50 to $1,400 to attend college, based on financial need. Generally a family of four with an income of less than $25,000 would be eligible for some aid.

The college is still accepting students in most of its programs.

Applications for admission or an appointment may be obtained by calling the admissions office at 786-8777. Incoming students wanting a financial aid application should call the dean of students at 786-8777.

Pistol, Trinkets Stolen

Police, Staff Probe Adams Mansion Break

Members of the staff of the Adams National Historic Site are patiently "going through 20,000 items of memorabilia to determine what was stolen in a Monday night break in the Mansion on Adams St.

"It's going to take several days to go through all the items in the catalogue," said Mrs. Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the site for the U. S. National Parks Service.

Mrs. Harris said a preliminary investigation indicated that a number of "trinkets" were taken, including a pistol that John Quincy Adams had picked up on the battlefield of Waterloo in 1815.

Some "traveling pistols" that were kept in luggage by travelers in the early 19th Century and a beaded evening bag, perhaps used to carry away the trinkets, also were stolen.

"The items have more historic than intrinsic value," said Mrs. Harris. "They meant a lot to us."

She said the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) had been notified since the Mansion is U. S. government property but that the Quincy police were handling the investigation.

Entry was gained to the house by breaking a window and the break was discovered by the NPS staff Tuesday morning when they arrived at work and discovered the burglar alarm going.

It was not clear why the alarm did not summon authorities to the scene while the robbery was in progress.

Faherty Hits Tax Delinquent Developers

Michael E. Faherty, candidate for councillor at large, has pledged to fight for passage of an ordinance that would prohibit issuance of building permits and zoning variances to tax delinquent developers.

Faherty told a Ward 2 reception at the Torre Dei Passeri Social Club that since he first proposed the ordinance, some $87,000 in overdue taxes have been paid by a developer of property on Palmer St.

This, he said, "is but a drop in the bucket as several hundreds of thousands of dollars in back taxes go unpaid by wealthy land-owners."

"At this very moment," he said, "the city is being petitioned for the right to construct a 185-unit condominium complex on land in North Quincy on which the developer owes $44,000 in overdue taxes."

Faherty promised that, if elected, he "will be the strong voice of the people, unencumbered by political dynasties, business groups or any other special interest factions or cliques."

Correction

In a letter to the editor of The Quincy Sun last week Michael E. Faherty was quoted as questioning the Mayor as to $300,000,000 in taxes owed the city by developers. This was a typographical error. The figure should have read $3,000,000.

FIRST AID FOR BURNS

Probably the most effective treatment for burns is to immediately immerse the burned skin in cold water and leave it there until the pain ceases. For burns on the head or torso, apply towels that have been soaked in ice-cold water. Doctors have discovered that the cold water treatment makes burned tissue heal more quickly, usually without blistering, scarring or becoming infected.

The medical case histories are astounding! A national magazine published a photo of an elderly woman who severely burned both of her arms. One year later the photo showed the untreated arm covered with scars while the water-treated arm was completely scarless.

Medical authorities recommend cold water as an excellent first aid measure for both major and minor burns. The treatment should last until you can remove the burned part from the water without pain recurring. By all means get medical attention if the burn is the least bit serious.

Mary Riordan Key Player On Providence College Women's Hockey Team

By TOM SULLIVAN

Six years ago Mary Ellen Riordan began playing hockey in the Quincy Youth Hockey program while an eighth grade student at St. Mary's School in West Quincy.

Next month the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Riordan of 60 Bunker Hill Lane will enter her sophomore year at Providence College and will be a key player for the women's hockey team this winter.

Mary Ellen received a hockey scholarship to Providence, one of the few given to girls, after she graduated from Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth and last year, as a freshman, was the high scorer (63 points) for the varsity team and was named the Most Valuable Player.

"I received my scholarship after Providence coach Tom Palanara saw me play for the Quincy Girls A team in February of 1978 when we won the Choate Rosemary Hall Invitational Tournament in Wallingford Conn.," she said.

Mary Ellen was the first girl from the Quincy Youth Hockey Association to win a college scholarship.

"I began playing in the Quincy Youth program while in the eighth grade at St. Mary's and continued to play throughout my high school years," she said. "I received an academic scholarship from St. Mary's Guild and attended Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth from where I graduated in 1978.

"I played for four years on the Quincy traveling "A" team and my first coach was Bob Hayes, who began girls' hockey in Quincy. Without the incentive of Mr. Hayes, I and many other girls who have played in the Quincy Youth program would not have been able to reach their future goals."

In her second year Paul Hussey took over the coaching and was assisted by Frank McAuliffe.

"Mr. Hussey helped me considerably and played a large part in my receiving the scholarship to Providence, as did Mr. McAuliffe," the honor student said. "All three of my Quincy coaches, Mr. Hayes, Mr. Hussey and Mr. McAuliffe, were instrumental in my success as a player in Quincy and also as a college player."

Palanara scouted the girls' tournament at Choate School in February, 1978, and was impressed with Mary Ellen as well as the other Quincy girls.

"I was very impressed with the way Mary Ellen and the other girls performed and it was evident that they had received excellent coaching in the Quincy program," he said.

Although hockey was always Mary Ellen's favorite sport, she started in other sports at Sacred Heart High School. As a freshman she was named MVP on the junior varsity basketball team, as a sophomore and junior was selected the Most Spirited Player on the softball team and as a senior was named the MVP on the softball team. She was also selected the school's outstanding girl athlete.

In her senior year she had to choose between basketball in school or hockey in the Quincy Youth program and she selected hockey.

"It was tough emotionally, but I really love hockey and I think there is a better chance for a scholarship if I concentrate on it," she pointed out at the time.

She was co-captain of the Quincy Girls "A" team for two years, was named to the Choate Rosemary Tournament all-star second team as a defenseman in 1976 and was selected on the tournament all-star first team as center in 1976.

A versatile player, she usually played center but was also outstanding on defense.

She competed in the New England and national tournaments while a member of the A team.

Hussey is one of her greatest boosters. "She is a wonderful girl and a really outstanding player," he said.

"I coached her for four years and even when she began playing as an eighth grader when girls' hockey was new, she wanted to play hockey and to go to college.

"She was very coachable, a very modest girl who was always thinking of the other girls. She many times felt she was getting too much ice time and that the other girls weren't getting enough chance. She earned the respect of all her fellow players, the coaches and the opposing players and coaches.

"She had interviews with the University of New Hampshire and Colby as well as Providence, New Hampshire wanted her but they give financial aid there instead of scholarships and Mary Ellen didn't qualify for such aid.

"She is an outstanding person on and off the ice and next year should be one of the outstanding college players in New England.

My first year playing for Providence was a great thrill for me," Mary Ellen said. "It was new and very exciting. I plan to play hockey throughout my college career. Last year we had a 16-3 record and finished second in New England despite having a small squad and next season we will be better with the addition of new talented players. We play such teams as Colby, New Hampshire, Harvard, Boston College, Northeastern, Princeton and Cornell. Behind the coaching of Tom Palanara and Jack Kilroy, I know we will be number one in New England next season."

Palanara hopes to have more girls turn out for hockey. He had only a 16-woman squad last winter. "If there were 40 kids who could play, I'd take them," he said. Meanwhile, he is busy scouting girls' leagues in New England in hopes of finding some others like Mary Ellen Riordan.

Third in a family of four children (two older brothers, one younger sister), Mary Ellen has two future goals -- to coach hockey and teach Spanish at the high school level.

Trailing, 6-1, in the fifth inning, Quincy sent 12 batters to the plate and scored nine runs. Phil Jones' bases loaded triple was the key hit.

Quincy added five runs in the sixth, the big hits being a home run by Eddie Herrick and a two-run homer by Rich Griffin.

Scott Alfisa made two diving catches in right field for Quincy, the second coming with two outs and the bases loaded.

South Shore was paced by Capt. Paul Zemotel, who had a two-run triple and a two-run double and five RBI.

95 Turn Out

Presidents Make Fitzgerald Optimistic

By TOM SULLIVAN

Tom Fitzgerald, starting his 28th year as a schoolboy coach, led Quincy's football team to a 5-5 record and a big win over his alma mater, North Quincy, a year ago in his debut with the Presidents.

This fall, with a fine group of seniors and some excellent juniors who played on the sophomore squad last year, the former North Quincy all-scholastic hopes to improve on the 1978 record.

"We had a turnout of 95 and the attitude of the boys is just great," Fitzgerald said. "They are really working hard and have a lot of desire. About 35 of them attended football camps during the summer and everyone reported in excellent shape."

"We have a lot of fine seniors, who have added experience and a good group of juniors. We are more experienced on offense with only three returning starters (one is injured) on defense, but the defense is coming along well."

This year Tom at least knows the players. Last fall he was just getting acquainted with them after nine years as an assistant coach at North Quincy.

Tom Brennan, small but hard-running halfback, and one of the returning defensive starters, who had his best day in the win over North last year, and Geoff Caffisch, starting tackle, are the Presidents' co-captains.

Dave Austin, the starter until injured last fall, and Ron Pettinelli, another veteran, will share the quarterback duties. With Austin back, last year's backup quarterback, Charlie McCall, has been moved to end.

Brennan, Bill Flynn, Ed Iodice, Mike Abboud and Paul Flynn are the halfbacks and veterans Scott Richardson and Dan Goldrick and Mike Monahan are the fullbacks.

McCall, veterans Paul Martin and Paul Bendera, Sean Burke, Jim St. Angelo, Scott Annsen and Bill Hall are the end candidates, veterans Caffisch, Fran Duggan and John Varrasso, Jim Hensley and Bob Burns are the tackles, veterans Tom Rand, Howie

Chadbourne, Ed Quinlan and Paul D'Angelo and John Christello are the top guard hopefuls and veteran Jeff Heath and junior Chris Chevalier, will share the center chores.

Although Fitzgerald hopes to do some platooning, many of the players currently are going both ways.

The defensive coaches, Bill Mayer and Joe Goguen, have a lot of holes to fill but feel by the opening game the team will be strong defensively, as it was in 1978.

Quinlan, Ed Mackey, Hensley, Chadbourne and John Griffiths are at defensive end, Duggan, Varrasso, Burns, Mike Petrillo and Dan Reidy are the tackles, and Lou Matthews, the only other returning defensive starter, Walter Kilgallon, Steve Picot, Goldrick D'Angelo, John Kavanagh, Steve Remillard and Gordon Spencer are the linebackers.

Nose guards are Chevalier, Rand, Jim McNeil and another returning starter, Billy Murray, who is out for several weeks with an injury.

Halfbacks are Martin, Mike Coska, Ken Gustin, Brennan, Todd Veale, Jeff Eloffson, Dan Montani and Ed Powers, and the safety men are McCall, Dave Dwyer, Ed Starr and Jim Megnia.

Jim Wilson will do the punting. "We have more depth than last year and I think the offense will be better," Fitzie said.

Jackie Wier, who has been a tremendous help to the coaches through the years, is in his 10th year as equipment manager.

Fitzgerald has the same assistants as last year, Goguen and Mayer and offensive coaches Mark Conroy and Peter Chella.

Quincy opens against Cambridge Rindge and Latin at 10 a.m. Sept. 15 in a Suburban League opener at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Before that game the Presidents will have scrimmaged Everett, Boston Tech and Arlington.

6 Local Hot Shot Winners

The Quincy Recreation Department announces the six local winners of the preliminary contests in the Pepsi Cola National Basketball Association Hot Shot Program.

Chosen from among 1,200 participants in the program, were Kathy McBride, from Fore River Playground, girls nine to 12 category; Simmy Jo Koch, Bishop Playground, girls 13 to 15; Mary Travers, Pond St. Playground, girls 16 to 18; Mike Sheils, Adams Playground, boys nine to 12; Peter McGillicuddy, Bishop Playground, boys 13 to 15; Paul Gill, Welcome Young Playground, boys 16 to 18.

Boys and girls, from each of the city's playgrounds, were judged in speed, shooting, dribbling and rebounding ability.

The winners will proceed to the Boston competition in October.

NHL All-Stars, WITS In Memorial Game For Quincy Woman

A softball game between the National Hockey League All-Stars, featuring several Bruins, and Radio Station WITS will be played on Sunday, Sept. 9, at 7 p.m. at Quincy's Rotary Field in memory of Miss Judy Balducci, a Quincy resident who died this year of cancer at the age of 28.

Judy was born and raised in Quincy and was a softball player for Quincy teams, and her many friends and former teammates felt that, because of her spirit of competition and her love for the game, Sunday's game will be a fitting memorial.

Among the Bruins playing will be Bob Miller, Wayne Cashman, Peter McNab, Ken Hodge, Rick Middleton and Al Sims.

"As president of the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society, I would like to thank Robert Hatfield of Quincy and all who are working hard to make the game a success," said Atty. Daniel Raymond. "We urge all to attend what promises to be an enjoyable evening for a very good cause."

Anyone unable to attend the game but who would like to send in a donation, can do so by sending a check to Balducci Memorial Game, American Cancer Society, 47 West Elm Street, Brockton 02401.

Juniors, Seniors To Play Key Raider Roles

The North Quincy High sophomores were 9-1 in football last fall and most of those players will be playing key roles for the varsity this season.

"We have a fine group of seniors, but also have a lot of excellent juniors, many of whom may make the varsity," said Coach Dave Burke who, starting his fifth year at his alma mater, greeted more than 100 candidates last week.

The Raiders, who were a disappointing 3-7 a year ago, are back home again after three years with their own facilities and their own practice field, Kavanagh Stadium.

"We don't have a lot of varsity experience either on offense or defense, but we will have good speed and pretty good size," Burke said. "We will be aggressive and we all hope to improve on last year's record."

Mullen, Penzo, McNamara and Dodd are the only players with varsity experience.

Quarterback is up for grabs, as Kevin Cobban played nearly every minute there last year. Kevin Durkin, Dave Cavanaugh, Jamie Walsh and Jack Brown are fighting it out for the starting job.

The halfbacks are Capt. Leo Graham, Joe Crifo and Bill Dailey and the fullbacks are Pat Carroll and Bob McCormick.

Graham was a defensive starter but saw only limited service on offense, while Crifo and Dailey also saw some varsity action.

The defensive is very inexperienced as far as varsity action is concerned but the coaches feel the defense, which will be aggressive, will come along and be ready for the Sept. 15 opener.

The defensive and hopefuls are Glen Segalla, Joe Cremin, Pete McDonough and Bill McCarthy, and the tackles are John Gorczyca, Miller, Glen Ross, Paul Schaeztl and a boy who could make all the difference, Bill Stacy. Stacy, a junior, has not played football before but he is coming along fast and should be ready. He stands 6-5 and goes over 200 pounds.

For linebackers Burke has Petrillo, Dave Howley, Paul O'Sullivan, Tom Ceurvels and Rich Reinhardt.

At the corners are Billy Cooke, Jim Nolan, Tom Mulvey, Pete Alibrandi, Jim McGuinness, Ricky Anderson and Steve Pike. Tony Camillo, Steve Mastroioli, Jay Pillard and Paul McAleney are the halfbacks and Graham, Chris Baker and Kyle Morton the safeties.

Graham is the only returning defensive starter, while Camillo, Petrillo and Howley also saw varsity action.

The coaching alignment is the same as last year with George Liset helping Burke with the offense, Ken McPhee and Jack Raymer handling the defense and Ted Sadowski, in his 22nd year as a North aide, coaching the sophomores and doing the scouting.

North opens at Milton Sept. 15 in a non-league opener.

O'Donnell Announces Campaign Staff

Kathleen O'Donnell, candidate for the City Council from Ward 2, has announced the makeup of her campaign committee.

Charles O'Donnell of 26 Massachusetts Ave., Quincy Point, the candidate's father, will be chairman.

David Kerman of 18 Lowe St., Quincy Point, is vice chairman, and Patricia Doucette, also of 26 Massachusetts Ave., the candidate's sister, is treasurer. Virginia Kurtzman will act as campaign coordinator.

Miss O'Donnell also announced that her campaign organization will not put up political signs in residential neighborhoods.

"Campaign signs are a great source of eye pollution and detract from the beauty of our neighborhoods," she said.

"I will restrict all campaign signs to business zoned areas and major roads in Ward 2. I would hope that any other candidate in Ward 2 would follow this reasonable policy."

Tips On How To Mail Film

A little extra care when mailing film for processing could mean the difference in preserving the memories of your summer vacation. Boston Postmaster Philip L. Sullivan advises:

"Thousands of film packages end up in dead letter offices throughout the country each year," Sullivan said. "Just because the film package was wrapped and addressed carelessly."

He offered the following tips for mailing film:

Put the film in a sturdy envelope, and when possible use envelopes supplied by a film processing company.

Write the film processor's mailing address, return address and ZIP Code legibly on the outside of the envelope.

Be sure to affix sufficient postage. Stamps will generally adhere better if they are put on the envelope before the film is inserted.

Tape your name and address to the film roll or cartridge before putting it in the envelope, and put your name and address on the back of any photographs being sent for copying, re-touching or other purposes.

260 On Dean's List At Quincy Junior College

Representation Is Issue In Ward 6, Kelly Says

Michael J. Kelly says he has found that the big issue among Ward 6 voters is the election of a city councillor who will represent the entire ward and not just one section.

"This point was repeatedly brought out by people who feel that they have not been adequately represented and that sporadic meetings do not make up for this lack of representation," he said.

Harold Urges Shellfish Plant For Quincy Area

State Senator Paul D. Harold [D-Quincy] has urged a special House subcommittee on lobster and shellfish to consider locating a shellfish purification plant in the Quincy area.

In a letter to the committee, Harold cited the easy accessibility of the Quincy area and the need for a purification plant on the southern coast of the state to serve the local shellfish industry.

He pointed out that the entire state is currently served by one shellfish purification

No. 1 priority if he is elected. He said he would:

- Conduct telephone surveys to determine how residents in different sections of the ward feel about the important issues.
- Hold periodic meetings in different areas of the ward to discuss current issues.
- Hold special meetings if a matter of urgency arises between the periodic meetings.

plant, located in Newburyport. Harold said he has filed legislation to establish a state fish pier in Quincy, and is seeking a study of the best potential uses and development of the Quincy coastal area.

Locating the proposed plant in Quincy would "serve the fishing industry of the entire southern shoreline" Harold said, and it would alleviate the necessity of the long trip to Newburyport.

Burke, Donnelly Keynote Speakers

City Hall Complex Dedications Saturday

Two generations of Quincy congressmen will be the featured speakers Saturday, Sept. 8 at the dedication of the new City Hall Complex and its front lawn, Constitution Common.

Former Cong. James A. Burke, who served in Washington for 20 years until his retirement last year, will speak at the dedication of the City Hall Complex, including the $2.4 million addition, at 11 a.m.

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly, who succeeded Burke this past January, will deliver the main address at the dedication of Constitution Common in front of the annex at 7 p.m.

Another highlight of the twin dedications will be the unveiling (if it's ready in time) of Ed Monti's highly symbolic, 60-ton granite sculpture depicting the drafting of the Constitution.

The U. S. Naval Academy Show Band from Annapolis, Md., will play the National Anthem during the morning ceremonies and give a concert at the open house in the Annex that follows.

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra will perform the National Anthem at the dedication of the Common and will present an outdoor Pops concert after the ceremonies.

Former Mayor Thomas S. Burgin will be the master of ceremonies at the dedication of the City Hall Complex, starting at 11 a.m., the program for which includes:

Invocation by Msgr. James J. Searly of St. Ann's Church.

Greetings from the city by Mayor Arthur H. Tobin.

Presentation by Cong. Brian J. Donnelly to Mayor Tobin of a flag which has been flown over the U. S. Capitol in Washington.

Flag raising, with the Quincy Veterans Council providing the honor guard.

National anthem, played by the U. S. Naval Academy Show Band.

Presentation of the annex building by T. Owen Trainor, architect, and Donald Moscone, general contractor, to Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti and the Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of the Planning Board.

Prayer of Thanksgiving by the Rev. Keith Munson of United First Parish Church.

Introduction of the guests by John J. Quinn, president of the City Council.

Address by former Cong. James A. Burke.

Benediction by Rabbi Jacob

JAMES A. BURKE

Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue. Unveiling by Mayor Tobin of the seal of Quincy and a plaque honoring those who were responsible for construction of the building.

The seal was donated to the city by T. Owen Trainor, architect, and the flag pole at the annex is a gift from Donald Moscone, the general contractor.

Sometime during the dedication models of the Adams Birthplaces and the Adams Mansions will be presented to the city for permanent display in City Hall. They were constructed by industrial arts students at Broad Meadows Junior High School under the direction of Joan Hemphill.

At the conclusion of the dedication ceremonies, the Commemorative cake will be cut. Baked by George Montilio, the cake is three feet high by four feet by eight feet, weighs a little more than 1,000 pounds and, when sliced, it will serve about 2,000 people.

The cake-cutting will start an open house in the City Hall complex from 12 noon to 4 p.m., during which the Naval Academy Show Band will play and refreshments will be served under tents.

Members of the student councils at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools and the Vocational Technical School will conduct 15-minute tours of the Complex, explaining the function of the various departments. There will be special tours for the handicapped and senior citizens.

The Quincy Art Association will exhibit about 30 works of art with historical themes, done by local artists, in the conference room on the second floor of the annex.

Former Mayor Walter J. Hannon will be the master of ceremonies at the dedication of the Constitution Common, starting at 7 p.m. The program includes:

Invocation by the Rev. William R. McCarthy of St. John The Baptist Church.

Greetings from the city by Mayor Tobin.

Flag raising, with an honor guard provided by the Quincy Veterans Council.

National Anthem, played by the Quincy Symphony Orchestra.

Presentation by Mayor Tobin; Dr. James R. Cameron, professor of history at Eastern Nazarene College; and Wilhelm Harris, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site.

Prayer of Thanksgiving by the Rev. John Banks of Bethany Congregational Church.

Introduction of guests by former Mayor Hannon.

Address by Cong. Brian J. Donnelly.

Benediction by Rabbi David Jacobs of Beth El Synagogue.

After the ceremonies, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra will present a Pops concert on the Common.

If the Monti sculpture is completed on time — which was doubtful as The Sun went to press — it will be unveiled during the Common dedication ceremonies.

"It's really a mammoth project to be done in such short order," said Monti of his 60-ton work of art, which is so large that people will be able to walk among the figures.

"It's a rather new concept. It's sort of like a mystery. You look at it and you just have to make up your own mind as to what you see in it."

Which is why former Mayor James R. McIntyre, chairman of the Bicentennial Committee, says: "It will be a controversial design."

The sculpture, designed by Monti's partner, Jerry Raichler, consists of 14 blocks of Quincy granite, scattered apparently without pattern over an area 18 by 14 feet.

Three small stones on the left side of the work represent John and Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin, the three men who drafted the Massachusetts Constitution.

These blend into the massive right side of the sculpture, which, says Monti, represents the fact that "from these three men the Constitution went throughout the United States."

Monti is doing the job for $12,000. Its actual value is about $35,000.

"I wanted to do something for the city where we have lived all of our lives," he said. "It's something that will be there for ever and ever in the memory of all the granite people in Quincy."

The 22 artists, all members of the Quincy Art Association, who will be exhibiting in City Hall include:

Ellie Andrews, Norma G. Brown, Helen Burgess, Kathleen Burgess, Madeline Gibson, Doris Haddleton, Kay Hanson, Elsie B. Jacques, Al LeNormand, Jane Madden, Cynthia McCloskey.

Ann Muir, Theresa Costa O'Hare, Annet Paglierani, Laura Olsen, Bonnie Opie, Thomas Salamone, Helen Shaw, Olive Tomkins, Paula Verheco, Dorothy Wallace, Gloria Worthington.

18.5% Voter Turnout

Tobin, Itkin Nominated In Mayoral Primary

By TOM HENSHAW

Arthur H. Tobin will face Abe M. Itkin for Mayor in the general election on Nov. 6.

Mayor Tobin easily won the preliminary election Tuesday with 6,367 votes and Itkin won the second spot on the November ballot with 1,144 votes to 585 for Michael Jovanovic.

A much-heralded write-in campaign for no candidate in particular launched at the last minute by disgruntled city workers failed to materialize as 35 people shared 257 write-in votes.

The voter turnout to mark the one-race ballot, which cost the city $35,000, was only 8,691 or about 18.5 per cent of the 47,205 registered voters.

It was one of the fastest elections in recent memory in the city.

The first returns, Precinct 4 of Ward 2, came in at 8:30 p.m., a half hour after the polls closed, and all but two precincts had been counted an hour later.

The last precinct, Precinct 4 of Ward 1, was added to the tally at 10:40 p.m. because the envelope containing the count was mislaid in the voting box.

Tobin, who is seeking a second term in the Mayor's office, won every one of the city's 39 precincts by wide margins.

Itkin, a hospital social worker, was ahead of Jovanovic in all but two precincts.

Jovanovic, an unemployed college professor, outpolled Itkin in Precinct 1 of Ward 3 by 13-12 and in Precinct 6 of Ward 3 by 13-11. Tobin said he was elated, not by the size of his victory but by the number of voters who turned out in an election that was virtually no contest from the beginning of the campaign.

"I was concerned about the apathy in the city," he said, noting that city workers, who are battling for a raise in pay, had threatened to get behind on write-in candidate and make a race of it.

"I had a tough time getting the message across that there were serious problems," said Tobin. "If John O'Keefe (of the city employees union) was successful it could have been a different story."

"I'm delighted that all the people who supported me and got on the phone to get out the vote. We managed to get the message across. I think O'Keefe helped to work them up."

The top vote getter among the write-ins was City Councillor James A. Sheets, who last spring considered getting on the ballot for Mayor but decided against it. He got 90 votes.

Former Mayor Joseph J. LaRosa, whom Tobin defeated in a bitter battle in 1977, collected 41 write-ins as did Michael Faherty, who was said to be one of the favorites of the city workers.

To Boycott Stores

City Employees Plan Downtown Squeeze

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

City employees upset with Mayor Tobin's wage freeze now plan their own freeze - on the city's tax rate and on downtown merchants.

A coalition of city employees unions will file a suit this week seeking to prevent the city from setting its tax rate until contract problems with its employees are settled, according to John Keefe of the Hospital, Library and Public Employees Union.

In addition, about 350 union members voted Monday night to support an economic boycott of downtown merchants to protest those contract problems.

City employees have been placed in a bind by the imminent setting of the tax rate - coming in two or three weeks, Keefe said.

Once the rate is set, he added, "that's the last point at which the City Council can appropriate money." That, of course, would mean no raises for city employees. Tobin has not submitted funding for any raises to the city council.

"We have spoken to the appropriate people at the State House, and they tell us that the law is on our side," Keefe said. "We have an excellent chance of getting a restraining order."

Keefe said the suit would be filed in Norfolk County Superior Court in Dedham, either Tuesday or Wednesday. He declined to name the lawyers working on the case - saying it was a coalition of attorneys representing the various unions - or the persons he had spoken to at the State House.

Details on the economic boycott were still sketchy at press time, but Keefe mentioned Columbus Day - Oct. 8, as one possible starting date.

City employees may also be asked to close their accounts with Quincy Center banks before the actual boycott begins, as a warning to businessmen, Keefe

Merrymount Park Building To Be Razed

The Park and Recreation Board decided Monday night to demolish an abandoned wooden frame building in Merrymount Park.

The board followed the recommendation of its executive secretary, Richard J. Koch, who said the empty building had become a center for loitering and drinking and a potential fire hazard.

It had been used as the park's maintenance office and storage facility before the Park Department moved to its present office at 100 Southern Artery.

The building will be razed immediately, Koch said, with the help of Park Department and CETA personnel and any usable materials will be salvaged.

Located at the site for over 30 years, the building had been located in Squantum, but was moved to the park. A number of break-ins have been reported there, Koch noted.

Tobin Asks Union: 'Where's The Money' For Pay Raises?

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Mayor Tobin seemed to think he had picked a friendly audience.

"Members of this union have acted like ladies and gentlemen towards the Mayor's office," he said, explaining his meeting with Local 1139, a city employees' union representing a mixed bag of hospital, public works and other employees, Tuesday night. The meeting was Tobin's first with rank-and-file members since the city's labor problems have come to a head in the past few weeks.

After Tobin offered an emotional and sometimes angry explanation of his problems in funding pay increases for the city's employees, the union members peppered the mayor with a series of questions: some easy, some tough, almost all of them hostile.

The Mayor repeated his claims that a series of fiscal mishaps - Governor King's tax cap, a surprising low amount of state aid, threatened layoffs at General Dynamics' shipyard at the Tregor decision, which will cut the real estate assessments on some of the city's large businesses - have threatened the city's financial base and hindered his ability to grant pay increases.

"If someone can help us find the money, it's yours," Tobin told the union members.

"You're still evading the issue," one person said. "Are we going to get our raises or not?"

"I'm going to ask you again," Tobin said. "Where's the money? I don't know. I'm trying to find it so your family can get a paycheck every week."

"The easiest thing for me to do would be to cave in, and half the city's employees would be laid off," Tobin said.

Giving in to all 14 city unions' contract demands would lead to at least a $22 per $1,000 hike in the tax rate, Tobin said.

"If I announce a $72 tax rate tomorrow, they'll put me in a straitjacket and take me to Medfield," Tobin said.

"I haven't been sitting on my duff doing nothing," the Mayor said. Tobin has launched programs which have collected $600,000 in back excise taxes and $250,000 in unpaid water bills, he said.

"I'm filling all these stores. I'm out talking to developers," he said. "We put on a first class celebration so we can say to people 'Why do you want to go to Plymouth to look at a rock? Why do you want to go to Concord to look at a bridge?'"

When Tobin asked the union members if they wanted a $72 tax rate to fund the raises, there were cries of "Yes."

"If that's what you want, give me a list of whose going to be laid off," he said.

"If you've got a sticker candidate who can do a better job, fine. I'll go across the street and practice law and my salary will go from $25,000 to $75,000."

The questions kept on coming. "Is anybody listening or am I talking to myself?" Tobin wondered at one point.

"We've heard all the problems, what's the solution?" one man asked.

"There has to be a reasonable solution, of reasonable people sitting down and reasoning," Tobin said.

"Go to the auditor's office. Come on up, the book's are open."

"I'm telling the truth; I'd be a damn fool to lie."

Tobin Praises 'Orderly' Pickets During Bicentennial

Mayor Tobin praised the "orderly and professional" conduct of city employees who picketed this weekend's bicentennial activities.

"There was no embarrassment to the city; no heckling of Governor King, Congressman Donnelly or myself," Tobin said.

"Last evening I was so delighted by the way they conducted themselves. I called Robert Garner, president of the teachers' union. I got another union member who passed on the message," Tobin said.

"They were exercising a guarantee given to them by John Adams in the Constitution - the right to assemble. How can you fault them for that?"

About 200 persons picketed Saturday morning's dedication of the new city hall complex. The group gathered in the Vo-Tech High School parking lot and marched past Tobin's Huntley Rd home on the way to the hall.

Picketers carried signs bearing such messages as "Everything Went Up But Our Pay", "Constitutional Rights - How About Fair Bargaining Rights For Teachers?", "Millions For Statues, Thousands For Friends, 0.00 For Nurses", and "King Arthur Refuses To Sit At Our Round Table".

The pickets walked up and down Hancock St. for about 90 minutes before calling it a day.

GLAUCOMA BLINDNESS PREVENTABLE

Most Americans believe that you don't need any eye examination until you have eye trouble. If fewer people thought that, fewer people would go blind. Most specialists are convinced that every adult should have an eye exam at least once every two years - yearly if there's a family history of vision problems.

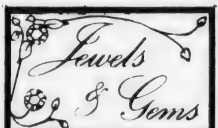

For every person over 35, each checkup should include a tonometer test. This five-minute procedure, involving no pain, can detect early stages of glaucoma, a disease that affects nearly a million Americans who are unaware that they have it. [4,000 a year are blinded by it.]

In untreated glaucoma, liquid pressure builds up within the eyeball until it crushes nerve fibers and small blood vessels that feed the retina and optic nerve. If detected in time, eye drops or surgery can prevent damage to the nerves. But there is no making up for delay: vision lost to glaucoma is vision lost forever.

Antiques are formally defined by the United States Tariff Act of 1930. Antiques are "...works of bronze, marble, terra cotta, parian, pottery or porcelain, artistic antiques and objects of ornamental character or educational value which shall have been produced prior to 1830". Under the category of "objects of ornamental character" comes any kind of jewelry. 1830 was unofficially the beginning of the industrial revolution and mass production in the U.S. and England. Now, any jewelry, or any piece made from a valuable metal, if handcrafted and about 100 years or more old is considered an antique.

added.
 The proposed boycott is "the most effective thing we can do in this city - because it's legal," Keefe said.
 The downtown area cannot stand that kind of pressure," he commented. "The morning after the banks hear you're going to do this, they'll be down to the mayor, asking him to deal fairly."

 "These are the people the mayor listens to," Keefe said.
 He advised those present to announce "as of a certain date, city employees will not buy so much as a Coca-Cola in the downtown business area."
 Hospital worker Robert Fisher was enthusiastic.
 "I think the mayor will look out his window and decide he wants to do something. Maybe he'll call us instead of us calling him," he said.

John R. Herbert, president of the Quincy Co-operative Bank, made the following statement on the proposed boycott:

The purpose of cooperative banks is to provide a way for people to buy homes. Any decrease in deposit funds simply makes less money available for home mortgages. We sympathize with city workers, in their desire for a fair settlement of the wage issue. But we are unable to see what useful purpose withdrawal of funds will accomplish. Our bank has a long and friendly business relationship with a large number of employees in the city of Quincy and we want to keep it that way.

The boycott was approved almost unanimously by the workers, but only after a series of questions on the effect of the move.

Several persons questioned the wisdom of hurting smaller neighborhood stores. It was decided that the boycott would be held only against downtown stores - the limits of which have yet to be decided - and larger stores outside the downtown, like supermarkets.

"It's a pressure tactic; it's simply that," Keefe said. "Everybody uses them, the mayor has his own. If everyone participates and does a good job of it, it'll be over before you know it."

The city employees also voted to continue picketing at selected times and places yet to be announced and formed a publicity committee, to write press releases, sponsor advertisements and monitor the local media.

The unions decided against supporting a single "city employees" candidate for mayor on Tuesday, deciding instead on a more vague resolution asking all employees to "use their own conscience" in deciding who to vote for - as long as it wasn't Mayor Tobin.

They Were Four Glorious Days

They were, without exaggeration, four glorious days for Quincy.

They restored appreciation of our historic yesterday, renewed community pride in today and gave us fresh hope and optimism for tomorrow.

For those four days of the Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial Celebration, Quincy seemed like a close knit family with so much in common. Yes, despite the labor problems involving city employees and teachers which were spotlighted by mass picketing during dedication of the new City Hall Complex. Those problems will eventually be resolved as most problems are.

It was a classy celebration. Mayor Arthur Tobin and the Bicentennial Committee under the able leadership of former Mayor-Senator James McIntyre deserve a "well done." It was truly first-class—all the way.

Some may judge the success of the celebration on the size of the turnouts for two of the "biggies" in the schedule of events: the fireworks display and the parade.

The fireworks were, indeed, something to see. And the parade may have been the best ever to come down Hancock St. Many thousands turned out for these two crowd pleasers. But parades and fireworks always draw big crowds.

The real success of this celebration was marked by the response to some of the meaningful but less spectacular activities.

Like the estimated 7,500 who during the four days visited the John Quincy Adams Birthplace to view the Massachusetts Constitution on display in John Adams' law office where it was drafted 200 years ago. The two birthplaces average only 1,000 more for an entire tourist season.

The precious nine-page document may never again be put on public display outside of the State House archives. Time is taking its toll. So much so that news photographers were asked to "please make every flash count" because the heat and light from the flash speeds the aging.

Another 3,500 visited the Adams Mansion during the four-day period, 2,500 of them at the unique one-night Open House. The Old House served as the summer White House for Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and four generations of the Adams family lived there until 1927.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Sites for the National Parks Service, was a most proud—and gracious—hostess.

Many were visiting this historic site for the very first time. And many said they would come back again. It's a beautiful home, expertly maintained by the National Parks Service under the tender, loving care of Mrs. Harris. Because of her touch, the home still looks lived in. You find yourself thinking that John and Abigail are only out for a walk and will be right back.

The dedications of the new City Hall Complex and Constitution Common were two other events that underscored the celebration's success. Hundreds were on hand for both.

Two long-time friends of Quincy, former Congressman James Burke and former Mayor Thomas Burgin shared the spotlight for the City Hall Complex ceremony. Quite appropriately, too.

Burke was instrumental in getting the $2.4 million in federal funds that financed the new annex. Burgin is the senior ranking former mayor—the city's elder statesman.

Their political careers, both distinguished, are over and it was a little sad to realize it as they spoke. But it didn't stop Burgin, called upon to give a history of the old City Hall that dates back to 1844 to quip that he was "one antique describing another."

And, it didn't stop Burke, who is ailing, from noting that people often ask him, "What are you doing now, Jim?"

"I tell them," he said, "that I get up in the morning and look for my name in the obituary columns. If I don't find it, I shower, shave and have my breakfast."

Congressman Brian Donnelly, who has picked up where Burke left off as a friend of Quincy, spoke that night at the dedication of Constitution Common.

And, that night, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra performed on the newly dedicated Constitution Common. As did the U. S. Naval Academy Band from Annapolis. Two outstanding musical units. Who'll ever forget the QSO closing with a rousing "Stars and Stripes Forever" and the crowd standing and hand clapping to the stirring beat! Patriotism it would appear, has staged a comeback.

Other highlights included:

The appearance of Gov. Edward King at historic First Parish Church and marching in the parade. The Ecumenical Mass at St. John's, the Ecumenical Service and pageant at First Parish Church and the Ecumenical Service at Beth Israel Synagogue. The Mass—with John Adams' portrait on the altar—and the services were so fitting because of the Constitution's guarantee of the right to worship. And they brought all faiths—and even political adversaries together.

They were four beautiful days. Those who did not witness them will never know what they missed.

Those four days will never be seen again. They are already part of our new history.

But they will long be remembered—and cherished for those who were there when it all happened.

Gov. King:

'Recognize And Fulfill Our Responsibilities As Did John Adams'

It was a day for those who love a parade and an estimated 250,000 people did just that Sunday afternoon, all the way from Veterans Memorial Stadium to the Adams Birthplaces in South Quincy.

And, for good measure, there was a speech by Gov. Edward J. King, who was grand marshal of the parade, a concert by the U.S. Naval Academy Band and a glorious bonfire on the shores of Black's Creek.

It was a fitting windup for the four-day celebration of the Bicentennial of the Massachusetts Constitution, which was drafted in Quincy in 1779 by the city's favorite son, John Adams.

"It is very easy to forget just how important it can be to have the right man in the right place at the right time," said King, speaking from the steps of First Parish Church before the parade.

"John Adams was that man in his time."

"King, who is the 61st in a line of governors that began with another Quincy son, John Hancock, called Adams 'one of the most profound and creative men of his time.'"

"Adams knew that the winning of independence and the securing of that independence were two different matters," he said. "Independence was becoming a reality. But independence means self-government and Massachusetts had no legally established government."

"Working in his law office here in Quincy, in roughly one month's time, John Adams composed the historic document that still today, with surprisingly few changes or additions, serves the people of our Commonwealth so well."

"I have a feeling that, if he were here today, John Adams would not be surprised that his basic constitution still serves the Commonwealth he loved so greatly. He knew he lived in a unique moment with a unique opportunity and he made the most of it."

"For those of us here, my wish is a deep and abiding one."

"That wish is that we make the most of what opportunities we have and that we will recognize and fulfill our responsibilities as did John Adams in this very city two centuries ago."

A surprise guest at the pre-parade ceremonies at First Parish Church was Dr. Paul William Garber, consul of Chile in Boston, who told the crowd that Chile's constitution was adopted in 1823.

"If you read it you'll find out that quite a few of the provisions are adopted straight from the United States Constitution, which comes from the Massachusetts Constitution," he said.

GOVERNOR KING

Gov. King was presented a memento of the occasion, a sterling silver and crystal plate, by Bicentennial Committee Chairman James R. McIntyre, couldn't resist noting: "I hope you'll always think about the greatest city in the world when cherry sheet time comes around."

The ceremony on the front steps of the church was preceded by services inside, which included a pageant, written by Otis B. Oakman Jr. of Braintree, depicting the drafting of the Constitution by John and Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin.

Oakman played the role of Richard Cranch, then Old Braintree's Representative in the General Court, and the roles of John and Samuel Adams and Bowdoin were played by Elan Z. Erickson and David M. Jones of Quincy High School and Peter W. Sullivan of Braintree High School in that order.

Also taking part were youngsters from the Adams School in Quincy; the ladies of the Braintree Historical Society, led by Mrs. Nancy Nicotia; Elizabeth Hawes; and Church Warden James W. Y. Smith.

The ecumenical service in United First Parish Church were conducted by the Rev. Keith C. Munson with remarks by the Most Rev. Thomas Daily, auxiliary bishop of Boston, and invitational prayer by Rabbi David Jacobs of Temple Beth El.

The parade stepped off from Veterans Memorial Stadium at 1:15 p.m. in 66 degree weather and proceeded along a route bathed in sunshine. Officials estimated that some 250,000 watched it along the two-mile path to the Birthplaces.

Highlights of the parade were the West Point Cadets, 80 of them, including several women, marching in their familiar gray uniforms; and a number of militia groups dressed in Revolutionary War costumes, including one fire and drum corps. Some fired muskets along the way.

Gov. King, as grand marshal, along with Mayor Arthur H. Tobin and Cong. Brian J. Donnelly, marched as a group as did the Parade Committee, Leo J. Kelly, Carl Johnson, Otis Oakman and George Day.

Four former mayors also marched together, with Joseph J. LaRaia making a rare public appearance alongside James R. McIntyre, Thomas S. Burgin and Walter J. Hannon.

The colors of the old Grand Army of the Republic (GAR) and Spanish War Veterans posts made their first appearance in a parade since they were retired to the Quincy Historical Society. They were carried by a color guard from the George F. Bryan VFW Post.

She Supports School Committee On Position With Teachers

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I was saddened to read that Quincy's teachers were planning to protest over their lack of agreement on some points in the negotiations. As a mother of three children in the Quincy schools, I am aware of the competence and dedication of some Quincy teachers and of some school committee members.

I agree with the School Committee position that teachers should be required to be in the classroom a certain length of time before and after the students. I have talked to some friends who live outside Quincy and they tell me teachers have to stay after school for a definite amount of time in their school systems. I think Quincy teachers should be available to help children after school if it is necessary.

My husband's raises are based on his job performance and he is regularly evaluated by his company. Why can't teachers be evaluated and helped to improve if they need to?

I pay my taxes to the city of Quincy because I am proud to be a resident and proud to send my children to its schools. The cost of living rise is affecting everyone including me. Thoughtful teachers must understand and take into consideration where the money is coming from. Jobs on the public payroll used to mean high security and lower pay, now they are coming to mean high security and higher pay.

Mrs. Curtin, chairwoman of the Q.E.A.'s negotiating team, asked that the teachers let Mrs. Toland the vice chairman of the School Committee, know that they don't like her position. I urge parents and all Quincy taxpayers to let Mrs. Toland and the other members of the school committee know that they like the position they have taken and that they will support them now and at the polls in November.

Major Renovation Project Planned For Camp Massasoit

Plans were announced at a meeting of the Camp Massasoit Development Committee Tuesday, at the Park and Recreation Complex, Southern Artery, for a major renovation and improvement program designed to convert the camp into "one of the finest weekend camping facilities in New England."

During the 40 years that it served as a summer camp for the Boy Scouts of Quincy, from 1927 until 1967 when it ceased to be used as a summer camp, thousands of boys from Quincy enjoyed its advantages and were influenced by the Scouting program offered there.

In more recent years it has been used as a week-end camping area for Scouts from throughout the Greater Boston area and many of the buildings have fallen into a state of disrepair.

Following a slide presentation by Joseph Hurney, President of the Massasoit Campers Association, and a presentation of the plan by Harold Crowley who is coordinating the project for the Boy Scouts, Richard J. Koch, chairman, expressed optimism that with support from the community the necessary funds, materials, and labor should be forthcoming to turn the plan into a reality.

It is estimated that approximately $30,000 will need to be raised to purchase the needed materials and equipment. Volunteer labor will be used to actually complete the renovations and improvements.

Serving on the committee, in addition to Koch are representatives of the government, business, labor and Scouting communities. They include: Henry J. Bertolon, Henry Bosworth, Harold S. Crowley, Buell Fuller, John Fuller, Joseph Gelsomini, John Herbert, Senator Paul Harold, Joseph Hurney, Senate Counsel James R. McIntyre, William A. O'Connell, and Paul Ricca.

New Law Tightens Arson Parole Rules

A new law tightening parole requirements for persons convicted of arson is now in effect, notes Sen. Paul D. Harold.

Harold, who inserted funds in the state budget this year to allow Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti's special arson squad to expand operations statewide, said the new law will require arsonists to remain in prison longer.

"Arson costs thousands of lives and billions of dollars every year nationally, yet we have never treated it as a crime of violence, which is what it really is," Harold said.

The new parole provisions require persons convicted of arson or attempted arson to serve at least two-thirds of their sentences, or a minimum of two years in jail before becoming eligible for parole.

Arson of a dwelling, apartment, dormitory, hospital or institution carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison, while arson of a church, town hall, store, office building, courthouse or factory carries a maximum ten-year sentence.

Also included in the new requirements are convictions for arson with intent to defraud an insurer, which carries a maximum five-year sentence.

The new parole requirements took effect Sept. 7.

Snug Harbor Housing Planned

Executive Secretary Frank C. Hendry of the Quincy Housing Authority revealed tentative plans for development of Sailors Snug Harbor in Germantown as a housing project for veterans' families.

Hendry said house plans and layouts currently pending before the State Housing Board call for 78 four-family, 29 two-family and 30 one-family buildings on the site.

There was also the possibility, he said, of remodeling the present buildings to house a post office, a branch library, a super market and a drug store.

HAVEY DEFEATS GROSSMAN

Clayton L. Havey of Boston defeated Joseph B. Grossman of Quincy 20,808 to 12,509 to gain the Republican nomination for a seat on the governor's council, a post held by Grossman in the 1930s.

Reps. Charles W. Hedges, Avery W. Gilkerson and Alfred B. Keith were nominated for reelection in the First Norfolk and Rep. William W. Jenness to face Democrat Dominic A. Grazio in the Second.

Sen. John D. Mackay easily took the GOP nod over City Councillor Carl W. Anderson and George J. Anderson for the Senate post. Quincy Treasurer John R. Shaugnessy was nominated by Democrats.

LOMBARDI SHINES IN LOSS

Aldo Lombardi raced 85 yards for a first period touchdown to give Quincy High School a 7-0 lead but Brockton wore down the Presidents in the later stages of the game for a 14-7 victory.

SHIPYARD HOURS CHANGED

Weekly hours for 440 workers in the hull, electrical and machinery drafting departments at the Fore River Shipyard were increased from 40 to 48 to handle $180 million worth of new construction.

Sgt. John F. Denneen, Special Officer Charles R. Griffin and Patrolmen William Spencer, Joseph W. Lind and Leighton P. Rogers were elected delegates to the Massachusetts Police Association convention in Springfield.

First Church of Squantum Observes Lord's Supper

The congregation of The First Church of Squantum began its fall season of services Sunday, with an observance of the Lord's Supper.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, Pastor, preached on a subject from the book of 1 Samuel, the first in a series of six sermons on the kings, Saul, David and Solomon.

Tenor James A. Frazer sang "O Lord Most Holy" by Cesar Franck, accompanied by Mary Ruth Scott, church organist, who played the new church organ.

Deacons preparing and serving the Lord's Supper were Ellen Ogilvie, David Midlram, Tore Wallin, Sandra Stohberg, Donald Frazer, Grace Holmes and Harry Holmes.

Bonnie Adams, Richard Williams and Steven Williams assisted the minister.

That night, Dr. Langevin conducted a workshop in Christian Education for 12 church leaders on "What Is A Teacher?"

Monday night the church weight-loss group, WILLPOWER, began. All monies raised are contributed to missions.

The church Bible Study class also resumed focusing on the question, "What Is Our Mission?"

Dancing School Registration took place on Tuesday afternoon in Fellowship Hall. Lessons will begin September 18th, 12:30 - 3 p.m. Anyone interested in these classes should contact Ellen Ogilvie (328-0189) for further information. Classes are sponsored by Friendship Circle.

Choir practices begin this week: Junior Choir, for kindergarten thru 6th grade, Thursdays, 2:30-3:30 p.m.; Senior Choir, for adults, Thursdays, 7:30 p.m.; Youth Choir, for grades 7-10, Sunday mornings, 8:30-9 a.m.

Cinnamon Toast, an intergenerational Christian Education program for persons in the 5th grade and older, including adults, will start September 16 at 8:30 a.m. The group meets for breakfast before their program. No charge.

Sunday School for children from nursery through Grade 4 also begins for the fall at 10:15 a.m. The classes are held simultaneously with the Sunday morning worship service.

Next Sunday the children will be included in the opening of the service to see the puppet show, "David and Goliath." The pastor will preach on the topic, "Battling Giants."

The youth groups of the church kick off on Sunday, September 16, too. The junior high group, ORANGE CRUSH, will meet at 4 p.m. The Senior high group, SEVEN-UP, will meet at 6:30 p.m.

The church is also sponsoring a Parent Support Group one weekday evening each week that group is filled at present.

Seminar To Help Business Get Fair Federal Share

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce are jointly sponsoring a seminar to show the area's businessmen how they can get the most out of the federal government.

The seminar will be held Friday, Sept. 28 starting at 8:30 a.m. at the Lantana in Randolph.

"The U. S. government is the highest dollar volume purchaser of goods and services in the world," said Donnelly. "Fifty two federal agencies buy $80 billion worth of goods and services yearly."

"However, the record shows that all too many businesses in our area, especially the smaller firms, miss out on sales opportunities because of lack of information or 'know how' on the federal procurement process."

Frank O'Connor of the Department of Commerce and Edward J. Fitzgerald of the Department of Defense will explain the programs and individuals will be counseled by agencies and contractors.

The Department of Commerce will hold an hour-long seminar in "Export Opportunities," and the Small Business Administration will hold a similar session on "How We Can Help."

Donnelly will be the main speaker at the luncheon followed by an afternoon session of individual counseling.

"This seminar," said Donnelly, "is designed to guide our business community through the maze of the federal bureaucracy so that your company will be able to obtain its fair share of government contracts."

For reservations, send a check for $8.50 to South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Box 488, Quincy 02169.

'No Community Has Done More'

Constitution's Arrival Stirs Patriotic Pride

By TOM HENSHAW

"There are times," said James R. McIntyre, "when it's good to be an American. This is one of them."

McIntyre was standing on the Presidents Ave. sidewalk behind the Adams Birthplaces in South Quincy, watching two elderly members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., founded 1636, remove a flat wooden box from a Brink's armored car.

It was the culmination of five months of effort by McIntyre and many others, signalling the start of four event-filled days in observation of the 200th anniversary of the drafting of the Massachusetts Constitution at that very spot.

The box contained the original copy of the Constitution, a fragile, priceless parchment document that was making its first trip away from the archives in the State House in nearly two centuries. It was, in a way, coming home.

"In my job as Senate counsel," McIntyre told some 200 people who ignored the threat of rain from Hurricane David to watch the arrival, "I work virtually daily with the Massachusetts Constitution and I marvel at Adams' insight into human nature."

"How thrilling this moment is for me, as a lawyer, as a former legislator, as a citizen, to know that a stone's throw from here, John Adams sat down with James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams and wrote a constitution for Massachusetts, which finally became the constitution for the United States."

The Constitution arrived at the Adams Birthplaces Thursday at 10 a.m. on the button after a slow, hour-long trip in the Brink's car from the State House, escorted by State Police and MDC Police motorcycles.

The caravan was met at the Neponset River Bridge by a further escort of police from Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook and Randolph and continued down Hancock St., past youngsters waving flags at the Sacred Heart and St. Ann's Schools.

Students from the Adams School, wearing colonial costumes, waved tri-cornered hats and signs from the steps of United First Parish Church as the procession crept past the church where the author of the Constitution lies buried.

At its destination, State Secretary Michael Joseph Connolly turned custody of the document over to Mayor Arthur H. Tobin and Mrs. Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Sites for the National Parks Service.

"This transfer," said Connolly, "goes only a short way in thanking this city for what it has done for all of us. No community in our state has done more, has contributed more willingly in both quality and quantity to freedom and liberty."

Connolly eulogized John Adams as "a man whose commitment to the powerless and the common man is so clearly reflected in the Massachusetts Constitution of which he was the principal draftsman."

"No man in our nation's history worked harder or contributed more to the pursuit of freedom, liberty, democracy and equality than John Adams, a man who defined liberty as 'the power to do as we would be done by.'"

"The Massachusetts Constitution is the foundation, the basis of the federal constitution and the Bill of Rights. It is the American spirit, the American ideal put down in words. All men are born free and equal and have certain natural, essential and inalienable rights."

"John Adams believed in these rights and these liberties, not in a time like the present when they are already ours, but at a time when stands such as his were considered treasonous."

"We take this document for granted today for we have always had the freedoms, rights and liberties it has bestowed upon us. To someone who has lived without the freedom we take for granted, the Massachusetts Constitution could be God's own handiwork."

"John Adams died 153 years ago on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence but he still lives every time a man is treated with dignity, liberty and equality."

"As long as Massachusetts works for individual and civil liberties, for the equality and freedom of all men, John Adams will be alive."

"The only way we can truly honor this man and this document is to pledge ourselves to preserve and maintain the freedoms and rights he gave us."

The box containing the Constitution was carried into the John Quincy Adams Birthplace by two men from the National Park Service and the document was placed on display in a specially made case in John Adams' old law office, where it was written.

A total of 937 people viewed the Constitution on the first day (Thursday) including 150 Quincy school children. The line was particularly long between 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. shortly after pictures of the arrival ceremony were shown in television news shows.

The National Parks Service had three staff interpreters on duty the first day to explain the Constitution and Adams-related materials that were on display. They were so busy that four and five interpreters were on duty on ensuing days.

Secretary Connolly was presented with a crystal and silver bicentennial plate, made especially for the occasion by Michael Stone of Stone's Jewelry Co., Quincy. It is engraved with replicas of the Adams Birthplaces.

Mayor Tobin also conferred honorary citizenship in Quincy on Connolly, warning him that he could soon expect "an honorary tax bill."

PARTIES FEARED

John Adams wrote in 1780, "There is nothing which I dread so much as a division of the republic into two great parties, each arranged under its leader, and concerting measures in opposition to each other. This, in my humble apprehension, is to be dreaded as the greatest political evil under our Constitution."

Constitution Should Be Required Reading, Says Burke

Nearly 2,000 Witness Dedication of New City Hall Complex

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Music, a 1,000-pound cake, pickets, speeches and beautiful sunny skies combined to make the dedication of the new City Hall Complex a memorable one for the estimated near 2,000 persons attending.

The music was provided by the U.S. Naval Academy show band, the cake by Montilio's of Quincy, and the picketing by disgruntled city employees. Many of the city's leading political lights, past and present, gave their thoughts on the occasion, although nobody took credit for the weather.

The keynote speaker, former Congressman James S. Burke, credited with helping to land the $2.4 million grant which financed the new annex, as well as aiding other federal projects in the city, said "It was a great privilege for me to have a very small part in all of those."

Burke paraphrased Douglas MacArthur's statement that "old soldiers never die" by saying "old congressmen never die - they just appear at certain celebrations like this."

"It was a great honor to represent this great historic city for 20 years," said Burke, who stepped down from his seat in Congress last year. "In my time in Congress, I was always concerned with the great tradition of this district."

Noting the dual nature of the weekend's festivities, which also honored the bicentennial of the state constitution, Burke said "it should be required reading for eighth graders and high school students to read that constitution. It is a statement of our philosophy for freedom that has stood the test of time."

The former congressman was introduced by City Council

President John C. Ann, who said "I'm so proud of the work he did in the nation's capital for his home district... Jim, we welcome you, we respect you and we love you."

Burke, on behalf of his successor, Brian Donnelly, presented the city with a flag which had flown over the nation's Capitol.

City officials later presented Burke with a crystal glass and sterling silver replicas of the John Quincy Adams birthplace, in appreciation of his years of efforts for the city.

Master of Ceremonies for the dedication was five-time Mayor Thomas S. Burgin, first elected to public office in 1924, at the age of 22. Burgin has since served the city as city councillor, mayor, state representative and state senator, among other posts. He is the oldest living former Mayor.

Invited by Mayor Arthur Tobin and Bicentennial Committee chairman James McIntyre to speak on the history of the old city hall, Burgin described this as asking "one antique to describe another." But few who watched the spry 77-year-old on the podium would agree.

Burgin introduced Tobin by noting he first met the future mayor many years ago when he, Burgin, was serving one of his terms as the city's highest elected officer.

"Someday you might be mayor too," Burgin told the boy, who grew up to fulfill the prediction.

Tobin, who took the podium to a handful of boos from the city workers picketing nearby, noted "this is another great and historic moment for this city," and said he was proud to be mayor during the bicentennial.

In an obvious reference to the city's labor problems, he said that, although the city was having tough times, "Quincy will survive. It's been here a long time and it will be here for a long time to come."

Also called upon to speak was T. Owen Trainor, the architect whose firm designed, engineered and supervised construction of the new city offices.

"I cannot imagine a greater tribute than to be called upon to construct a building to house the government of one's community."

Trainor credited former Mayor Joseph LaRocca for his "foresight in getting the ball rolling and his personal commitment, his vote of confidence and moral support" for the project. The architect also thanked Tobin for "his continued support and leadership."

Rev. Bedros Baharian, citywide planning coordinator, said "this building has been overdue for 50 years. It is a building not only of beauty, but of necessity."

Rev. Baharian offered "hats off" to the city employees who labored for years "under crowded, jammed, impossible working conditions" in the old City Hall.

TAXATION WITHOUT

Massachusetts so cherished its newly won independence that when Congress tried to levy a 5 per cent duty on imports to finance the war in 1781 the General Court debated for nearly a year whether an outside authority could collect taxes in the Bay State.

SEVEN SELECTMEN

The town of Braintree had seven selectmen in 1779, two from each of the three precincts and one chosen at large. They were Capt. Daniel Arnold Hobart Clark, Thomas Penniman, Capt. Peter B. Adams, Capt. Samuel Holbrook, Joseph White Jr. and Ebenezer Thayer Jr.

'Elegant Edifice'

Old City Hall Cost $19,115 -- In 1844

Constructed at a time when Quincy's population was 4,000, granite was plentiful and skilled workmen earned $2 a day, the old City Hall seems an astounding bargain.

Former Mayor Thomas S. Burgin told the approximate 2,000 persons gathered at the dedication of the new City Hall Complex that the old hall cost a grand total of $19,115.93, including $1,000 for land purchase in 1844.

Nowadays, that sum would barely cover the price of 19 panes of glass for the building's shiny new annex.

Four different contractors were hired to construct each of the old building's sides, Burgin noted. The front section - modeled after Boston's Merchants Exchange Building on State Street - cost $4,244.

The contractors who constructed the left and right sides of the hall received $2,300 and $2,375. The building's back section cost the then - Town of Quincy $600.

The town treasurer's 1845 report on the new Town House expenses includes other "amazing information," Burgin said.

The architect, Solomon Willard, received $280 for "drawing plans and superintending the building for five months."

Nathan Goss received $1.75 per day for 75 days for stone work - which earned him the tidy sum of $132.56. Other stone fitters received $2 per day.

The Quincy Patriot back then reported "the new Town House, when completed, will be one of the most elegant edifices in New England. It will be 50 feet by 80 feet and 35 feet, six inches to the eaves...of fine hammered stone, with four beautiful fluted pilasters (columns). Within the building will be the new town hall on the second floor, capable of seating 1,200 (almost one-third of the city's population).

"The old town house remains in use today, although many times outgrown and updated, as Quincy's 'official' City Hall," Burgin noted, "a great tribute to the enduring qualities of Quincy granite, to Solomon Willard the architect and superintendent, and to the workmanship of that day."

The town house, constructed when Quincy was still a town, became 'City Hall' in 1889, when Quincy achieved city status.

"I hope you got more than $280," Burgin told architect T. Owen Trainor, who designed the new annex.

"That was my profit," Trainor quipped.

Donnelly Keynotes At Constitution Common Dedication

'The People Will Restore Confidence'

"You know," said Cong. Brian J. Donnelly, "we ought to do this more often."

And, indeed, it appeared that the more than 2,000 people who attended the dedication of Constitution Common Saturday night to listen to the Quincy Symphony Orchestra and the U.S. Naval Academy Band, agreed him.

It was shirtsleeves or jacket weather, either would have been comfortable, and those in attendance clearly enjoyed themselves from the time Irving Isaacson and Anthony Pusateri raised the flag until the last notes of "God Bless America" died away.

Donnelly, the keynote speaker, noted that the Bicentennial celebration of the drafting of the Massachusetts Constitution by John Adams and friends comes at a time when the United States is facing a period of uncertainty at home and in the world.

"We face a tremendous lack of confidence by the people of this nation in the ability of their government to deal with the problems that so greatly affect us," he said.

"It is significant that this is happening now in Quincy for, as John Adams meant it to be, it will be the people and not just their elected officials who will restore confidence that this government will be able to solve its problems.

"As you see our flag being raised and listen to our National Anthem you can't help but be filled with pride that this great nation to which our forefathers came to seek freedom is going to be the home for our children and our children's children and their children's children after that."

"I think it is incumbent on us today, not only those of us who are in government, but the citizens of this great city, too, to demand that those rich traditional values be kept.

"Together we will solve the problems that face us, together and in the historic perspective, which very few people in this country have, but which we have in abundance here in Quincy."

Donnelly was presented with a sterling silver and crystal plate, one of four made for the occasion by Michael Stone of Stone's Jewelry.

A surprise award was presented to former Mayor James R. McIntyre, a distinguished citizen's award for his six months of effort as chairman of the Constitution Bicentennial Committee, which organized the four-day celebration.

Dr. James R. Cameron of Eastern Nazarene College, who made the presentation, cited McIntyre as "a student of history, as well as a student of government and a practitioner of law."

"He has a deep understanding of our institutions, our historical traditions and our values. Working with him in recent months I have become particularly aware of his sense of community.

"It was his desire that every segment of our city should participate in the planning and that there should be something in our activities for everyone from the smallest children to the senior citizens."

Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Sites, called McIntyre "the most accurate authority on John Adams that I have met for a very long time."

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Robert E. Brown, followed the dedication ceremonies with a pops concert that began with Dvorak's Symphony in E Minor from "The New World", and continued through "The Washington Post March" and "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Aletha Doolittle Munro, soprano and a member of the faculty at Eastern Nazarene College, was featured in "Summertime" and "Over the Rainbow."

The evening wound up with the U.S. Naval Academy Band, led by Chief Warrant Officer Doyle Church, belting out a patriotic medley.

Guests on the dais included Mayor Arthur H. Tobin, Committee Chairman James R. McIntyre, former Mayor Thomas S. Burgin, Sen. Paul D. Harold, former Mayor Walter J. Hannon,

A fitting memorial...

John Quincy Adams occupied the White House in 1828 when United First Parish Church, the Stone Temple, was built of Quincy granite, a fitting memorial to the enduring work of the men who founded the state and the nation.

Two presidents of the United States, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and their wives, are buried side by side in vaults in the grotto of the Church.

The cornerstone of the Stone Temple was laid on June 11, 1827, and in it was placed a silver plate with the inscription: 'A temple for the worship of God, and for public instruction in the doctrines and duties of the Christian religion.'

Bicentennial Tab $40,000, Most From Private Donors

It cost Quincy a little more than $40,000 to stage its four-day Constitution Bicentennial extravaganza, with more than half of the tab picked up by the business and banking communities.

The spectacle was enjoyed by hundreds of thousands, including estimates of 250,000 for Sunday's parade, 100,000 for Thursday's fireworks and up to 8,000 for the wind-up bonfire in Merrymount Park.

A total of 7,515 viewed the original of the Massachusetts Constitution during the four days it was on display at the John Quincy Adams Birthplaces on Franklin St., South Quincy.

Some 2,500 people jammed the Adams Mansion for the Open House Friday night and 1,000 more visited the Old House at various other times between Thursday morning and Sunday night.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Harris estimated a good weekend crowd in early September at 400.

"If it wasn't for the banking and business communities we would not have had the first class celebration that we had," said Mayor Tobin.

He said that as of Monday morning the Bicentennial Committee had received about $23,250 in private donations to go with the $17,000 that was appropriated by the City Council in May.

The city money was divided up $12,000 for the massive granite sculpture by Ed Monti, which was not finished at the time of the dedication of Constitution Common, and $5,000 for the parade.

"The $5,000 was not enough for the parade," said Tobin. "We wanted to go first class and it came in at $10,000. Rather than go back to the Council, I went out and raised the money."

The cost of the fireworks, said the Mayor, was $14,000 - $12,500 for the fireworks themselves and $1,500 for the two barges from which they were fired out over the bay.

A sampling of other expenses included $1,500 for banners and flyers promoting the four-day celebration and $173 to feed the West Point cadets who were featured in the parade.

Was it all worth it?

"I heard a lady on Party Line on WJDA," said Tobin. "She was saying what a wonderful time she and her husband had at the dedication of Constitution Common. It was a beautiful night and strangers were out talking to one another. She said they'd like to see more of that. And so would I."

59 Years Of History And Progress In The 'City Of Presidents'

An occasion like this the Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial is not complete without a brief tracing of the Bank's development from that cold December 9, 1919 meeting when a handful of Fore River Shipyard men sought a banking charter, to the present day Presidential Cooperative Bank. On January 16, 1920, the charter was granted, and a month later, the bank opened for business in the shipyard itself.

As the bank grew, quarters were moved into the city on Hancock Street, over the present offices of the Burgin, Plater Insurance Company. Growth again dictated a move; this time to the South Shore National Bank Building on Chestnut Street, in 1947. And in 1965, the bank moved to modern, more spacious quarters on Granite Street, where we now celebrate our 59th birthday. From its beginning as a facility for shipworkers' savings at Fore River, the bank has grown steadily to the point where depositors now come from many parts of the country as well as the greater South Shore area.

We are proud to be part of Quincy's past and of its future.

Charles Francis Adams Repeats 158-Year Old Speech To West Point Cadets

A little bit of history repeated itself on Sunday - and is scheduled to be repeated again in 2021.

The 80 West Point cadets who marched in the Constitution Bicentennial parade were invited to tea at the Adams Mansion - just like a similar group who visited the mansion in 1821.

The cadets at that Aug. 14, 1821 visit, had supper with John Adams and heard a speech by the 85-year old president. That talk is believed to be Adams' last public address. He died in 1826.

Louise Catherine Adams, wife of President John Quincy Adams, described the day as follows:

John Adams' speech was repeated Sunday by his great-great - great - grandson, Charles Francis Adams, chairman of the board of the Raytheon Corporation.

Afterwards, Mrs. Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site invited the cadets back for the bicentennial of Adams' original speech, in 2021.

In response to a question by one of the cadets, Mrs. Harris promised to be around for the bicentennial recreation of Adams' speech.

Sunday's bill of fare was almost a duplication of the 1821 dinner. Roast beef, ham, chicken, bread and butter, cupcakes, coffee and over six gallons of punch were consumed by 78 of the 80 cadets. Two unlucky fellows were assigned to stand guard outside, to guard the cadets' firearms, and were remembered only after the food was gone.

The text of John Adams' speech, repeated by Charles Francis Adams on Sunday, reads:

"My Young Fellow-Citizens and Fellow-Soldiers,--

"I rejoice that I live to see so fine a collection of the future defenders of their country in pursuit of honor under the auspices of the national government.

"A desire of distinction is implanted by nature in every human bosom, and the general sense of mankind, in all ages and countries, cultivated and uncultivated, has excited, encouraged, and applauded this passion in military men more than in any other order of society. Military glory is esteemed the first and greatest of glories. As your profession is at least as solemn and sacred as any in human life, it behooves you seriously to consider, what is glory?

"There is no real glory in this world or any other but such as arises from wisdom and benevolence. There can be no solid glory among men but that which springs from equity and humanity: from the constant observance of prudence, temperance, justice, and fortitude. Battles, victories, and conquests, abstracted from their only justifiable object and end, which is justice and peace, are the glory of fraud, violence, and usurpation. What was the glory of Alexander and Caesar? 'The Glimmering' which those 'livid flames' in Milton 'cast, pale and dreadful,' or 'the sudden blaze,' which 'far round illumin'd Hell.'

"Different--far different is the glory of Washington and his faithful colleagues! Excited by no ambition of conquest or avaricious desire of wealth; irritated by no jealousy, envy, malice, or revenge; prompted only by the love of their country, by the purest patriotism and philanthropy, they persevered, with invincible constancy, in defence of their country, her fundamental laws, her natural, essential and inalienable rights and liberties, against the lawless and ruthless violence of tyranny and usurpation. The biography of these immortal captains, and the history of their great actions, you will read and ruminate night and day. You need not investigate antiquity, or travel into foreign countries, to find models of excellence in military commanders, without a stain of ambition or avarice, tyranny, cruelty, or oppression towards friends or enemies.

"In imitation of such great examples, in the most exalted transports of your military ardor, even in the day of battle, you will be constantly overawed by a conscious sense of the dignity of your characters as men, as American citizens, and as Christians.

"I congratulate you on the great advantages you possess for attaining eminence in letters and science, as well as in arms. These advantages are a precious deposit, which you ought to consider as a sacred trust, for which you are responsible to your country and to a higher tribunal. These advantages, and the habits you have acquired, will qualify you for any course of life you may choose to pursue.

"That I may not fatigue you with too many words, allow me to address every one of you in the language of a Roman dictator to his master of the horse, after a daring and dangerous exploit for the safety of his country, 'Macte virtute esto.' " (virtue will be your reward)

THE PAST

In the special Historic Quincy edition of The Quincy Sun, published June 17, 1976, we presented a message which we felt was pertinent to the times. In the three years intervening, conditions have developed which seem to make that message even more pertinent today. For that reason we present again our thoughts stated at that time.

If the founding fathers could look upon us now, what wondrous changes they would see--witchcraft, perhaps they would think--because only magic could explain airplanes, space shuttles, automobiles, radio, TV, the myriad electronic and medical marvels and even the taken-for-granted comforts of the modern home.

We've come a long way in these 200 years--change has been rapid and seemingly phenomenal. There is no reason to think it will all stop now.

What wondrous sights will grace the eye one hundred--two hundred years hence!

But change, per'se, need not always be good. It can bring increased benefits to mankind and it can bring woe and misery. Now, more than ever before we must guard and control our changes, seeking not just the whim and emotion of the moment, but the really meaningful change which truly bodes well for all living things, human kind, animal kind, and the precious products of the land and of the sea.

We, the human race, have the destiny of that race and of the world in our scientific and political control now. How wisely we respond to the needs, how much we are willing to sacrifice to attain those needs, will determine the path and the end results.

Can we respond? Will we respond?

Introducing the seventh way to transport liquefied natural gas.

Safely, efficiently, reliably.

You're looking at the seventh way to transport LNG. The LNG Taurus.

In the past two years, General Dynamics' Shipbuilding Division at Quincy, Massachusetts, delivered six other 936-foot Liquefied Natural Gas tankers. LNG Taurus is the most recent to join this American-built, American-registered and American-crewed fleet of ships delivering natural gas from Indonesia to Japan.

Designed to stringent safety specifications and monitored by sophisticated electronic navigational aids, each tanker can carry 125,000 cubic meters of natural gas, liquefied at -260°F , in five, 750-ton aluminum spheres.

With seven ships now on the 5,000-mile round trip between Indonesia and Japan, more than 400 billion cubic feet of gas will be delivered annually to Japanese consumers.

Demonstrated safety and proven performance from America's premier LNG shipbuilder.

38 Units Being Razed Squantum Gardens Demolition Starts

Demolition of 38 units of Navy housing at Squantum Gardens began Monday with ceremonial swings of the hammer by Cong. Brian J. Donnelly (D-Boston) and Rep. Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy).

Donnelly praised the Navy for its cooperation in getting rid of the barracks-style buildings which date back to World War II, source of annoyance to the neighborhood for years.

"It was Cong. Donnelly who supplied the extra push to get the demolition rolling," said Morrissey, who has been seeking action on the buildings throughout his three years in the State House.

The site of the 38 units will become 2.6 acres of recreational land and 58 other units will be renovated under a $500,000 Navy appropriation.

Quincy City Club To Plan Christmas Charitable Projects

The Quincy City Club will hold a fall breakfast meeting Sunday, Sept. 16, at 10 a.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

Plans will be formulated for the annual Christmas Charitable Projects for 1979.

Richard J. Koch, president of the Quincy City Club, will report on the civic endeavors conducted during the summer months.

The Quincy City Club, chartered Sept. 12, 1974, is a charitable and civic organization consisting of a membership of 100. Purpose is to serve those confined to hospitals and institutions during the Christmas holiday season.

Tickets will be available for the fifth annual dinner dance to be held Thursday, Oct. 18, at the George F. Bryan VFW Hall, Broad St., Quincy.

Members and friends of the City Club are welcome to attend and may contact Co-chairmen Richard M. Morrissey or Joseph M. Lydon for reservations.

A social hour will start at 6:30 p.m. A catered roast beef dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m. Music for dancing by Les Smith's Orchestra until midnight.

The City Club recently presented a gift to the City Council for use at Quincy City Hospital. Last Christmas, the City Club received a $1,000 donation from the Richard J. Conboy Family to find a suitable gift in his memory from the organization. Several suggestions were made and the Conboy family found the audio visual aid equipment most appropriate. Items included a courier-16 projector with lamp and 6 medical cartridge programs with topics pertaining to heart disease.

The equipment is assigned to the Intensive Care Unit of the hospital for heart diseased patients. Dr. Gerard L. Gaughan and members Donald E. Conboy and Richard Meade were instrumental in finalizing the project.

The official presentation was one year to the day of Richard Conboy's death and a plaque bearing his name is attached to the projector.

Public Statement of Q.H.A.

It has come to our attention that the Energy Coalition for State Housing Tenants plans a demonstration at the meeting of the Quincy Housing Authority on September 13, 1979.

Too often, in an emotional crisis such as energy, misunderstandings and sensationalism exist. This statement will hopefully enlighten the public as to the position of the Quincy Housing Authority on the energy matter.

The Quincy Housing Authority, as caretakers of public housing in Quincy, and in attempting to obtain the maximum benefits of public funds made available to us, are as equally concerned in this problem, as the residents.

While we agree in principle, with the efforts of the Energy Coalition for State housing tenants, the Quincy Housing Authority intends to deal with the authorized representatives of the residents, the Harborview Residents Committee, to resolve this crucial question of energy and conservation.

While not avoiding our responsibility, and with wishes to help resolve the problem, the energy crisis is national in scope and immediate help must come through State and Federal agencies. While realizing the plight of our residents, the Housing Authority can only operate within the laws promulgated by the legislature and the regulations of the Department of Community Affairs.

We also realize the hardship and responsibility of public assistance families (AFDC), the working poor, the elderly, the disabled and the handicapped who do not have the benefit of rent subsidy.

It has been pointed out that a tenant in public housing, and receiving public assistance, living in a State aided development, pays no more than 20% of their net income, or an average of $46. per month for a two bedroom apartment. The utilities outlined by the Coalition are heat, $60.; electricity, $30. and gas, $5.00. In comparison to other subsidized programs, we find that these utility costs are excessive for a family of three in a two bedroom subsidized apartment.

The same family receives other benefits, such as food stamps, medical help, access to a hardship fund for emergencies, flat grants each quarter, and payment to day care centers for working mothers.

Our sympathies are with the same size family, residing in a two bedroom apartment, and receiving public assistance, who is not in public housing, nor subsidized to this extent. This also includes the elderly, handicapped, disabled on a limited income and the working poor.

The working poor are also suffering as a result of the energy crisis. A working person, receiving $5.00 per hour, has an average take-home pay of $150., or $600. per month. He/she does not qualify for food stamps, must pay for his own medical expenses, and utilities and other work related expenses. This working person is paying in excess of 56% of his income for a two bedroom apartment, at todays current rental figures, for rent and utilities.

The Quincy Housing Authority is making every effort to have all of the buildings in the State aided development re-sided, insulated and have new storm doors and windows installed, through the Modernization Program in an orderly and progressive manner, as funds are made available.

In order to pay the utility charges in these developments, it would amount to an additional $150,000. annually. The current rents charged do not cover operating costs, and this additional subsidy would be paid for from public funds in order to maintain this housing.

The Quincy Housing Authority is regulated by legislation and does not have the funds to pay for the utilities or winterization programs unless they are within the regulations and the law, with additional monies.

The Federal Register of Tuesday April 3, 1979, specifically states on Page 20011, Section 676.24 and 676.26 and Page 20029, specifies areas that the winterization program, as proposed by the Coalition would conflict with Federal Law.

It would seem that the tenants could help themselves in the energy crisis by adhering to all current conservation efforts and recommendations put forth by the utility companies and the Federal Government. Copies of these suggestions and recommendations are available at the office of the Quincy Housing Authority, upon request. These recommendations could be incorporated as a part of the local tenants Newsletter.

The operation of the State aided family housing is governed by law and regulations from the Executive Office of Communities and Development which requires that the Housing Authority set the rent of the family. The rent is arrived at by allowing a deduction of five per cent of gross family income, plus a deduction of $300. for each member of the household, other than the head, a deduction of extraordinary medical expenses, deduction for union dues, special equipment, clothes and unusual transportation costs to the job, a deduction for medical insurance and certain other items. After the net income is established, the Housing Authority then computes the rent at 20% of that amount, and the family is responsible for the heat and utilities.

In fiscal year 1979, the deficit amounted to $69,327.85, and the Executive Office of Communities and Development paid only $5,900. against this loss, and the balance is paid from public funds.

The Quincy Housing Authority has obtained from the Commonwealth a sum of $911,261. for Modernization of bathrooms, re-siding to correct code violations due to a lead paint problem, new roofs and insulation, which is above and beyond the regular funding. For Fiscal Year 1980, funds have been approved in the amount of $271,133. for residing, roofs and insulation. This is to contrast the assistance received from the U. S. Department of HUD for 180 family apartments in the amount of $1,440,147. The Quincy Housing Authority does not have the funds to pay for the fuel and utility costs in the Snug Harbor family development, and the thirty six apartments at West Acres. Using the figures submitted by the Energy Coalition, there would be an additional cost of some $500,000. In order to accomplish this, the law and regulations would have to be changed and the legislature would have to appropriate at least one half million dollars for the Quincy Housing Authority, which is only one of 228 housing authorities in the Commonwealth.

The Quincy Housing Authority suggests the following conservation efforts to be practiced by the tenants.

Lower thermostats, shutting out lights that are not needed, turning off radios and T.V.s when no one is in attendance, keep drapes and furniture away from radiators, pull shades down on non-sunny side of apartment, and at night, lift shades and allow sun's rays to warm apartments whenever possible, use as little hot water as feasible, do not waste hot water, use cold water and proper detergent in automatic washers, use short cycles in washer when possible.

Keep outside doors and storm windows closed tightly, keep automatic door closers working properly, keep windows closed tightly and locked during cold weather. These suggestions are taken from the HUD and utility companies recommendations for conservation of energy.

All of these measures can save costly oil, gas and electricity. Only by working together can public agencies, home owners, tenants in public housing, and tenants in private housing hope to achieve relief from this national energy crisis.

Quincy Hosts Cambridge Rindge And Latin

Tom Fitzgerald starts his second year as Quincy football coach Saturday when the Presidents host Cambridge Rindge and Latin in a 10:30 a.m. Suburban League opener at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

And, after a heartening scrimmage last Saturday against Arlington, Fitzie and his staff are hopeful of improving upon last year's 5-5 mark.

"We were listless in our first two scrimmages against Everett and Boston Tech, but we really showed something against Arlington," Fitzgerald said. "We scored five or six touchdowns while they scored only once. We moved the ball well both on the ground and in the air and the defense, which is very inexperienced, looked good."

"I know Cambridge, with a lot of veterans, will be stronger than Arlington, but we were very heartened by our showing in that last scrimmage."

Quincy will be out to avenge last year's 7-6 loss at Cambridge where the Presidents had a wide edge in everything but the score.

Fitzie will start an experienced team on offense with Charlie McCall or Sean Burke and Paul Bandera at end, Fran Duggan and Co-Capt. Geoff Cafilisch at tackle, Howie Chadbourne and Tom Rand at guard and Jeff Heath at center. This is a good sized line with Duggan going 225, Chadbourne 210, Cafilisch 215, Bandera 205 and Heath and Rand 195 each.

Dave Austin is back at quarterback with Co-Capt. Tom Brennan and Ed Iodice or Bill Flynn halfbacks and Dan Goldrick and Scott Richardson sharing the fullback chores.

"Iodice has been a pleasant surprise," Fitzgerald said. "He was outstanding for the sophomores a year ago and has looked excellent both offensively and defensively."

Others who will play on offense are Mike Abboud and Paul Flynn at halfback, Ron Pettinelli at quarterback, Mike Monahan at fullback, Scott Anson and Billy Hall at end, Bob Burns and John Varrasso at tackle, Walter Kilgallon, Paul D'Angelo and John Cristello at guard and Grover Hensley at center. He will snap the ball back on punts.

Pettinelli, Ed Quinlan and Jim Wilson are all working hard at punting but Fitzie doesn't know who will take care of this important job.

On defense Ed Mackey and Quinlan will be at end, Mike Petrillo, Duggan and Varrasso at tackle, Jim McNeil and Steve Picot at nose guard, Lou Matthews, who has looked particularly good, and Kilgallon linebackers and Paul Martin, Brennan, Iodice, McCall, Bill Flynn and John Kavanaugh in the secondary.

Hensley, Monahan, Abboud, Goldrick and Burns will also see their share of action on defense.

"The offense is much more experienced than the defense," Fitzgerald pointed out. "Austin did some good passing and Brennan and Iodice, in particular, ran well in the Arlington scrimmage. The defense has come along about as expected. We have a lot of work to do on defense but we were very pleased with the improvement shown against Arlington."

Olindy's In Fast-Pitch Title Series

For the second time in three years Olindy's Lanes has advanced to the championship series of the South Shore Fast-Pitch Softball League.

Olindy's advanced by upsetting defending league champion Beau's Place in two straight games. The last time Olindy's appeared in the finals two years ago it won the championship, topping the Torrey Club.

Managers Tom O'Connell and Jim Mezzetti credit this year's success to outstanding pitching and defense. The pitching staff, led by fireballer Jerry Thomes and crafty veteran Rod Shallow, shut down the opposition's offense while Olindy's mighty offense exploded.

The offensive is led by Mike Walsh, Joe Alicandro, Brad Kimball, Brian Osborne and Eddie MacDonald. The team's great speed also played a prominent part in the team's success.

Defensively the leaders are Bob MacIntosh at second base, Eric Tuori at shortstop, John Menard in right field and Paul Mattes in center field.

Olindy's opponent in the finals is the league's Cinderella team, the Weymouth Flyers, who pulled off a major upset by knocking out previously unbeaten Torrey Club, two games to one.

North Cross Country Opens Against Milton

The North Quincy cross country team, now in its sixth season in the Suburban League, opens today (Thursday) against Milton in a non-league meet and next Tuesday will open its league season at home against Weymouth South.

Although Lou Tozzi's teams have a 43-15 record in league competition, the Raiders have been falling on hard times recently due to declining interest, being the smallest school in the league and having no junior high program.

Tozzi expects considerable trouble against this year with only five runners, including two sprinters working out for the first time.

"Being off double sessions and having locker rooms and facilities without busing to practice everyday is going to help, but there just isn't any interest and we are in the process of making major changes in our program now that we are in the new building," Tozzi said. "We hope to rebuild interest and again become as successful as we were a few years ago."

"We were 6-6 last year and graduated our top two runners, John McGuigan and Jim Coughlin. However, we have had at least one state meet medalist every year with 10 in our five years in the league (McGuigan last year)."

Last season North had only five runners, but finished fourth in the league championships and was in the top 10 at the state meet for the fifth straight year.

"You need five runners to get a team score and this is going to make it rough for us," Tozzi said. "Ten is the suggested team size in a varsity race. We had some younger runners the last two years who we thought would be contributing now, but they have quit the program, so we'll simply have to do our best with what we have."

The top returnee is Capt. Mike Ricciuti, a senior, who has done 10:10 in the two-mile, has a fine attitude and could be one of the league's surprise runners this year. He is also an excellent student who has already received the Harard Prize Book Award.

Senior veteran John Barrett is the number two runner, has done 10:15 in the two-mile and Tozzi is pleased with the progress shown by him in two years.

Juniors Gary Morin and Gerry McCormick are coming along well and will be key men in North's hopes and senior Bill Timmons, a veteran, is being counted upon for points.

Also working out are sprinters Jim Alban, a senior, and junior Walter McConaghy, who Tozzi hopes will be able to help the Raider cause.

Raiders Inexperienced

North Opens Against Oldtime Rival Milton

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy football team, hoping to rebound from a disappointing 3-7 1978 season, goes over the line to Milton Saturday to face oldtime rival Milton in a 1:30 p.m. non-league game.

Milton, coached by Jack Bowes, a former North Quincy assistant, is in the Bay State League and North, with alumnus Dave Burke at the helm for the fifth season, plays in the Suburban League.

Last fall Milton edged the Raiders, 7-6, and the North coaches expect a lot of trouble Saturday.

"Milton should have a real tough team this year," said assistant coach Ted Sadowski. "Two years they had a great sophomore team which beat us and they are now seniors with a year of varsity experience behind them."

At this writing Burke had not decided on any starting position and said all positions were wide open. The Raiders lack experience both on offense and defense but Dave has been pleased with the Raiders' improvement in pre-season scrimmages.

"We have used a lot of players in our scrimmages because of Brintree and Scituate," Burke said. "I haven't definitely decided on any starting spot and a lot of boys will get a chance to play."

Burke said it will be either Joe Mullen or Jack Leone at Left end on offense, John Buckley or Lou DiPietro left tackle, Eddie Miller

The quarterback job is wide open and it will be either Kevin Durkin, Jack Brown or Dave Cavanaugh.

"All three show strength in different areas and I'm trying to find one who can do it all," Burke said.

At left halfback it will be Capt. Leo Graham or Rick Anderson with Bill Dailey or Joe Crifo the right half and Pat Carroll or Bob McCormack at fullback.

The starting defensive unit is as undecided as the offensive group with Glen Segalla, Joe Cremin or Pete McDounough at end, John Gorczyca, Glen Ross, Bill Feeney or newcomer Bill Stacy at tackle (the 6-3 210-pound junior playing for the first time is coming along fast), Petrillo, Dave Howley or Paul O'Sullivan the line backers, Graham the safety man, Tony Camillo, Steve Mastorelli, Anderson or Gino Pillard at halfback and Bill Cooke, Jim Nolan, Pete Alibrandi or Steve Pick the corner backs.

"Our passing game worked better than our running game in the scrimmages," Burke said. "We are still working hard in all areas and are working on our punting game."

North's managers this season are Dave Dunbrack and Bob Neal.

NORTH QUINCY Football Coach Dave Burke and Capt. Leo Graham seem pleased with prospects as the Raiders get ready to play at Milton Saturday.

Board Grants Licenses

Miniature Golf Course For Bracket St.

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN
Wonder Realty Trust of Boston, will spend $100,000 to construct a miniature golf course at 79-111 Bracket St. now that it has the go ahead from the Quincy Licensing Board.

The board granted amusement, common victualer and Lord's Day licenses to the company at Tuesday's meeting.

Atty. Peter Eley told the board that the golf course will be adjacent to the Quincy Wonderbowl, also run by Wonder Realty.

He said the course is expected to be operational by April or May of 1980, and will be open through October, complementing the bowling season which slows down during those months.

Hours of operation will be Monday through Saturday, noon to midnight, and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Morton West, vice president of Wonder Realty, said that a small building will be constructed to house equipment and possible soda and sandwich machines.

He voiced his company's desire to work with the Health and Building Department's in building the miniature golf course.

Complaints against Burger

King, 670 Adams St., were also heard by the board.

City Councillor James Sheets told the board that the complaints were in regard to the fencing of a vacant lot at the corner of Stedman and Adams St.; entrance and exit on Robinson St. which was supposed to be blocked off after 7 p.m.; and the hosing down of a dumpster onto Robinson St.

Neighborhood residents told the board of disturbances resulting from the complaints such as odors and stickiness of the sidewalk from the washing down of the dumpster, and screeching of cars late at night with the access to Robinson St.

City Councillor James J. Lydon said that he has noticed an increase in litter in the area and suggested that Burger King be a good neighbor and instruct its employees to pick up any Burger King bags or refuse in the area.

Burger King manager Robert Halterman responded that none of the problems were unsolvable and indicated he would work on them.

Police Chief Francis X. Finn told Halterman that the neighbors expect to see improvements.

Councillor Sheets asked that the Health Dept. make bi-weekly visits to the establishment to check on conditions. New Health Commissioner Dr. Robert P. McKeough said that on a visit there this week, Burger King checked out fine.

Sheets also asked Halterman to pass on the expectations of the License Board to any future managers of the store. The hearing was continued for six months.

In other action, the License Board:

- Granted a request from Quincy Youth Football League to conduct tag days Sept. 21 and Sept. 22, (rain dates Sept. 28 and 29).

- Granted a request from the Squantum Community Association, Inc., to conduct a flea market Sept. 15, (rain date, Sept. 16) 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Nickerson Post parking area.

- Continued for two weeks a request from Joseph C. Cleary, of Braintree, for transfer of a common victualer for Mr. Donut, 399 Sea St., from Quincy-Hope, Inc.

- Continued to Sept. 18, a hearing on complaints against a bar and grille at 532-536 Washington St.

- Granted a request from the Houghs Neck Women's Recreational Association for a one day all alcoholic permit for a banquet to be held Sept. 15, 7 p.m. to midnight, at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall.

- Voted to notify Thomas P. Gilmore, of Linda's, 1234 Sea St. (formerly Sea St. Lunch) to appear before the board on complaints against the establishment which has been closed by the Board of Health. Failure to appear before the board will result in suspension of the license until further notice.

- Granted a change of clerk from Atty. Anthony J. Young to Richard P. Sturgis in the corporate structure of Adam Tavern, Quincy.

- Cancelled because of improper notification a request from Goodyear Service Store, 1132-1138 Hancock St., for a permit to increase present storage of 75 gallons of motor fuel aboveground to 105 gallons, and to increase service bays from four to six.

- Continued for one week a request from Richard M. Ryan of Weymouth, for an auctioneers license.

- Continued for two weeks a request from Mrs. Elizabeth A. Campbell for a dancing school license for Young World, 233 Parkingway, Quincy.

- Granted a request from Fleishman's Liquor Mart, 603 Washington St., for transfer of 37 1/2 shares of stock from Abraham Sakolove to his son, Roger Sakolove.

- Granted, pending a police check, a request from Nicholas DiMartino for a common victualer license (take out only) for DiMartino's, 591 South St. (formerly Toselli's).

- Granted a request from the Committee to Elect Joanne Condon for a one day all alcoholic license for Sept. 21, 8 p.m. to midnight, at the Knights of Columbus Hall, North Quincy.

- Granted, a one day all liquor license to Mrs. Norma Pearsons, of Hingham, for a wedding to be held Sept. 29, 6 p.m. to midnight, at the Fore River Clubhouse.

- Granted, pending approval of the Health Department, a flea market permit to the Adams Heights Men's Club for Sept. 22, (rain date Sept. 23) in the parking area of the club, 63 Bower Rd. Proceeds will benefit their annual Children's Christmas Party.

McCauley Sees Experience Issue

City Councillor Francis X. McCauley says he feels that experience in government is a major issue in the race for councillor-at-large.

McCauley, a candidate for reelection in the Nov. 6 election, spoke at a cookout at the home of Mrs. Stanley Bowering, 65 Gridley St., West Quincy.

He noted that in fiscal 1981 the cost of city government in Quincy will exceed $100 million for the first time in the city's history.

He is best equipped to deal with that, he said, because in his past two years on the Council he has focussed attention on the city's fiscal problems, not ably its borrowing of $7.2 million to cover deficits.

McCauley who has served as a member of the City Council, the School Committee and the Housing Authority, voiced strong support of balanced budgets and opposition to unnecessary city spending.

The Bike Ride will last for three hours, beginning at 1 p.m. and concluding at 4 p.m. Prizes will be awarded to those participants who raise the most money for the diabetes programs of the ADA-NEA.

Purpose is to raise money to

Sheets, Barron, Saccone Decline Protest Role

The candidates who may have had the biggest effect on this week's mayoral primary may be the ones who decided not to run. About 350 city employees meeting Monday night decided against endorsing any one protest candidate after several persons mentioned as candidates indicated a lack of interest.

The last was Sarah Saccone, budget director for former Mayor Joseph LaRocca and an employee in the office of City Auditor Charles Shea.

"I'm extremely, extremely flattered," Miss Saccone told the union members Monday. "Unfortunately, I don't care to be a candidate at this time."

"You sound like Ted Kennedy," kidded chief union negotiator John Keefe, seated behind her. The employees present Monday night voted 158-70 to endorse a general vote against Tobin, but not endorsing any single candidate.

Keefe urged each city employee to "use his or her own conscience in voting for one of the other candidates on the ballot or writing in a Sheets or a Frank McAuley or whoever you individually like."

City Councillor James Sheets and Atty Thomas Barron were among the names mentioned at last Thursday's rally as possible sticker candidates.

However, both men said Friday they were not interested in last-minute runs at the mayor's office.

Some employees supported an endorsement of Abe Itkin, a Quincy City Hospital social worker who is also one of three official candidates for mayor.

Uniting all of the city workers behind Itkin would avoid the last-minute confusion of a sticker or write-in campaign said Pauline Kennedy of the nurses union.

"You don't have to worry about addresses or spelling the name right, he's already there. We might as well give our support to Abe," she said.

City Hall Seal, Flagpole Presented At Dedication

The construction team responsible for the new City Hall annex expressed their thanks to the city with gifts for the new complex.

Architect T. Owen Trainor contributed aluminum replica of the city seal, which was unveiled by Mayor Arthur Tobin in the new building's lobby. The seal was redesigned somewhat to make the seal's production easier.

The seal is dedicated in the memory of Peter Trainor Jr., the architect's brother, who died in Germany shortly before the end of World War II.

Contractor Donald Moscone donated a flagpole for the complex.

The first flag to fly on the pole was one which had flown over the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C. It was presented to the city by former Congressman James Burke on behalf of his successor, Brian Donnelly. The flag was accepted by City Council President John Quinn and School Committee vice-chairwoman Patricia Toland. It was raised by a color guard composed of commanders of the city's veterans posts.

Wollaston Mini-Park Honors Sears Family

A mini-park at the corner of Beale and Cushing St., Wollaston, has been dedicated in honor of Mrs. Harriet Sears and her late husband, Edward, former owners of the Wollaston Theater.

City Councillor Stephen J. McGrath and John Delano, president of the Wollaston Business Association, noted the Sears' contributions to the area before some 60 people at dedication ceremonies Saturday.

Mrs. Sears was presented with a City Council resolution and a bronze plaque that will adorn the site.

Councillor McGrath said the joint construction of the park symbolizes the spirit of cooperation between the Wollaston Association and the city of Quincy.

Raymondi, O'Donnell Clash

Tsongas Vis

"I thought it was flattering," said Kathleen O'Donnell, "even though it was a little unusual."

"Any elected official who did not do it could leave himself open for criticism," said Daniel G. Raymondi.

They were speaking of Sunday's incident at the Lebanon Club in Quincy Point when Raymondi showed up at Miss O'Donnell's fund raiser.

This is unusual since Miss O'Donnell is running for Raymondi's Ward 2 seat on the City Council.

The reason was simple. Sen. Paul E. Tsongas was there, looking for all visitor who stepped into the fight between two neighbors.

It happened like this: "Kathy O'Donnell worked very hard for us during the campaign," said Nancy Gilmartin, spokesman for Tsongas. "She gave eight months of volunteer time. She organized Quincy for us."

Paul offered to come to her fund raiser as a courtesy. You really can't repay someone who has worked so long and so hard on your campaign."

Rejects Budget Request

Tobin Tells Committee: 'Fund Pay Raises Yourself'

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Mayor Tobin said Tuesday he has returned to the School Committee its request for $315,684 to fund three contracts.

The committee voted last Wednesday to submit a supplemental budget request to the mayor to fund contracts with custodians, teacher aides and secretaries in the school system.

The request, Tobin said, "was returned to the secretary for the school committee within an hour of its" receipt by the mayor's office."

Attached was a brief note to the effect that "I assume the School Committee accepted the legal responsibility to negotiate an agreement in good faith and that it also accepted the responsibility to fund it."

"I think the ball is back in their back yard," Tobin said. "I'm asking them to put their money where their mouth is."

The committee must now either renegotiate the three contracts or seek to fund the $315,684 from its own $33 million budget, the mayor said.

Tobin told the board at its Aug. 8 meeting that he would not accept a supplementary budget for contracts negotiated after the school budget was submitted this spring. Any pay raises the committee negotiated with its employees would have to come out of the department's present budget, he said.

But, after hearing William LaForest, vice president of the custodians' union, say his union will file a grievance with the state Labor Relations Board, the board decided to take action last week.

LaForest said the union's grievance would seek to force the Private Firm To Speed Up Tax Revaluation

By TOM HENSHAW

Quincy is not moving fast enough in equalizing property tax valuations in order to be certified for classification by June 30, 1981, the State Department of Revenue has decided.

As a result, said Chief Assessor John Comer, the task of revaluing residential property in the city will be put out for bid to private companies sometime this week.

If the deadline is not met, said Asst. City Solicitor Dennis E. Harrington, there is a "remote" possibility that the city could, for a time, be taxed on the basis of 100 per cent valuation.

The city has been using federally funded CETA workers to gather information on which the assessors will base their revaluation. This is being done under a $375,000 appropriation.

Harrington said the cost of hiring an outside company to do the work will be substantial, possibly over $500,000, but he declined to give a specific figure since it is to be put out to bid.

If everything goes according to plan, he said, and the twin goals of equalization and classification are met, the change will first be reflected in tax bills in the fall of

Comer said that when Quincy formulated its equalization plan, classification was not in effect. It became effective in November, 1978, when voters ratified an amendment to the state constitution.

The program now that classification has been added is that some maintenance plan must be devised to keep valuations up to date.

"We had no maintenance program planned at that time nor did we feel we had to," said Comer. "But since that time the court has mandated it. We must completely revise our program to meet the needs of classification."

Harrington said there has been

Basic Skills Program To Test Students On '3 R's'

By BERNIE O'DONNELL
"Back to basics" may be education's game plan for the 1980's.

In response to public outcries—and a mandate from the state department of education—the school department plans an elaborate program to prove Johnny and Janey are indeed learning their 'Three R's'.

The School Committee last week heard the department's plans to implement this program within the next year and was told that, in some categories, Quincy is as far as two years ahead of the state-ordered timetable.

Quincy's "basic skills—minimum standards" program states that third, fifth and eighth graders will be tested on up to 47 categories of minimum standards. Standards are broken down into the categories of reading, writing, speaking, listening and mathematics.

The writing section, for example, states that students at all three grade levels will be tested on the ability to "employ correct usage of capital letters and punctuation," "spell commonly used words," "write legibly in manuscript and cursive forms" and "identify and construct complete sentences for each of the four sentence types," among several other guidelines.

To get even more specific, third graders must be able to "form compound words by identifying and spelling their separate components," "recognize and spell contractions" and "spell regular plurals."

Eighth graders will be tested on their ability to "spell the plural of words ending in 'ch,' 'sh,' 'x,' 's,' or 'y,'" "form the plural of words ending in 'y' preceded by a consonant" and "spell words whose singular and plural forms remain the same."

The list goes on. The department's 90 pages of specifications run the gamut from "the student will define designated words" to "given a set of numbers, the student will state or compute the median."

Pilot tests on these specifications are being put together now and will probably be tried out this fall in five schools—the Snug Harbor, Wollaston, Willard, Central and Sterlings schools. After the results are studied, the testing program will probably be put into effect in the entire school system in 1980-81 school year.

A student's graduation, or promotion from class to class cannot be based on the tests, according to William Phinney, assistant superintendent of schools.

Committee member Mary Collins asked what action could be taken with those students who do fail.

"That's a difficult one," Phinney said. "It's a big problem that will require a lot of money in terms of remediation."

"But these are minimum standards," he added. "The vast majority are going to pass this without any trouble."

Dr. Lawrence Creedon, superintendent of schools, told the committee that Quincy has been chosen by Charles Johnson, state secretary of education, as one of three model communities for the basic skills program.

"We're kind of pleased with that," Creedon said. "We apparently rank high in his opinion."

Tow Zone Asked On Burgin Parkway

The Traffic Commission is being asked to establish a tow zone to fight illegal parking along Burgin Parkway across from the MBTA station to the intersection of Granite St.

"I've seen in the past few weeks an increasing danger along the parkway from the blatant parking problems we've been having there," said City Councilor John J. Lydon Jr.

"Not only is the situation created by out-of-town parkers but a situation of New England Telephone Co. workers parking along there.

"It's got to the point where the only solution to the problem is to put the hook on the cars and this is the first step."

The City Council also voted to ask the Traffic Commission to study the feasibility of these installations:

- No Parking—Tow Zone signs on Dysart St. from Elm St. to approximately 15 Dysart St., Quincy Center.

- A Stop sign at the intersection of Graham St. and Edison St. on Graham St., Quincy Point.

- No Parking signs from 38 Standish Ave. to the corner of Merrill Ave., Wollaston.

- Stop signs on both sides of Standish Rd. where it intersects with Huckins Ave., Squantum.

- Pedestrian lights at the intersection of Theresa Rd. and Adams St. in Lakin Square, where a girl was recently hit by a car.

Gov. King To Fly In For NFPA Groundbreaking

Gov. Edward J. King will make a flying visit to Quincy tomorrow (Friday) to attend ground-breaking ceremonies for the National Fire Protection Association's new $10 million headquarters in West Quincy.

The governor is scheduled to arrive by helicopter from Framingham in time for the 11 a.m. ceremonies and he'll depart the same way to make another meeting in Leominster.

Joining King and NFPA Board Chairman Dr. John Bryan for the ground-breaking will be Mayor Arthur H. Tobin, Sen. Paul D. Harold and Benjamin Thompson, the architect.

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly has also been invited, a spokesman for the NFPA said. The Quincy High School band will play for the ceremony, which is expected to be attended by 100 people.

Actual excavation for the five-story, glass and brick building on Pine Hill off Willard St. began in July so Friday's ground-breaking is only symbolic. The building is to be ready for occupancy in April, 1981.

The West Quincy site was selected after a two-year nationwide search by the NFPA, which is currently headquartered on Atlantic Ave., Boston. It was founded in Massachusetts in 1896.

Antonelli Iron's Rush Order: Platform For Pope's Mass

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Antonelli Iron Works of West Quincy has spent much of the last two weeks working feverishly on a special "rush" project.

It isn't their average job order, but then Pope John Paul II isn't the average visitor to Boston.

The Willard St. firm was chosen to do the iron work on the special platform for the Pope's Oct. 1 Mass on the Boston Common. Preparation for the project has been so hectic that no one with Antonelli is quite sure how much it will cost or how much the company will be paid for its work, according to James Stearns, executive vice president.

"We don't plan to make any money on this," he added. The total cost of the platform, including ironwork, canopies, construction and other costs, has been estimated at $150,000.

The company first got word it had been chosen for the job Sept. 4 and received plans and specifications on Sept. 7, Stearns said.

Since then a crew of 15 men has worked around 11 hours a day, six days a week, to meet their deadline of this Wednesday.

"There's no ifs, ands or buts; it's got to be done on time," Stearns said.

The platform will measure 76 by 56 feet, and 55 feet high, plus a 24-foot cross on top. It will contain about 35 tons of steel.

Because of the rush nature of the job, there wasn't even time for bidding on the work, Stearns said. Antonelli was chosen by the archdiocese of

Quincy Junior College Greets First Nursing Students

A reception for the first nursing class to enter Quincy Junior College was held at the Neighborhood Club recently.

The 44 members of the class, who started this month, will study a two-year curriculum combining classroom, and clinical work. Graduates will receive an Associate in Science degree in Nursing and be eligible for examination for licensing as a registered nurse (R.N.).

The first class includes two men, four licensed practical nurses (L.P.N.), several students who have associate or bachelors degrees in other fields. Both students immediately out of high school and others who have been out of school for several years are included in the class.

Dr. Edward Pierce, president of QJC, welcomed the class and remarked that in less than two years the school put together an excellent staff, planned a quality program, received approval from the state Board of Registration in Nursing and received state funding.

Dr. Lawrence Creedon, superintendent of schools, told the students that Quincy public schools have sought to fill the void created by the closing of Quincy City Hospital's school of nursing this year.

Patricia Toland, vice-chairwoman of the school committee, welcomed the class, as did Mayor Arthur Tobin.

Members of the first nursing class are:

Cynthia Adams, Julie Anzuoni, Donna-Jean Blanchard, Maureen

Bowles, Mary Buchan, Donna Buonopane, Michael Clark, Norma Clark, Karen Curley, Catherine Deane, Gail DeWitt.

Mary Ellen Doherty, Nancy Dolan, Dianne Forrest, Denise Hajjar, Mary Holland, Pamela Hunt, Lisa Jackson, Katherine Jacobs, Susan Jankins, Debra Johnson, Gertrude Jordan.

Aquinas Freshman Class Largest

Orientation week at Aquinas Junior College, Milton, recently brought together 240 members of the freshman class, the largest in the college's 24 year history.

Returning and incoming students met with faculty advisors who distributed class programs and explained the role of academic advisor to them. In the course of the week students were also introduced to new faculty members.

The week climaxed with a general assembly followed by president Sister Mary Louise Morgan, CSJ's, message to the students, administration, faculty, and staff.

The Eucharistic liturgy was then celebrated with the college community by Rev. Joseph Connolly, CSS, theology instructor at the college.

Both Sister Mary Louise and Rev. Joseph Connolly encouraged the students to become loving, courageous women of compassion, sensitivity and vision. County Commissioners In Shipyard Plea To Carter

The Norfolk County commissioners have joined the list of individuals and organizations who have appealed to President Carter for Navy contracts at the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard.

"They have bid competitively on several naval contracts for the past two years to no avail.

"If work is not forthcoming this year, nearly 5,000 jobs will be eliminated to the detriment of Norfolk County and its 620,000 residents."

The commissioners, Chairman James J. Collins, George B. McDonald and David C. Ahearn, called the situation at the Yard "a serious matter."

Morrissey Disappointed By MDC's Wood Rd. Decision

Rep. Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy) has called the decision by the MDC to block a connector road between Wood Rd. and Chickatabut Rd. in West Quincy a "disappointing vote."

"After three years of pushing for this project by both city Councillor James A. Sheets and myself, I thought that we had finally accomplished our goal."

he said.

"The vote is a disappointment to us all."

Morrissey said he plans to meet with the MDC soon to discuss the future of the project, which would join the two parallel roads in the Blue Hills and take some traffic off Willard St.

"The project had been planned in cooperation with the town of Braintree, Quincy and the MDC planners and engineers," he said. "The MDC previously said there would be no problem with the project."

He said he plans to see Gov. King in an effort to get the MDC commissioners to reconsider their position.

Private Firm To Speed Up Property Revaluation

some problem arising from the use of CETA personnel, who have gathered data on about 1,200 parcels of residential property, mostly in the North Quincy area.

"It's been monitored and found to be inefficient and less than satisfactory," he said. "It could be bolstered and made satisfactory but that wouldn't solve the problem."

"The CETA workers are only measuring and listing, which is about 25 per cent of the work. Our timetable is off because we can't get that information on the computer fast enough."

"We simply could not move fast enough to meet certification even if they completed their work within their own time schedule."

Comer said the program started with 21 CETA workers and is now down to 13. Under the rules of the federal CETA program, the lost workers, many of whom found permanent jobs, cannot be replaced.

The work already done by the CETA workers will not be lost, Harrington said, adding that "the program now in effect will continue as it is and blend in with the work of the private company."

"There is a chance," Harrington said, "that the city could find itself in the position of having 100 per cent valuation without classification if Chapter 580 is delayed for a period of years."

Chapter 580, which is the law implementing the classification amendment, is being challenged in court by opponents who are seeking to have classification postponed for a year.

"Under the orders of the court," Harrington said, "we would have to equalize our valuation no later than June 30, 1981. We also have the opportunity to classify at that time."

"If we fail to be certified for classification, my personal fear is that we'll end up with 100 per cent valuation and no classification."

"You have a situation where Quincy has been ordered to equalize valuations and what we hope to do is have equalization and classification in one program."

"But, if for some reason we fail certification for classification, we're still ordered to have equalization."

But, he added, "the likelihood is extremely remote."

The Department of Revenue's hurry up order is an outgrowth of the so-called Commonwealth vs. Andover case, under which 23 communities, including Quincy, were put under the gun to revalue.

Under reports filed as a result of that case, Judge Herbert P. Wilkins ruled that Quincy assessors were in compliance with the law while some towns must face a contempt hearing Oct. 28 for failure to comply.

"My advice to the assessors," said Harrington, "is that even though they are not subject to hearing Oct. 28, as soon as the hearing is over they will be subject to a similar charge."

"They have an opportunity now to put forth a program proposal that does meet the timetable and they are doing it on their own before they're ordered to do so."

ARE DENTAL X-RAYS DANGEROUS?

Despite scare publicity about dental X-rays being dangerous, according to the U.S. Public Health Service, new X-ray equipment [if properly used] poses no threat whatsoever. In fact, when shielded by a lead apron you are exposed to less radiation than you normally get from cosmic rays from outer space every day.

First class dental care is not possible without X-rays. They enable your dentist to detect certain conditions such as small cavities on hidden surfaces and diseased areas in jaw bones which otherwise could not be discovered. If X-rays were not taken, your first warning sign would probably be pain caused by an infection of the tooth pulp. By that time, the pulp is already infected, and may be too late for your tooth to be saved. X-rays also help a dentist discover teeth that are developing badly in the jaws such as impacted teeth.

Harold Attends Constitution Conference

Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) traveled to Saratoga Springs, N.Y. last weekend to participate in the Bicentennial Council of the Thirteen Original States conference on government.

Harold, chairman of the special state commission to celebrate the bicentennial of the Massachusetts Constitution, joined representatives of the other original states in discussions of democratic principles and methods to make government more responsive to the people it serves.

The two-day conference coincided with the beginning of Constitution Week, set aside to celebrate final approval of the United States Constitution by the Constitutional Convention.

QUINCY'S CITY CLUB recently donated several thousand dollars worth of equipment to Quincy City Hospital in memory of Richard J. Conboy, a member who died last year of heart disease. The presentation was made on the first anniversary of Conboy's Sept. 4, 1978 death. Presenting a projector, which will be used to help educate patients in living with heart problems, are Conboy's brother, Ronald Conboy, (far left) and Richard J. Koch, City Club president (third left). Accepting the donation are Joanne Condon, chairwoman of the City Council's hospital committee and Dr. Gerald L. Gaughan, QCH cardiologist (far right).

For Pope's Visit

NBC Films St. John's Mass For Sept. 30 Special

Most parishioners were surprised, but pleased to see TV cameras filming the 9:45 a.m. Mass at St. John's Church Sunday.

The filming was part of an NBC-TV special on the Catholic Church in America, to be aired Sept. 30 in connection with Pope John Paul II's visit here, according to Rev. Daniel Graham of St. John's.

NBC first inquired about filming the Mass last Wednesday, said Fr. Graham, who celebrated the Mass.

"They had heard about the fine reputation St. John's has for liturgical worship," he added.

St. John's won an award for national excellence in liturgical music this April from the National Association of Pastoral Musicians, he said.

"We were rather delighted," Rev. Graham said.

Since the presence of the filming crew was not announced to parishioners, it came as a surprise to the 600 or so persons attending the Mass.

NBC was represented at the Mass by two cameramen and a director.

The Mass ran about an hour and 15 minutes—longer than usual—but it had nothing to do with the filming crew.

"We wanted to highlight the choir. It was their first week back from summer vacation," Fr. Graham said.

Besides filming the more traditional and elaborate St. John's Mass, NBC also filmed services in other parts of the country—for example a folk mass and a charismatic service.

Besides the national telecast the special is also expected to be seen in Canada and France. Because of the size of the potential audience, Fr. Graham admitted to being "a little nervous".

"I've celebrated a few masses on television before, but never anything like this," he said.

Massachusetts Constitution Stamp Proposed

Cong. Brian J. Donnelly has filed legislation in the House directing the Post Office to issue a commemorative stamp in honor of the drafting of the Massachusetts Constitution.

The stamp was suggested by Mayor Arthur H. Tobin.

"Many historians regard the formation of the Massachusetts Constitution as the single most important aspect of the American Revolution," said Donnelly in a speech prepared for delivery to the House.

"Few people realize the importance of this event in the shaping of our government and our history and I would hope that this stamp could be used as a means to inform the people of this nation."

The Mass Constitution was drafted by John Adams in his Quincy law office in September, 1779, but it was not ratified by the people of the state until the spring of 1780.

The chanting of Kol Nidre will usher in Yom Kippur, Sunday at 6:15 p.m. All day service Saturday will start at 9 a.m. Yizkor memorial prayers will be recited. Services will conclude at sundown with the sounding of the Shofar.

Rabbi Samuel S. Kenner will officiate, assisted by Cantor Daniel Funk. Maurice Shaffer is president of the Congregation.

Rosh Hashanah means head of the year and is observed in the beginning of the seventh month (Tishri) as the Jewish New Year. It inaugurates the season of the Yom Noraim, the Days of Awe.

Nisan, the month in which Passover occurs, is regarded as the first month of the Jewish calendar, and all festivals are arranged according to this reckoning.

The name Rosh Hashanah does not appear in the Bible. Instead, it is referred to as the Day of the Blowing of the Shofar (Yom Taruah), the Day of Remembrance (Yom Hazikaron) and the Remembrance of the Blowing of the Shofar (Zihron Teruah).

It is also considered the Day of Judgement (Yom Hadin) when all mankind is judged by the Creator, and the fate of each individual is inscribed in the Book of Life.

Many people in Orthodox and Conservative synagogues celebrate Rosh Hashanah for two days in accordance with ancient tradition, while most Reform synagogues observe the holiday for only one day.

While Rosh Hashanah is noted in the Book of Life:

Many people in Orthodox and Conservative synagogues celebrate Rosh Hashanah for two days in accordance with ancient tradition, while most Reform synagogues observe the holiday for only one day.

While Rosh Hashanah is not accompanied by the gay merry-making which marks Jan. 1, it is not a somber or sad holiday. As a matter of fact, Jewish tradition declares that it should be a happy one, for Jews are convinced that sincere prayer and good deeds find favor in the eyes of God.

At home on Rosh Hashanah eve, the family celebrates the New Year with a festive dinner. The father recites the Kiddush, a blessing, over the cup of wine and gives some to each member of the family. One of the beautiful customs of Rosh Hashanah is the eating of an apple or some other fruit dipped in honey to express the hope that the coming year may be full of sweetness.

During the services, a section is read from the Bible. The prayers are chanted in Hebrew, the language in which the Old Testament was written. In almost all synagogues some prayers are recited in English, too. This is done so that everyone, whether he knows Hebrew or not, take part in the services.

One of the very stirring prayers recited during the service is the litany:

Our Father, our King, hear our Prayer

Our Father, our King, we have sinned before Thee

Our Father, our King, have mercy upon us and upon our children

Our Father, our King, keep far from our country pestilence, war and famine.

Our Father, our King, cause all hate and oppression to vanish from the earth.

Our Father, our King, inscribe us for blessing in the book of life.

Our Father, our King, grant unto us a year of happiness.

Our Father, our King, be merciful and answer us; though we plead no merit, deal with us according to Thy loving kindness and help us, Amen.

Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) is the last day of the Ten Days of Penitence which begin with Rosh Hashanah. This 10-day period, according to Jewish tradition, is a time for repentance, prayer and charity in preparation for the holiest day of the year, Yom Kippur.

On this solemn and important day almost all Jewish men, women and many young people refrain from eating and drinking. One of the important readings in the synagogue on Yom Kippur is taken from the Book of Isaiah.

Is not this that I have chosen?

To loose the fetters of wickedness,

To undo the bonds of the yoke

And to let the oppressed go free.

Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry

And that thou bring homeless to thy house?

When thou seest the naked, that thou cover him,

And that thou hide not thyself from thy fellow man

Then shall thy light break forth as the morning

And thy righteousness shall go before thee

The prophet Isaiah declares that the fast of Yom Kippur is acceptable to God only if it leads to good deeds toward man. This is the lesson Yom Kippur teaches.

Also conducted on this Holy Day is the Yizkor, a memorial service for the departed. This service reminds those whose dear ones have passed away to follow the path of righteousness and to remember the good deeds of their departed.

The concluding prayers of the day are recited toward sunset. At nightfall, the end of the fast is announced by a single blast of the Shofar, after which the worshippers return to their homes joyous and glad of heart.

Four days after Yom Kippur comes the most joyous of the Jewish holidays, Succoth, a festival celebrating the time when the ancient Israelites gathered in their fruit harvest and offered thanks to God for his goodness. In many ways it is similar to the American Thanksgiving.

During the nine days of this holiday, many Jews eat their meals and spend part of their time in a succah (a little booth or hut with an open roof of branches and leaves).

These booths commemorate the temporary shelters in which the Israelites lived on their journey from Egypt to the Promised Land. It is the succah, too, that gives the holiday its name in English. Succoth is frequently called the Feast of Booths.

Cancer Crusade Passes $8,000 Goal

The Quincy Cancer Crusade has passed its goal of $8,000 and with a total of $8,345 received to date in the house-to-house crusade announced Richard J. Koch, chairman of the Quincy Cancer Crusade.

All proceeds go to the American Cancer Society for the continuation of its Research, Education and Patient Service Programs.

Koch said the total has been over $8,000 for the past four years. However, the rising inflation has also increased the cost of research and education programs conducted by the society.

Kelly To Speak At Adams Shore

Councillor Leo Kelly will be guest speaker at an open meeting of the Adams Shore Community Association Sept. 25, at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Shore branch of the Thomas Crane Library.

Topics of discussion will be HUD funds and the opening of the new Manet Health Clinic.

The total represents only 40 percent of the volunteer kits received from the house-to-house solicitation and those unable to return their kits are requested to do so at any of the Hancock Bank offices. Those wishing to donate who were not visited by a volunteer should make checks payable to the American Cancer Society and mail to the area office, 47 West Elm Street, Brockton, MA 02401 or leave at any of the Hancock Banks.

The American Cancer Society relies totally on volunteer contributions and does not receive Federal or United Fund financial assistance.

Mediator Joins Teachers Talks

Negotiations between the School Committee and teachers have resumed under a state-appointed mediator, but the talks still seem to be at a standstill.

"We stand in the exact same place as before," said Mary Curtin, chairwoman of the Quincy Education Association's negotiation committee.

"We are basically where we were before," said Patricia Toland, chairwoman of the School Committee.

Representatives of the two groups met for the first time Monday with Elliot Klitzman, the mediator appointed by the state labor relations commission. Klitzman's function is to hear each side's viewpoint and try to effect a compromise on the points of disagreement.

The two sides differ on three major points:

Pay raises: The School Committee's most recent offer was a nine-percent raise spread over two years. Mrs. Curtin said at a Sept. 4 meeting with teachers. The QEA's request is reportedly closer to seven or eight percent annually over two or three years.

RIF (reduction in force) layoffs: These teacher cutbacks, made necessary by the school system's declining enrollment, should be made on a basis of teacher evaluations, says Mrs. Toland. QEA representatives have criticized such a plan as being vague and subject to abuse and prefer layoffs based on seniority.

Extra hours: School committee negotiators have tried to get teachers to accept 45 extra minutes per day without any added salary. This extra time is common in nearby cities and towns where teachers are paid far less than in Quincy, says Mrs. Toland. The QEA's viewpoint, Mrs. Curtin said at the Sept. 6 meeting, is "if you want us to work, and it's that important, pay us."

The next negotiation session is scheduled for Sept. 27 - three days before extension on the teachers' contract is due to expire.

The two teams of negotiators have already agreed upon a one-month extension for September and may choose to agree on monthly extensions if the negotiations drag on, Toland said.

City Employees Ask Court To Freeze Tax Rate Until Pay Raises Funded

Representatives of the city have been summoned to appear in court Monday to answer a suit seeking to prevent the city from setting its tax rate.

The suit was filed in Dedham Superior Court last Thursday. It seeks to prevent the city from setting the tax rate until it funds pay raises negotiated in several contracts which have already been signed.

The summons names the Quincy City Employee's Union of Hospital, Library and Public Employees (HPLPE), represented by Braintree Atty. Sandra Rosenthal, as plaintiffs. However, John Keefe, president of HPLPE, says the suit was filed on behalf of a coalition of city employees' unions, represented by a team of several lawyers.

Keefe declined to name any of the attorneys involved.

"We don't want the attorneys speaking for us," he said, adding that he had been chosen spokesman for the coalition of unions.

Mayor Arthur Tobin was named as defendant in the suit, and ordered to appear Monday, Sept. 24 at 9:30 a.m. to answer the complaint.

However, Tobin said Tuesday, it was his understanding that he, personally, was not required to appear in court. City solicitor Robert J. Fleming will appear in court to represent the city, Tobin said.

"We have spoken to the appropriate people at the State House and they tell us the law is on our side," Keefe told about 350 city employees Sept. 10. "We have an excellent chance of getting a restraining order," he added. Keefe later refused to name his sources at the State House.

The suit contends the city in general, and Tobin in particular, has illegally refused to fund the raises agreed upon in contracts with several unions.

Tobin has claimed that those contracts contained "reopener clauses" that allowed the city to void the agreement and reopen negotiations if the state tax cap legislation prevent funding of the contracts.

By law, no money can be appropriated by the city after the tax rate has been set. Thus, once the rate is set, the city employees can't receive any raise until the next fiscal year.

Councillor Condon Cites Importance Of Citizen Involvement

City Councillor Joanne Condon cited the importance of citizen involvement in city government at a block party sponsored by Gerald and June Marquis of 45 Monmouth St., Squantum.

Mrs. Condon is a candidate for a second term in the Ward 6 seat on the Council.

She noted that Squantum has a distinct advantage over other sections of the city in community involvement because its boundaries are clearly defined and it has active, community-spirited residents.

"Only a combination of effective public action and community involvement can produce results desired by the residents," she said.

"New playground facilities and public improvements are examples of improvements made which were initiated by residents."

She called attention to the fact that residents have been involved in formulating plans for Boston Harbor Marina and that non-residential uses are being considered because of residents' preference.

"Much of a city councillor's job involves working as a liaison between the residents and city departments to insure that improvements are made and residents have input into the decisions," she said.

Mrs. Condon said that honesty, responsiveness and the ability to communicate are her strongest qualities.

The Campaign Trail...

Tobin Campaign Backed By $50,000

Mayor Arthur H. Tobin has amassed a campaign war chest of at least $50,000 despite little opposition in his bid for a second term in the Mayor's office.

A list of contributions and disbursements, filed at City Hall eight days before the preliminary election shows Tobin's campaign assets at $50,052.22, expenses $17,557.22, and a balance of $32,495.

Tobin explained that at the time he began raising money for the campaign he had no idea who his opposition was going to be in the primary.

"There was talk of Jim Sheets running, Joe LaRaia, John Cheney, Mike Fagerlund," he said. "So we just went out and raised money in anticipation of a hard campaign."

Tobin won the Sept. 11 preliminary handily with 6,367 votes to 1,144 for Abe M. Itkin and 585 for Michael Jovanovic. Tobin and Itkin qualified for the general election Nov. 6.

Itkin's filing at City Hall showed that he spent $400 of his own money for printing costs. He listed no contributions.

Jovanovic had not filed the required form by the deadline.

Tobin's filing, which was actually done by the Arthur H. Tobin for Mayor Committee, showed a balance of $5,057.22 at the start of the year. Disbursements began Jan. 5.

Itkin Challenges Tobin To Meet In Open Forum

Abe M. Itkin has challenged Mayor Arthur H. Tobin to meet him in at least one open forum to present their views and subject them to the questioning of the people of Quincy.

Tobin declined to comment on Itkin's challenge.

Itkin qualified to meet Tobin in the general election Nov. 6 by finishing second to the Mayor in the preliminary balloting. He got 1,144 to 6,367 for Tobin.

Itkin suggested that the public meeting with Tobin be conducted under the auspices of the League of Women Voters or some other civic association.

"Such a meeting," he said,

"would go far toward the goal of enabling the voters of Quincy to vote more intelligently for Mayor of the city of Quincy."

"I am prepared now, or at any time mutually convenient, for myself and my friend, Arthur Tobin, to discuss openly and publicly, the issues mundane to the office of Mayor."

Fund Raiser Oct. 4 For Richard Koch, Jr.

The Committee to elect Richard J. Koch Jr., Councillor at-large, will conduct a fund raiser Thursday, Oct. 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the George F. Bryan VFW Hall, Broad St., Quincy.

Proceeds will be used to help defray the cost of printing and advertisements during the current campaign of the candidate.

Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Linda J. Bowes, treasurer of the committee, 241 Newbury Ave., North Quincy and checks may be made payable to the same committee.

The program will include a reception to the candidate, dancing to the music of C. C. and Company. Refreshments will be served.

Mrs. Marie Duval and Francis V. Schuler Jr. are co-chairmen of the event assisted by Robert McLaren, Theodore DeCristofaro, Mrs. Jeanne Reardon, Joseph M. Lydon, Robert Woods, Miss Lucille Rusconi, Gary Cunliff, Miss Paula Jackson, William Donovan and Daniel Coughlin, Jr.

Conroy Stresses Leadership Need

Patrick Conroy of 272 Billings St., North Quincy, says he is stressing three points in his campaign for election to the School Committee on Nov. 6.

First, he said, is the need for decisive leadership on the committee.

"The job calls for someone who's not afraid to make the tough decisions," he said. "And I'm the person for the job."

Second, he said, there is a need to question the use of norm-referenced, multiple choice tests to prove mastery of the basic skills for reading, writing and arithmetic.

"These tests don't tell us how well Johnny can read," said Conroy, "but only whether he is better or worse than the average."

"At best, these tests serve as a smokescreen that shifts attention away from the important question: Can Johnny read a more difficult book on the last day of school than he could on the first day?"

Finally, he said, there is a need for creativity and foresight in the School Committee of the 1980s.

"Making all important decisions in response to crises will never improve education and continuing expensive traditions that have no basis in the reality of today's changing world will never lower taxes," he said.

Harold Urges Veteran Member For Civil Service Study Group

Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) has asked Gov. Edward J. King to include a veteran among the nine members the governor will appoint to a special commission studying civil service.

In a letter to the governor, Harold noted that while the resolve establishing the commission sets forth various organizations to which the members should belong, it does not specify that any be veterans.

Harold asked that at least one of the members be a veteran

"because of the strong interest of veterans and veterans' organizations in public service positions and civil service matters."

He noted that the veterans' interest is particularly high now that the federal courts have upheld the Massachusetts veterans' preference law.

Harold said a veteran member of the commission "would lend expertise and practical knowledge of veterans' problems and needs," and would insure that veterans' interests are considered by the commission.

Your Dental Health
by Daniel P. Sweeney D.D.S.

When a dentist fills a cavity, the first step is often to inject novocain into the gum surrounding the tooth being filled. The novocain, in just a few minutes, numbs the tooth and gum to eliminate any pain for the patient. Next, the dentist cleans the area of the cavity insuring that all of the decayed or infected material is removed. This is usually done with cleaning instruments and a high speed drill. The drill is used to mold a proper place for the new filling to fit. The filling material, often some kind of silver compound, is prepared and fit securely into the area provided. Finally, the filling is trimmed and the procedure is complete.

Good oral hygiene and regular dental checkups can help to prevent cavities and other dental problems. Dr. Daniel P. YMCA Invites Fathers And Sons To Join 'Indian Guides'

The Quincy YMCA's 'Indian Guide' program will hold an enrollment meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the "Y". Indian Guides is a program for fathers and sons 6 to 8. Together they participate as 'big and little braves' in units of 4 to 8 fathers and sons known as 'tribes'. Its purpose is to increase the number of things that fathers and sons can do together.

Tribal meetings are held bi-monthly in rotation in the homes of the braves. Some of the activities included in the program are trips, handicrafts, study of Indian culture, songs, games, picnics, camping trips to Camp Burgess and Hayward in Sandwich, splash parties, gym nights and Red Sox and Celtics games.

After the enrollment meeting, fathers and sons are invited to attend the tribal meeting nearest them. This enables enrollees to view a tribe in action. For further information, contact Bill Johnson at the Quincy YMCA at 479-8500.

Cultured pearls come in all sizes. Perhaps the largest are those grown from very large oysters in the South Seas and in Burma. They can be over 18mm in diameter. More common are pearls that are 5 or 6 mm and Japanese pearls which are usually 8-10 mm in diameter. But size is not everything in pearls. Colors and the shine are also important considerations. Since differences between imitation and valuable cultured pearls are often difficult to detect, it is best to consult your jeweler for proper advice. Consult with us at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., 696-1490 for all your jewelry needs. We can design a new piece of jewelry, from old stones, out of date and unwanted jewelry...and will also trade an old piece towards a new one. Jewelry and watch repairs are handled, and we have a craftsman to handle clock repairing. Boycott: Legal But Is It Fair?

The city employee unions plan to go ahead with their threatened economic boycott of downtown Quincy starting Oct. 4.

The game plan is to have employees close out their savings and checking accounts with banks on that date and then launch their boycott of downtown stores the following day.

This, they believe, will result in the banks and stores putting pressure on Mayor Arthur Tobin to force him to bow to their demands for pay raises.

But Tobin keeps asking: "Where's the money coming from . . . If someone can find the money, it's yours."

He contends if he gives in to the contract demands of all 14 city employee unions it will mean a $22 hike in the tax rate.

Tobin, so far, has stood firm. Thus, the planned boycott queue.

John Keefe of the Hospital, Library and Public Employees Union says a boycott is "the most effective thing we can do—because it's legal."

The way he would have it, "city employees will not buy so much as a Coca-Cola in the downtown business area."

Keefe is right—the boycott is perfectly legal. But, how fair is it?

The banks and stores are not part of the city government. The contract dispute is between the mayor and the unions. It should be settled by the mayor and the unions without dragging downtown bystanders into it.

Anyone trying to make ends meet these difficult days of soaring inflation can sympathize with the employees' desire and need for more money. And, taxpayers no doubt, can sympathize with the mayor's concern for a possible $22 tax hike. To a lot of people on fixed incomes this would be devastating.

If the mayor continues to stand firm on the ground the city hasn't got the money and you can't get blood out of a stone, a prolonged boycott could have severe consequences.

You're not just talking lost business for the stores and banks. It could mean lost jobs. People working in the stores and banks—innocent bystanders in this dispute—could find their jobs jeopardized and themselves out of work with no pay while city employees press for more pay.

This dispute is between the mayor and the unions and should be settled by them—and hopefully, soon will.

A boycott may be legal. But somehow, it would seem like the downtown is being held a sort of hostage until the mayor comes up with the ransom.

The mayor and unions should make every effort to iron things out. There may have to be some giving in on both sides. Every problem has a fair solution if you search hard enough to find it. The boycott just doesn't seem like the fair solution.

THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE and teachers who have their own contract dispute going, found a little common ground the other night.

Committee member John Sullivan left his seat briefly during the board's meeting and returned to whisper a message to School Committee Vice Chairwoman Patricia Toland conducting the meeting.

Mrs. Toland, turning to the several dozen teachers present to protest their contract hassles announced:

"Mr. Sullivan, a great Red Sox fan, has asked me to inform you that Carl Yastrzelski has gotten his 3,000th hit."

The teachers—and committee members—broke into applause.

Maybe they ought to get Yast as a mediator.

'Ruth Gordon Flick' Stirs Fond Memories For Quincy Actress

It's called the "Ruth Gordon Flick", and Ruth Gordon herself, with an actress' grasp of illusion and reality, was on hand to wish that "it make memories and money."

"At first they thought they'd call me Ethel," said the former Ruth G. Jones of Quincy. "Ethel Jones? Ethel Gordon Jones? Ethel Gordon? Does that sound like the name for a flick?"

Movie impresario Thomas Duffy thought that Ruth Gordon sounded just fine, which is why he named his latest cinema house, the one just off Route 9 in Westboro, the "Ruth Gordon Flick."

And, of course, Ruth Gordon was there at the recent opening to share some of her 83 years of memories with those who attended a private showing of her latest flick, "Boardwalk."

"Boardwalk," said Miss Gordon, waxing enthusiastic in pink top, green slacks and a pink ribbon in her hair, "with wonderful Lee Strasberg, Janet Leigh giving a remarkable performance and I'm the best I've been on the screen."

"Tonight we'll see it in this new theatre which can create laughter, excitement, adventure, tears for somebody else 'troubles.'"

Miss Gordon has created a lot of those things herself in the years since 1914 when she was graduated from Quincy High School and left Wollaston to seek fame and fortune on the New York stage.

"Quite a lot of things had to happen before Tom Duffy named his theatre the 'Ruth Gordon Flick', she said.

"I broke all the commandments but three. I never worshipped a graven image. I never killed anyone. I never coveted my neighbor's wife. I'm not against it; it just isn't my bag."

"A lot had to happen and a lot of movie tests had to be made before my name got up in lights here."

RUTH GORDON

After her first movie test, she said, "word came back. 'She acts all right, can't photograph her.'"

"Another test. 'She acts all right, can't photograph her.' Another test. They curled my hair; they put makeup on me. I had to wear the dress they chose. You couldn't tell who I was. 'Acts all right, can't photograph her.'"

"When a New Englander gets enough jolts, we do something about it. If making a movie test kept one out of the movies, don't make a movie test. When you make a decision, can you stick to it?"

"The phone rang. It was RKO Studio, Hollywood. 'Mr. Robert E. Sherwood wants you to play Mrs. Abraham Lincoln in this movie he's written, 'Abraham Lincoln in Illinois'. The salary is $2,000 a week. Can you test on Friday?"

"Can you stick to a decision when you can pick up $2,000 a week? It's hard even for a New Englander."

"I don't test," I said. "Oh, sure, but this is just going through the motions. Mr. Sherwood wants you."

"I don't test." "And would you believe it? I got the part, acted all right and they found out how to photograph me!"

"'Abraham Lincoln in Illinois' with Raymond Massey was a big step toward the 'Ruth Gordon Flick'."

She listed the best of her ensuing pictures: Dr. Erlich's Magic Bullet", with Edward G. Robinson; "Two Faced Woman", with Greta Garbo; "Action in the North Atlantic", with Humphrey Bogart; "Edge of Darkness", with Errol Flynn.

"I was nominated for an Oscar (for 'Inside Daisy Clover') and didn't get it," she said, "but in 'Rosemary's Baby' I was nominated and did get it."

"When the Oscar was handed to me I said, 'I can't tell you how encouraging a thing like this is. And I meant it. I was 72 but it's never to late to be encouraged.'"

(She won a best actress Emmy last week for her role in an episode on TV's "Taxi" series)

Her autobiography, "My Side", was published in 1976 as she was about to turn 80 and she was so encouraged that another one, "Ruth Gordon: An Open Book", is due out in May from Doubleday.

"You have to learn precepts as an actor," Miss Gordon told Eleanor Blau of The New York Times. And one of the most valuable is "Never face the facts." Facts always prove you can't do something.

"When I lived in Quincy and wanted to be an actress, I had no money, no looks, no talent that was evident yet, no introductions, no pull. I thought of myself as something special that things would go great for. That wasn't facing facts."

"You have to set up your own rules in life, finding out what works for you."

The saying, "Pride goeth before a fall" — my mother used to tell me that and she was a darling lady — but, actually, pride goeth before a lot of accomplishments. A humble person is hardly a standout."

Air Noise Is Going To Get Worse If Residents Don't React

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Air noise in Boston, Quincy, Milton and the many other South Shore communities is going to get worse if residents don't react to the F.A.A. Logan report issued late last month.

If you review the copy at your library, this is the only conclusion you can get after looking through the 82 pages entitled: "Draft Environmental Impact Statement Departure Procedures, Runway 22 Right."

The most astounding thing about the F.A.A. study is that it pays so little attention to very definite evidence that things will actually get worse from May to September in the absence of corrective action which is beyond the level of tinkering. The F.A.A. notes that the proprietor of Logan, Massport, has not conveyed an intent to change the location or size of the airport. Yet, the F.A.A. knows that any air carrier can demand and receive the right to increase the number of operations.

Additionally, while the study was in progress, Massport was conducting an aggressive advertising campaign to increase the use of Massport facilities. Accepted is a probable 2% per year growth rate in turbojet traffic. The previously mentioned points could change that to 3 or more per cent increase carried on in the facilities of present size. What happens to 180° Left after three to five years and growth of 9 to 15% in the case of turbojet?

Those who listen to the roar of jets at midnight on a busy weekend know the answer and so does the F.A.A. The increased traffic will cut down use of one of the key noise abatement procedures presently proposed.

The F.A.A. study also notes on page 43 that the decibel figures presented "... are the maximum that are likely to be experienced..." Common sense should cause us to surmise that if people are saying that they are affected today, telling them the figures are the maximum they are likely to experience tomorrow is unconsoling. What is really being said is that the admitted 2% per year growth rate of turbojet flights will be spread out over the same aggrieved and screaming populace up to hypothetical amounts based on hypothetical figures.

The F.A.A. indicates that its main abating route (195°/220°) "... offers some noise relief to the most severely affected... without adding significantly to other communities..." The so-called Neponset River route has brought a mass of complaints from Boston, Milton, Quincy and the South Shore and yet this preposterous statement was actually printed.

Every South Shore and Greater Boston resident should write the F.A.A. in Burlington before Oct. 15 and let them know their views on a plan which will have such a harmful impact on each and every person.

A Squirrel On Chestnut St.

Bushy-Tailed Newcomer Another Sign Of Downtown Renovations

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

One of the downtown area's newest figures can be seen crouched outside Trifone Realty at 30 Chestnut St.

He (or she - nobody's sure) is reaching forward in a pan-handling position and weighs somewhere between 500 and 600 pounds.

Nick Trifone is quite proud of the new addition.

"It's an attention getter, obviously," he says of the granite squirrel, purchased as part of the city's storefront renovation program.

Trifone is one of several Quincy Center businessmen to take part in the federally funded program so far.

The three-foot rodent was created by Monti Granite of West Quincy out of Quincy granite. The squirrel's location on Chestnut Street was intended as a subtle visual pun of sorts, Trifone said.

Federal block grants announced in July have allocated $12,000 for storefront renovations in the downtown and $10,000 for the North Quincy business district, according to Robert Luongo of the city's planning department.

The funds will pay 75 percent of the businessmen's cost of materials used in sprucing up their storefronts, up to a maximum of $4,000.

"We've got quite a few so far," Luongo said. "It seems like we'll run out of money before the year is out."

Renovation projects run the gamut from ones like Trifone's and Granite City Electric Supply Company's, which run into the thousands, to a $200 paint job for Claus Gellotte of Quincy Center.

"Trifone's is one of the more elaborate," Luongo said. "I'm dying to see what it will look like."

The facelift for the Trifone Building, which also houses two professional offices and a barber shop, was planned by Trifone's son, Nicholas Trifone III, a third-year architecture student at Wentworth Institute. When completed, it will give the building a Beacon Hill air, says Trifone the elder.

Besides the squirrel, which will eventually be converted into a fountain, gas lights on either end of the building, a wrought-iron fence and some touching-up of the brick facade are also on the drawing board.

"We'd like to bring parts of Quincy back to what they once were," said Trifone, who was assistant city planner for a while under Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa's administration.

The term "post office" stems from "post roads" - those over which stagecoaches first traveled with "posts" maintained along them for changing horses.

Dennison Airport Marks 8th Year

Dennison Airport in North Quincy celebrated its eighth anniversary with 10 planes based at the field, five of them used to rookie air travelers on brief spins around Boston Harbor.

"We have really been missionaries for the airlines," said Manager Hal Martin.

"Persons who have never flown before come down here for a short hop and then when they want to make a trip of any distance, they turn to the airlines without the slightest hint of hesitation.

"It is not unusual for us to fly 1,000 persons over a weekend on short hops."

Eileen Feeney Appointed NQHS Assistant Principal

North Quincy High School has a new assistant principal. The School Committee last week appointed Mrs. Eileen Feeney, who had been dean of students.

Mrs. Feeney, a Squantum resident, was approved by the board only after members Francis Anseldo and John Sullivan complained about other candidates being passed over.

An interviewing team which included NQHS Principal Peter Chrisom, parents, teacher, students and school department representatives, considered 13 persons for the job in three sets of interviews. The interview sessions were held in December, 1978, late spring and August of this year.

School Supt. Lawrence P. Creedon chose not to recommend any of the applicants from the first two groups. Mrs. Feeney applied for the post only this summer, after she had acquired the necessary masters degree.

Mrs. Feeney, a former mathematics teacher in the school system, has been dean of students at North since 1976.

Board member John Sullivan, claiming that qualified applicants in the first two groups of interviewees had been rejected, nominated Eugene C. Macomber. Macomber had applied for assistant principal post twice previously.

Vice-chairwoman Patricia Toland, who said the committee could only consider nominations approved by Dr. Creedon, ruled Sullivan's nomination out of order.

Marina Zoning Hearing Sept. 26

The Quincy Planning Board will hold a public hearing Wednesday Sept. 26, at 8:30 p.m., in City Hall on three zoning changes requested by Marina Industries, Inc., on the site of the old Squantum Naval Air Station.

Marina Industries is seeking to have the largest of the three sections adjacent to the former Boston Harbor Marina skating rink and tennis courts changed from Planned Unit Development (PUD) to Industrial A.

The second and third zoning change requests involve the access road from East Squantum St., which currently crosses land zoned PUD and Residential B.

Walter J. Hannon, of Marina Industries Real Estate Department said there are no specific plans for developing the acreage.

"We just want to conform to the land which is Industrial A zoning," he said.

"We have six buildings in non-conforming use. We want to put them all under the same umbrella."

Hannon said the company's lawyers have advised that "to obtain legal access to the industrial area it will be necessary to request that the roadway be classified as Industrial A."

High School Honor Roll Policy To Be Reviewed

The School Committee has decided to review its policy on high school honor rolls at the end of the school year's second quarter.

The vote was taken last week on a motion by board member Christopher Kennedy, who noted the matter had been before the committee since June without any action.

The committee last year changed the honor roll at North Quincy High School to match that of Quincy High. Both schools now have honor roll qualifications based on ability-weighting grades in honor and college-prep courses more than those in basic and standard levels.

Parents of North Quincy students have protested the new system, saying it denies basic and standard students the incentive of making the honor roll.

Although the committee will study the effects of the new system at mid-school year, Dr. Creedon said he would not recommend an immediate change at that time.

Model Shipbuilding Co. To Launch Minesweeper

The LeClair Model Shipbuilding Company will name and launch its newest model minesweeper, USS Sagittarius (MSO-302) Sept. 29, at 2 p.m., at 264 Newbury Ave., North Quincy.

The keel of the new model destroyer, USS Gillette, will be laid.

Sponsor for the USS Sagittarius will be John C. Litebody, vice president of LeClair Model Shipbuilding Company. The model, 16 inches long and weighing 2 pounds, is named after the zodiac sign.

The keel for the Sagittarius was laid on May 26, and initiated by Rita C. Kelly, daughter of Mr. Kenneth Sweeney, head photographer of LeClair Model Shipbuilding Company. This ship is the 31st model to be built by the model company since its inception in 1967.

Gloria Chun, editor of the Blade—a Gillette Company newspaper—will initiate the keel of the USS Gillette, signifying the formal start of construction of the new model destroyer (the birth of the ship).

The USS Gillette will be 3 feet long and will weigh ten pounds when completed. It is being named in honor of King C. Gillette, the inventor of the safety razor and founder of the Gillette Company based in the city of Boston.

This ship, the 32nd ship built by the LeClair Model Company, is the first of seven of new class model destroyers and is scheduled to be completed in April, 1980.

Tsongas Visit Stirs Ward 2 Campaign Tempest taking sides in a fight between two Democrats?"

And with that the phone started ringing off the hook in Tsongas' Boston office.

"Paul is just going to appear in her behalf," Miss Gilmartin explained. "He has nothing against her opponent. It's a personal thing. He's not going to be critical or disparaging of any other people."

She acknowledged that the Tsongas office had received "a number of calls complaining about it, but the senator believes that once you make a commitment you don't back down on it."

One of the calls was from Raymond.

"I called him Friday," said the Councilor. "He explained that it was not a political visit. I told him I'd like to be there to talk about ward problems with him. He said, 'Fine. Come ahead.'"

That was why Raymond, his wife, Sharyn, and some 30 supporters showed up at Kathy O'Donnell's fund raiser Sunday at noon.

"We went to see our United States senator," said Raymond. "We wanted to talk to him about oil problems, the shipyard and downtown Quincy."

Miss O'Donnell said Tsongas spent about 40 minutes at a private brunch upstairs at the Lebanon Club with O'Donnell supporters. She estimated the turnout at nearly 200 at $10 a ticket.

"Paul said nice things about me," she said. "I was there working for him when nobody else was. He said, 'I'm not getting involved in Quincy politics but Kathy is very special to me.'"

She said the plan for a public reception downstairs at the club was changed because "we felt we didn't want Paul in the situation of getting crushed in the crowd. He only stayed six or seven minutes."

Raymond said there weren't enough people at the reception to crush anyone.

"They didn't want to embarrass him with the small crowd," he said.

What particularly irritated Miss O'Donnell was a Raymond flyer that was circulated in the Point on Saturday with Tsongas' picture in one corner and Raymond's in the other.

"I said Paul was going to be in Quincy Sunday and Dan was going to meet him to discuss the General Dynamics situation," said Miss O'Donnell. "The whole thing was very unprofessional."

Raymond said that he invited Tsongas to take a tour of the Shipyard and downtown Quincy with him after the O'Donnell reception.

"He said, 'No,'" said Raymond.

QUINCY PUBLIC SCHOOLS NOTICE

The Quincy Public Schools today announced a free milk and free meal and reduced price meal policy for school children unable to pay the full price of milk and meals served in schools under the National School Lunch, School Breakfast Program and Special Milk Program. Local school officials have adopted the following family size-income criteria for use in determining eligibility.

INCOME ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA FAMILY SIZE AND GROSS INCOME SCALES

Family Size [All members of household]	Maximum Gross Income For Free Milk and Free Meals	Maximum Gross Income For Reduced Price Meal
One	$0 to 4,590	$ 4,591 to 7,160
Two	0 to 6,040	6,041 to 9,420
Three	0 to 7,490	7,491 to 11,680
Four	0 to 8,940	8,941 to 13,940
Five	0 to 10,390	10,391 to 16,200
Six	0 to 11,840	11,841 to 18,470
Seven	0 to 13,290	13,291 to 20,730
Eight	0 to 14,740	14,741 to 22,990
Each additional family member	1,450	2,260

Children from families whose income is at or below those shown are eligible for milk and meals free or at reduced prices. In addition, families not meeting this criteria but with other special hardship conditions due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply. Further, children having parents or guardians who become unemployed are eligible for free or reduced price meals or for free milk during the period of unemployment, provided that the loss of income causes the family income during the period of unemployment to be within the eligibility criteria. Should your income or family size change, contact the approving official.

To discourage the possibility of misrepresentation, the following statement is placed just above the parents' or guardians' signature on the application: "I certify that the above information I have given is true and correct, that the application is being made in connection with the receipt of State and Federal Funds, that school officials may for cause: [1] request an informal conference with the parents to substantiate the information on the application [or it requested by either party the Fair Hearing Procedure may be used]; [2] verify the information on the application, and that deliberate misrepresentation of the information may subject the applicant to prosecution under applicable State and Federal criminal statutes."

Parents should clearly understand that every meal served in schools is subsidized to a greater or lesser degree by State-Federal reimbursements. Those lunches served at full price are subsidized as well as those served free or reduced. Therefore, there should be no reluctance to apply for either a free, or reduced price meal. If your family size, and gross income is within the "Income Eligibility Criteria" for free or reduced price meals, we urge you and all eligible parents to fill out the application. The intent of these programs is to improve the nutrition of all children.

They may do so by filling in the application forms sent home with a letter to parents. The information provided on the application will be confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted any time during the school year. In certain cases foster children are eligible for free milk and free meals or reduced price meals regardless of your family income. If you have such children living with you and wish to apply for such milk and meals for them, please file a separate application for each child, and indicate amount of State support only as income.

Under the provision of the policy the Principal in each school will review all applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may wish to discuss the decision with the approving official on an informal basis or make a request either orally or in writing for a hearing to appeal the decision to Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon, Superintendent, Quincy Public Schools, Quincy, MA 02169, 471-0100.

Hearing procedures are outlined in the policy and a complete copy of the policy is on file in the office of the superintendent of schools where it may be reviewed by any interested party.

The policy also provides that there will be no overt identification and/or discrimination against any child because of his race, sex, color, national origin, in the operation of the child feeding programs.

Application forms for the Free or Reduced Price Meals have been sent home to all the parents of children in the city or they may be obtained from the following agencies:

'Fund Pay Raises Yourself' Tobin Tells Committee

committee to grant the 4 percent raise agreed upon this June and scheduled to take effect July 1.

Vice chairwoman Patricia Toland said that prior commitments prevented Tobin from meeting with the board and asked that any action be delayed "out of courtesy" to him.

But board member Francis Anselmo said "unless you take action, we are a bunch of actors making a farce of collective bargaining. I would love to see this issue end up in court to protect this committee's fiscal autonomy."

Board member Joan Picard added "It's high time we took a stand and stopped hiding behind the shield of tabling things."

"He (the mayor) will certainly have his say when the budget goes across the street," she said.

Mrs. Toland and Mary Collins opposed any action on the budget request, while Anselmo, Mrs. Picard, John Sullivan and Christopher Kennedy voted in favor.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon told the board that merely sending the supplemental budget to Tobin wouldn't settle the custodians' union grievance.

The union's grievance concerns the payment of the contract, which depends on Tobin's acceptance of the supplementary budget. Cost of funding the 4 percent raise is placed at $315,000.

Much of last week's meeting dealt with assorted labor problems. The presence of about 75 teachers protesting the lack of progress in negotiations between the committee and the Quincy Education Association forced the relocation of the meeting from the committee's offices to a larger room in Quincy High School.

Robert Garner, president of the QEA, was then allowed to address the committee on the contract hassles.

The teachers present, he said, sought "to express by their presence their deep personal concern for negotiations between the committee and the QEA."

Speaking of the three major hangups in the negotiations, layoffs, extra hours and a pay increase, Garner said:

● "We're not necessarily married to seniority as the only absolute way to conduct layoffs. We can accept a lottery, we can accept seniority." The teachers are only concerned that the layoffs be conducted with "absolute fairness," he said.

● "We are willing to work 100 hours each. We're willing to work any amount of hours the Quincy School Committee wants us to work. But that request ought to be accompanied by some monetary consideration."

School committee negotiators have requested that teachers work an extra 45 minutes each day without extra pay.

● On the size of the pay raise, Garner said, "our position is moderate." He reminded the board that most teachers have not been paid since June 21 and added "I have my first heat bill, but I don't have my first check yet. My heat bill is more than it was last year and I hope my check is too."

The committee also heard two other union grievances, from the custodians' and maintenance workers' unions.

LaForest, representing the custodians, asked the committee to appoint more permanent employees from the civil service list. The department's staff now includes 10 or 11 temporary custodians, he said.

In response to a question from Sullivan, LaForest admitted temporary employees are not required to pay union dues and that the grievance might be withdrawn if they could be required to pay.

Thomas Picard of the maintenance union discussed a grievance concerning the appointment of an acting foreman for one work crew while the actual foreman was on vacation.

While there is no specific regulation covering this practice, Picard said, the department's policy has been to appoint the senior member of the crew as acting foreman.

This practice was violated this summer, however, when an employee "with 26 years of dedicated service" was passed over as acting foreman for a man with lesser experience, Picard said.

Because of the alleged shift, the man underwent "terrific strain," he had a heart attack and is now in the hospital, he added.

Antonelli Building Platform Supports For Pope's Mass

Boston and the engineer, Brown Rona, Inc. of Boston.

Nobody at Antonelli seems to mind the extra hours being put in on behalf of the pontiff's platform, Stearns said.

"We're all enthused about it," he said. Much of the company's regular work had to be pushed aside temporarily to complete the platform.

Antonelli's ironworkers were to cut metal tubing into the specified lengths and weld them together into the proper sections. The sections were to be delivered by Wednesday to the Boston Common, where the South Boston firm of Daniel Marr and Son would begin to erect the platform.

The structure may not be Antonelli's biggest job in terms of volume of steel, Stearns said, "but in terms of importance, I guess it is."

Impressive Presidents At Weymouth South

By TOM SULLIVAN
Quincy High's football teams hadn't won an opening day game since 1972 but last Saturday the Presidents combined an awesome running game with a highly impressive defense to outclass Cambridge Rindge and Latin in a Suburban League game, although their winning margin was a deceiving 18-12 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Second-year coach Tom Fitzgerald hopes for a similar two-way performance Saturday when Quincy visits Weymouth South for a 1:30 p.m. league game. Weymouth won its first game in a year and a half last week, 6-2, over Hingham.

Quincy's impressive statistics show that last week's game was not nearly as close as the score would indicate. Sparked by a brilliant exhibition by Co-Capt. Tom Brennan (only 5-7 and 155 pounds), who ran for 147 yards and had another 35 yards nullified by penalties, the Presidents gained a net of 339 yards on the ground while holding Cambridge to just 85. Quincy, which didn't do much passing, added 53 yards on four completions to 16 yards for Cambridge and the Presidents rolled up 20 first downs to six.

Quincy's one problem was the number of holding penalties, which stopped several promising drives. The Presidents were hit with five such penalties and this is one thing the coaches will be working hard to remedy this week. Brennan's remarkable performance was aided tremendously by the blocking of Fran Duggan (228-pound junior) and senior Co-Capt. Geoff Callisch, two of the finest offensive tackles seen in these parts. Their blocking was devastating.

"I was very encouraged by our showing today," Fitzgerald said. "We moved the ball very well and the defense was outstanding. We have only two turnovers on defense and give our defensive coaches, Bill Maver and Joe Goguen, a lot of credit. Brennan was just tremendous both ways. He stays in there all the time both on offense and defense and, for his size, he must be just about the best all-around back anywhere.

"Duggan and Callisch were unbelievable in the offensive line and we also showed that if other teams key on Brennan, we can still gain a lot of ground with Ed Iodice, Dan Goldrick, Dave Austin and Scott Richardson."

Two Quincy mistakes were responsible for the Cambridge touchdowns, a pass into the flat which was intercepted and run back 70 yards and a bad pass from center on a punt situation which gave the visitors the ball on Quincy's 34.

Fitzgerald praised Austin at quarterback for his running and passing and for his flawless handoffs.

Offensive coaches Peter Chella and Mark Conroy had good words for the line, especially Duggan and Callisch, and also Howie Chadbourne, Tom Rand, Jeff Heath, Paul Bandera and Sean Burke.

On defense Maver and Goguen said Lou Matthews was outstanding and also praised Mike Petrillo, Duggan, John Varrasso, Ed Quinlan, Ed Mackey, Brennan, Charlie McCall, Jim McNeil, Paul Martin, Walter Kilgallon and Bill Flynn.

"We are going to have to cut down on our holding penalties, they could prove costly," Fitzgerald said. "We probably would have scored a couple of more times if it hadn't been for the penalties."

Cambridge came on strong at the start, with Kevin Hill running especially well, but Quincy held and started a good drive of its own.

Led by Brennan, the Presidents drove to Cambridge's 14 but, after a Quincy offside, Jim Desrosiers stepped in front of an Austin pass on Cambridge's 30 and raced down the sidelines 70 yards to put Rindge and Latin in front with time running out in the period.

Quincy marched from its 41 following the kickoff and early in the second quarter Brennan scored from the six to tie the score.

It didn't take the Presidents long to take the lead after Petrillo recovered a fumble on Quincy's 47. A 25-yard run by Austin sparked the drive and Brennan went over from the eight.

Midway in the third period Ron Pettinelli was back to punt but the pass from center bounced past him, Cambridge had the ball on Quincy's 34 and six plays later quarterback Kevin Robinson sneaked over from the one.

Quincy then drove 70 yards, all on the ground, and Iodice scored the winning touchdown from the two.

Quincy's only fumble was recovered by Cambridge on its 37 and it took to the air but McCall clinched things for Quincy with a pass interception on his 14 and one play later the game was over and Quincy had its first opening day win in seven years.

Raiderettes Show Promise

North Quincy girls' soccer coach Brian Tilley hopes to improve upon last year's 3-7-2 record and the Raiderettes showed promise last week when they tied Waltham, 1-1, in their Suburban League opener.

They played another fine game in losing to Newton North's defending Suburban League champs, 2-0.

"We have a fine nucleus of veterans and many new hopefuls who look good," Tilley said. "We have a young team but enough seniors to give the team good balance and to help out the younger players."

Returning seniors include Tri-

Capt. Paula Keaney, Cheryl Ayres, Lori Ryan and Jean Zdzankowski, who play on defense, and Tri-Capt. Eileen Mackey and Christine Tedeschi, Susan Cahill, Denise Chase and Ann O'Hare, who play on the forward line.

The defense also includes returning juniors Lauren Apollo, Mary Costa, Margie Ladas, Jackie Thayer and Lisa Cavanaugh, who will also play in goal. Junior forwards are Kim Alberti, Robyn O'Donnell, Susan Orlando and Denise Woodman.

Among the new hopefuls are seniors Tish Negas and Elaine Robertson, both defensesmen, and Regina Buckley, Christine Engrossia, Becky Holcomb and Christine Keenan.

The promising sophomores are Maureen Berry, Siobhan Corrigan, Jean Petit, Elva Reed, Caryn Smith and Lisa Welbey.

Ladas scored the goal against Waltham on a penalty kick and Cavanaugh was outstanding in goal. Thayer stood out on defense. Cavanaugh also shone against Newton and Apollo played well.

The Raiderettes will play at Weymouth South Monday and host Cambridge Ridge and Latin next Wednesday. Home games are played at O'Rourke Field.

--TOM SULLIVAN

North Golfers Off To Good Start

The North Quincy golf team got off to a good start last week with a 5-3-3-3 win over Weymouth South in a Suburban League match and Coach Jim Ducey is optimistic about improving upon last year's 3-5 record.

The Raiders faced Weymouth North Tuesday and next Monday will be at Newton. North plays its home matches at the Presidents' course in Wollaston.

"We have two boys back from last season, senior Mark Barry, a member of Furnace Brook, and Greg Therrien, a junior who played at the Falmouth Country Club this summer," Ducey said. "Both should play in most, if not all, of our matches this year."

North has two fine transfers,

Mike McNeice, a resident of Montclair who last year went to B. C. High, and Chris Palmer, who played three years at Falmouth High. McNeice is probably the Raiders' number one player, is a member of Furnace Brook and is also an excellent hockey player. Palmer is also an excellent player.

"These four players form the nucleus of our team, which I expect will be much improved over last year," Ducey said. "I am hoping to be much more competitive this year against the stronger league teams such as Newton North, Brookline, Brookton and Waltham."

Also expected to see a great deal of action and help the Raider cause are John Wallace and John Sweet.

Quincy Needs Experience

The Quincy girls' soccer team had only a 1-10-1 record last year and, although Coach Ron Martin sees some improvement this season because of the start of junior high soccer, he feels the First Ladies are still behind because of no youth program.

"We should do better as we have more girls playing with some experience, but until there is a youth program in the city, we will still be behind the other schools," Martin said.

In goal Ron has senior Terri Flynn and the fullbacks are juniors Nancy Chludinski and Diane Solander and senior Sandy Labucci.

For halfbacks there are seniors Clare Lynch and Kerry Kirk and sophomore Nancy MacDonald. The forwards are all underclassmen, junior Donna Bates and sophomores Kathy Duggan, Diane Coska and Eileen Morrison. Sophomores Elizabeth Doherty and Denise Dupuis are capable reserves.

Quincy dropped its opener last week to Weymouth North, 5-0. It then was bombed by Brookline, 9-0.

The First Ladies will host Newton Friday and Waltham next Monday at O'Rourke Field.

Bulldogs Romp Over Layden Club, 24-0

Quincy's newest semi-pro football team, the Bulldogs, evened its Boston Park League record at 1-1 last Friday with a 24-0 win over the Layden Club of Dorchester at East Boston Stadium. The Bulldogs had lost their opener to the Shelburne Cobras of Roxbury, finalists a year ago, 15-0.

The Quincy team, which uses East Boston Stadium for its home games due to the unavailability of a field in Quincy, will play Eddie's Giants Friday night at 7:30 at Fields Corner.

The Bulldogs' offensive line of Bill Newman, Tony Glenn, Joe O'Connor and Steve Jenkins opened big holes for Bob Ricciardi and Paul Dube.

Ricciardi, out of Northeastern University, scored two touchdowns, one on a 28-yard pass from quarterback Jim Scibilla. Pete Zilonis scored on a five-yard pass late in the fourth period and Scibilla passed for 31 yards to Frank T. Tannanini for the first TD.

The defensive line put the pressure on the Layden Club attack with Pete Rafferty especially outstanding. Also starring on defense were Joe Cortese, George Cronin, Jim Rogers and Rene Marchando.

Track Club Members Look Good In Northeastern Meet

The Quincy Track Club came up with several fine early season performances last Saturday in the Northeastern Track Club Invitational cross country meet over the Franklin Park course.

In the women's 5000-meter race Donna Reardon, a Quincy High standout, placed 21st in 20:45, and was the QTC's first finisher. Georgia Traficante, 12, and Tracy Coull, also 12, both finished under 23 minutes, and Michelle Millane, who is best known for her performances in the discus and shot put, finished in 27:26. Michelle is using cross country to build up her endurance for the winter track season.

In the boys' race Harry Morash, 11, finished in 20:21.5, and Kevin Dunn, running his first cross country race, did 22:42.

The QTC will hold its third annual awards banquet Friday, Sept. 28, at 7 p.m. at Atlantic Junior High School. For tickets call club secretary Linda Morash at 479-3175.

Brad Park Guest At Abou Ben Adhem Dinner

'Green' Raiders Host Powerful Brockton

North Quincy's young and green football team jumps from the frying pan into the fire Saturday when it hosts powerful Brockton, the Suburban League favorite, in a 1:30 game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Raiders played well in their opener last week but dropped an 18-7 decision to a big, veteran Milton team, one of the top Bay State League teams.

Brockton, with a veteran club led by Chuck Colombo, one of the best passers in Eastern Mass., walloped Dedham, 20-0, last week and is being picked by just about everyone to win the Suburban League.

"We played a good game at Milton," Coach Dave Burke said. "They beat us with two big plays. We don't have much experience on offense or defense and Milton is a much more experienced team. Jack Bowes, (former North assistant), has a really fine team and I don't think we will face a much stronger club this year."

An 80-yard run on the second play of the game and a long pass which was deflected by a North player into the hands of the receiver were the two plays which killed North.

North's defense played well and stopped the Hawks several times. Defensive coaches Ken McPhee and Jack Raymer were pleased and singled out Glen Segalla, who had a pass interception and several tackles, in particular for his performance. They also hailed Capt. Leo Graham, Tony Camillo, Steve Mastorelli, Paul O'Sullivan, Jim McGuinness, Steve Pike (until injured), Chris Petrillo, Dave Howley, Glen Ross, John Gorceyza, Eddie Miller, who played well both ways, and big Bill Stacy, playing his first year of football, who showed promise.

North's lone score came on a long pass from Kevin Durkin to Jack Leone and Burke had good words for Durkin, Bill Dailey, who ran well, Pat Carroll for his blocking, Joe Crifo, Graham, who had a fine two-way game, and Bob McCormack.

Offensive Coach George Liset felt the line did well considering its inexperience and hailed the performances of Jim Dodd, Miller, John McNamara, Kevin Doherty, Lou DiPietro, Ed Hannon, John Buckley, Dave Penzo, Leone and Joe Mullen.

"We have more than 100 boys playing football, 40 on the varsity, 30 on the jayvees and 32 with the sophomores," Burke said. "We just have to find the right players and once we do we'll begin to jell. I just hope we can give Brockton a good game, they look like the team to beat in our league."

John Andon was the player who ruined the Raiders, scoring all three touchdowns and gaining 115 yards. On the second play from scrimmage he broke loose and galloped 80 yards to put the Hawks in front, 6-0.

North came right back and Durkin hit Leone with a 36-yard scoring pass and Leone kicked the point to give the Raiders a 7-6 edge.

In the second period John Bibinski passed to Andon, who grabbed the ball when it was deflected by a North defender, the scoring play covering 26 yards.

Milton scored again in the final period when Andon pushed across from the one.

Bobby Nevins Honored As 'Best Coach Of Year'

The members of the Palmer Pub softball team, which recently ended its season, were guests of its honorary coach, Bobby Nevins, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Nevins of 80 Bicknell St., at a cookout.

Mr. and Mrs. Nevins hosted the team to express their gratitude to the team's thoughtfulness and love shown to Bobby throughout the year.

Bobby, a 24-year-old brain damaged adult, has never been able to participate in sports in the normal way but, as "honorary coach," he attended every practice and every game played by the Palmer Pub team and brought to the team his enthusiasm and encouragement.

These are Bobby's best talents and he gave them 100 percent. The team recognized Bobby's talents and, at a surprise presentation, gave him a trophy with the inscription "Best Coach of the Year," in addition to a team shirt and cap.

The Palmer Pub softball team did not win the divisional title this year. But Bobby and his parents will always remember this 1979 team as champions.

offense this season.

and Hale were named the Most Valuable Players.

Quincy's B team didn't fare as well as it lost, 11-8. Geeza McInnis and Wizza Wilson scored for Quincy. Dr. Fred Murray and Dave Reed were named the MVPs.

It Was A Big Night For Both Yaz And Vincent

Wednesday, Sept. 12 was a pretty big night for Carl Yastrzemski, but also a memorable one for Vincent DiGiacomo of Quincy Point.

Vincent, a fourth grader at the Daniel Webster School, not only witnessed Yaz's 3000th hit, but was interviewed by ABC-TV cameramen who were at Fenway Park to record the feat. The interview, along with those of several other Sox fans who were asked what they thought of Yastrzemski, was aired on ABC's Evening News the following evening.

Vincent and his father, Anthony DiGiacomo, who live at 110 Lancaster St., Quincy Point, were in the grandstands on the first-base side Wednesday night. Vincent, a big Red Sox fan who collects autographs, baseballs and other souvenirs, was down by the home team dugout before the game chatting with some players when the ABC cameraman asked him what he thought of Yastrzemski.

"He's the greatest," Vincent said, among other things.

The DiGiacomo family was glued to the TV set most of Thursday, and almost gave up hope. "They interviewed a lot of people, I was afraid they wouldn't use him," DiGiacomo said.

Sure enough, Vincent's face popped onto the screen at around 7:26 p.m., his dad reports. Although few of his relatives caught it, Vincent says "All the kids in my class saw it."

Harold Seeks State Accounting On Federal Programs

Sen. Paul D. Harold [D-Quincy] says he will seek to amend the state budget to require an accounting of federal programs in which the state is participating.

The purpose of the amendment, which will not affect spending in the current budget, is to provide the legislature with information on how much money in the state is committed to spending on such programs before the budget is acted upon, Harold said.

"The problem is that many state agencies are applying for federal programs which require the state to provide matching funds," he said. "The legislature is not informed about these programs, and so money is committed to spending before we even see the budget."

He said that in many cases, agencies sign up for two or three year periods of federal programs, which require state matching money each year.

"This growing tendency toward state and federal matching money is having a serious impact on the budget and on the ability of the legislature to control spending," Harold said.

"An accounting which shows what programs we are involved with and how much we are committed to spending would enable us to see where the taxpayers' money is going for these programs."

Joint Photography, Water Color Exhibit At Main Library

"The House", a joint exhibit by photographer Carole A. Carlson of Pembroke, and watercolorist Mary A. Smith of Wollaston, is being shown at the Main Hall Gallery of the Thomas Crane Public Library through September.

The works in the show were done on the grounds or inside of an antique Cape in Pembroke, formerly the home of artist and printmaker, George Lockwood.

Each artist worked independently of the other. Works such as "Cinderella and Madame X" and "Shutters" show each artist's interpretation of the same subject.

Both artists also produced multiple works on subjects showing the same scene at different times of the day or year.

The exhibit was recently shown at the Staircase Gallery, Hingham.

Miss Carlson studied photography at Bridgewater State College and MIT. She has exhibited at the South Shore Art Center, Cohasset; Bridgewater State College, North River Arts Festival, Marshfield, Duxbury Art Complex and the Pembroke Art Festivals.

Miss Smith holds a B.A. degree in English literature from Boston University and studied landscape architecture at Radcliffe. She also attended Harvard University's Graduate School of Design.

She is a member of the Copley Society of Boston; the South Shore Art Center, Cohasset; Woods Hole Gallery and Schnabel, Hingham.

Miss Smith has exhibited at the Cohasset Art Festival; the Junior League Designer's Showcase, Milton; the Pembroke Art Festival; the Norwell Public Library; the JFK Building and the Channel 2 Show, both in Boston.

Board Hears Complaints On Lakin Sq. Dairy Freeze

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Ward Councillors and Lakin Square residents concerned with the impact of local businesses on their area came before the License Board Tuesday with complaints against Dairy Freeze, Adams St.

Councillors James Sheets and James J. Lydon, and Carolyn Reardon, president of the Lakin Square Neighborhood Association told of problems with litter, odor and parking connected with the establishment.

A petition signed by 105 residents was presented to the board as were photos of the area.

City Clerk John Gillis reminded the more than 15 neighbors assembled that there were no objections to the Dairy Freeze by abutters when the license was issued six years ago.

He also said that there have been no previous complaints and that while the photos did show heavy parking in the area, they really didn't picture litter in the area.

After hearing the complaints, John Wallace and John Faherty, of Dairy Freeze, expressed their willingness to meet with neighbors and work on the problems.

They said that the water wash for cooking equipment which should be eliminating odors will be checked out, and employees will be instructed to pick up litter.

Gillis suggested that a police patrol work on the parking problems.

The hearing was continued until Oct. 2.

La other matters:

• John S. Isaac, of Ann's Newport Deli, 299 Newport Ave., came before the board to show cause why the license should not be revoked for failure to comply with the terms of the license which specify counter, but no sit down, service.

Possible violation of the license came to light Sept. 4, when Vissarion Zarras, of Whitman, and Anthanasios Mettas, of Brockton, appeared before the board for transfer of the common victualer license.

They bought the shop during the summer and told the board that there were two tables and chairs on the premises.

Discussion followed on the board's intent in specifying "counter service" in the license which could mean "at" counter or "over" counter service.

Building Inspector Allen MacDonald said it was his understanding that there would be no consuming on the premises.

Police Chief Francis X. Finn reiterated MacDonald's understanding saying the area couldn't handle that kind of establishment with the heavy traffic problem.

Zarras and Mettas indicated that they would not have bought the shop from Isaac, who is having financial difficulties, for the price that they paid had they known there could be no sit down service.

Chief Finn said that he felt badly for both parties, and that it was a no win situation.

Lydon said it was not the problem or responsibility of the board to be arbitrators of business. He called for the board to either revoke the license or leave it as a "take out" business only.

Finn moved that the license not be revoked if kept within the specified restrictions, and the board approved.

MacDonald then moved to transfer the license to Zarras and Mettas, which was also approved by the board.

• Robert R. McManus, of the Donna Marie Rooming House, 110 Billings St., appeared before the board to show cause why the license should not be revoked because of conditions in and around the premises.

MacDonald told the board the building is a "disgrace". He said there are open wires hanging, half painted windows, and a "happy face" painted on the side of the building. Hand rails are needed as well as other repairs, he said.

Gillis said the license has not been paid for since 1977, pending completion of repair work. He said that his concern is for tenants.

McManus said that he was doing the repairs himself and that delays were due to financial matters. He said that he could have everything done within two weeks.

The hearing was continued for a month and McManus was told to meet with the building inspector, city solicitor and Lt. Det. David Rowell of the Quincy Police. Complaints will be taken out if necessary.

The License Board also:

• Heard complaints about neighborhood disturbances at Seven-Eleven, 75 Copeland St.

Stephen Brown, of Seven-Eleven, said that he is getting an estimate for lights for a back lot where groups can congregate. A police unit will be concentrated in the area.

• Granted a request from L. Antonelli Iron Works, Inc., for storage at 170 Willard St., (formerly Quincy Cement Block Co.) for, aboveground, 800 gallons of paint, 100 gallons of alcohol, 100 gallons of turpentine; underground, 1,000 gallons of gas for private use, and 1,000 gallons of diesel fuel for private use.

• Continued for one week, pending an inspection by the Joint Inspection Team, a request from Vasilios Giansimidis for a common victualer license for Friendly Pizza, 1622 Hancock St. (formerly Bob & Ray's Submarine Sandwiches).

• Granted a request from Raymond Kirpa, of Old Colony Crushed Stone and Construction Co., Inc., 26 Vernon St., for a permit to store 10,000 gallons of No. 2 heating oil above-ground in addition to present storage.

a full board will be present, (Fire Chief Edward Barry was not at Tuesday's meeting) a hearing on P.D.M., Inc., a scrap yard at 175 Intervale St.

The hearing was to show cause why the junk shop license should not be revoked because of failure to comply within 60 days with the Board's decisions of June 21.

A notice will be hand delivered by the Quincy Police to Henry P. Gregoire of P.D.M., to appear next week.

• Granted a common victualer license to Clifton W. Sheppard, of Beale St. Fish Market, Inc., 35 Beale St.

• Granted a request from Richard M. Ryan, 646 Washington St., Weymouth, for an auctioneer's license.

• A hearing on a request from Quincy House Corp., 24-29 Hancock St. for transfer of innholder and all alcoholic licenses for the Carlton House was withdrawn without prejudice by the corporation's attorney. They may reappear at a later date.

• No action was taken on complaints against Linda's, 1234 Sea St., (formerly Sea St. Lunch), which was closed by the Health Dept.

Shipyard Situation Still Bleak

Pleas Continue Despite $23.8M Contract

General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard won a $23.8 million contract to repair a Navy cable ship last week but it did not stop the deluge of appeals to President Carter for long-term work to keep the Yard open.

"Some people might think the future looks bright for the shipyard because of that contract," said City Councillor Daniel G. Raymond, "but we have to realize that's only a short-term thing that might save 400 or 500 jobs.

"The only thing it will do is slow down the layoffs," said Shipbuilders Union Local 5 president Arthur Z. Durand of the Neptune cable ship award. The repair work will occupy about 500 workers at the shipyard for about a year, beginning this February, he said.

"The yard won't stay open on repair work forever," Durand added. "We need new construction."

"When you look to the future you need long-term employment with multi-million dollar contracts," Raymond said.

Raymond introduced, and the Council passed, a resolution imploring Carter to use whatever influence is necessary with the Navy or any other agency to secure work for General Dynamics.

Pleas were also dispatched from the State House of Representatives, the Norfolk County Commissioners, and the Democratic State Committee.

Meanwhile, Cong. Brian J. Donnelly wrote to City Council President John J. Quinn outlining some of the federal programs available to unemployed shipyard workers. He called the outlook "bleak."

Recently, the Shipyard suffered a blow when the Navy, ignoring the fact that General Dynamics was low bidder by $10 million, awarded a $107 million contract for a cable ship to a San Diego, Calif., yard.

Then came news that the Air Force has registered objections to construction of liquefied natural gas terminal in California, thus endangering potential contracts to build six LNG tankers.

Massive layoffs are expected next month when work on the last of 10 LNG tankers begins to wind down. The yard may be faced with a shutdown next August.

Donnelly explained to Quinn the possibilities that would be available for federal aid to some 4,700 workers who may wind up on the unemployment rolls.

"The principal program available to the unemployed shipworkers is Trade Adjustment Assistance," he said. "Petition has already been filed for adjustment benefits."

"If approved, this section of the Trade Act of 1974 would extend to all qualified furloughed shipbuilding workers basic assistance benefits for 52 weeks.

"These benefits, when added to the state unemployment insurance payments such as the worker is entitled to, equal 70 per cent of the average weekly wage of the worker."

Introducing his resolution, Raymond said:

"Many shipyard workers whom I have talked with are frightened. They are troubled about the unknown future and what looms ahead for their families.

"The people of Quincy continue to be concerned about the future of General Dynamics in Quincy and the cataclysmic impact its loss would have on the city of Quincy.

"We must all work together to bring to the attention of federal authorities the desperate need to maintain and increase the working force at the Quincy shipyard."

The State House resolution urging Carter to intercede for the yard was signed by Reps. Michael W. Morrissey, Thomas F. Brownell and Robert A. Cerasoli (all D-Quincy).

It called on Carter to "correct this injustice which will produce long range economic and human hardship" for an industry that is a "vital cornerstone of our state economy."

The House resolve echoed the words of one passed by the State Democratic Committee at the behest of Committeewoman Kathleen O'Donnell of Quincy.

Union Files Unfair Labor Complaint Against City

Bitterness between Mayor Tobin and representatives of some city employees unions continued to mount this week with the filing of an unfair labor complaint against the city by one union.

The complaint was filed by John Keefe, president of the Hospital, Library and Public Employees Union (HPLPE) Tuesday with the state Labor Relations Commission.

When asked if Tobin had any comment on Keefe's action, the mayor replied "No... I don't give a damn what he does."

Keefe has been one of the leading figures in organizing protests against the mayor's negotiating position.

The "charge of prohibited practice" alleges that the "city engaged on a bona fide offer after the Union made concessions to achieve that offer. Further, the action was taken during the course of fact finding."

The charge is based on a Sept. 14 letter from Joseph McParland, city labor negotiator, to representatives of the nine unions he bargains with.

The letter reads, in part: "As you know, the Mayor made an offer to your union for a salary increase of either $800.00 across the board or five percent effective April 1, 1979, and seven percent effective January 1, 1980. This offer was made subject to a tax cap being placed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts restricting the amount of money that the City could appropriate. The Commonwealth has in fact passed tax cap legislation, and in addition, there have been substantial reverses on the City's cherry select distribution. In view of the foregoing, I am withdrawing these offers at this time."

The city's withdrawal of the offer at this stage of the negotiations amounts to an unfair labor practice, said Keefe, whose union represents about 1,000 city employees.

The offer was made to the unions early this year, when Governor King's tax cap legislation was still in doubt and city officials were still unsure if a zero-increase limit or a five-percent cap would be put into effect, according to Tobin.

The $800 plus seven percent offer included a reopening clause, which allowed the city to withdraw the offer pending outcome of the tax cap or other unforeseen circumstances, the mayor added.

The deal was accepted by three unions—representing hospital technicians, public works laborers and other hospital workers.

Other unions rejected the proposal—including Keefe's.

"Mr. Keefe wasn't the least bit interested in the offer so we're withdrawing it from the table," Tobin said. "What the hell is he concerned about?"

"I can't read Mr. Keefe's mind; how can I possibly comment on what he's thinking?"

Regional Blood Supply Low, Donors Needed

A dramatic increase in scheduled surgery cases in Massachusetts hospitals and a slow week of blood donations have resulted in the regional blood supply dropping to dangerous levels.

David Westbrook, Eastern Massachusetts administrator for the American Red Cross Blood Service, says that some 1,000 pints of blood are needed by Sept. 21, to replenish supplies.

Past blood donors as well as those who may never have donated are asked to call their local Red Cross chapter to donate blood.

Negative blood types A, Band O are especially needed. Donors must be between age 17 and 65, weigh over 110 pounds, and never have had hepatitis.

Fond Farewell...

A FAREWELL KISS IS delivered to Ruth McFetridge, school crossing guard, by state representative Thomas Brownell. Mrs. McFetridge, who guided children from the Merrymount School across the Squanto Rd. - Quincy Shore Drive intersection for 13 years, transferred last week to a new assignment in her hometown, Belmont. She was presented with flowers from the school's administration and cards from many of the children.

Only Three City Vehicles Insured

Only three of the hundreds of vehicles owned by the city of Quincy are insured.

They are two vans and a passenger car used by the Council on Aging to transport senior citizens around town.

That unusual statistic came up recently at a City Council meeting when the Council was asked to approve an appropriation of $2,133 to pay insurance on the vans for the year 1977.

"Transporting the public is not a normal use of city vehicles," said City Solicitor Robert Fleming, who noted that other vehicles are self-insured by the city.

"We're exposing ourselves to greater liability by transporting passengers who are other than municipal employees covered by workmen's compensation."

City Auditor Charles L. Shea said that the Council on Aging's vehicles have been insured right along but the 1977 insurance bill arrived too late to be included in the 1979 budget.

A Notice To Our Readers

The Quincy Sun is 11 years old with today's issue.

This, of course, is a proud and happy milestone for all of us here at The Sun.

But we regret - as we prepare to start our 12th year that inflation has finally caught up with us.

Steadily rising costs - especially for newsprint, ink and postage over which we have no control - force us to make - our own price adjustment.

The 10 cent Quincy Sun, like the 10-cent cup of coffee, the 10-cent ice cream cone and 10-cent candy bar will soon be gone from the Quincy scene.

Effective Nov. 1, the home delivery and newsstand price of The Sun will be 15 cents.

Even at 15 cents, the price of The Sun will still be lower than that of most weekly newspapers. Many of them charge 20 cents and 25 cents.

New rates for subscriptions by mail are already going into effect this week. The new mail rates: $6.50 per year, $10 for two years and $15 for three years. Out-of-state subscriptions will now be $8.50 per year.

We have resisted - actually fought - raising the price for home delivery by news carrier and at the newsstand for a long time by absorbing the increased production costs. But we just no longer can.

Contract Protest Walkout

Union Defies Order, Votes Work Stoppage At City Hospital

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Service employees at Quincy City Hospital voted 66-8 Tuesday to ignore a "cease and desist" order and stage a one-day walkout Wednesday.

Jerry Shea, staff director of Local 880, said all but a handful of the 150 members would stay out of work from 6 a.m. Wednesday to 6 a.m. Thursday. Many of the employees would be picketing during the day, he said, to protest lack of progress in negotiations with the city.

Enough workers would remain on the job, on a rotating basis, to handle any emergencies that might arise, Shea said.

Members voted to go through with the walkout despite a "cease and desist" order from the state Labor Relations Commission ordering Local 880 not to encourage or take part in any work stoppage.

The commission also ordered Shea to appear before it at 10 a.m. Wednesday to determine if he had obeyed the terms of the order.

Local 880 represents about 150 workers at the hospital. They include X-ray, EEG, EKG and laboratory technicians, physical and respiratory therapists, pharmacists and social workers.

Although a contract was signed between the union and the city in February of this year, the union members are now without a contract.

The city used a "reopener clause" in the contract to void the Police Gird For Transit Crowds On Pope's Hub Visit

A full complement of police officers, some 50 on each shift, plus 45 auxiliary police will be on duty in Quincy Monday, Oct. 1, when Pope John Paul II visits Boston.

Quincy, with its three Red Line MBTA stations, is expected to be a popular jumping off for thousands of people en route to the Hub to greet the Pontiff and attend the Monday night Mass on Boston Common.

Police Chief Francis Finn strongly urged that people entering Quincy Monday do so by means other than private automobile since parking regulations will be strictly enforced.

He warned that if the number of cars in the city create safety hazards or unusual traffic tieups, police are authorized to seal off the entrances to the city, except for emergency vehicles.

Capt. Roy Cavicchi and Paul Lahive have been assigned to coordinate people, traffic and parking and Capt. William Daley was named liaison to other state and municipal agencies.

Auxiliary police, under the direction of Capt. Cavicchi and Lahive, will be on duty to provide services to the outer perimeter of the city and some preventive patrols in the neighborhoods.

"We will not be taken advantage of by criminal elements who may think this is an opportune time," said Chief Finn.

The Chief said police will be on duty in strength before the first MBTA train leaves Quincy Center station for Boston at 5:45 a.m. and remain until well after the last train arrives the next morning.

Rising Gasoline Costs Increase Illegal Parking

Increased gasoline prices appear to be causing parking problems around Quincy's three MBTA stations.

That's why City Councillor John J. Lydon Jr. has asked City Solicitor Robert Fleming to draft an ordinance "creating zoned parking around the MBTA stations which would demand a $10 minimum parking fine."

Lydon noted that "with the increase in gas prices, there has been a considerable increase in violations around the stations."

He suggested that, if zoned parking were not possible, fines throughout the city could be increased to $10.

Quincy Cab Fares Going Up Monday

Taxi rates in Quincy are going up Monday, Oct. 1.

The new rates of $1 for the first three fifths of a mile and 20 cents for each additional one-fifth of a mile were approved at a recent City Council meeting.

The old rates are $1.30 for the first mile and 10 cents for each additional one-seventh of a mile. Spokesman for Yellow Cab of Quincy, Inc., the major taxi company in the city, said it is planned to put the new rates into effect Oct. 1.

Councillor John J. Lydon Jr. said his Public Safety Committee recommended the increase because "the rates need to pay the overhead cost of operating is now below the cities around us."

Lydon assured Councillor

Daniel G. Raymondi that the City Council and the Council on Aging will continue to study the possibility of instituting special taxi fares for senior citizens.

Raymondi suggested that some federal, state or even city funds might be available to subsidize cab fares and "lessen the burden on the seniors of the city."

How Black Is Black!

By TOM HENSHAW

The city of Quincy is in deep financial trouble.

Just how deep was outlined by Mayor Tobin, Auditor Charles L. Shea and Treasurer Robert E. Foy III at a meeting of department heads last week.

Some of the points they made were these:

- The city has already borrowed $16 million in anticipation of taxes in the current fiscal year, or two-thirds of the money it expects to collect in the fall installment after tax bills are sent out.

- If disgruntled city employees had obtained an injunction prohibiting the setting of the tax rate the city might have been unable to borrow further and would have run out of money in October.

- Raising taxes to provide pay increases demanded by city workers would do little good since abatements would rise along with them as more and more people lost the ability to pay.

- Interest on tax anticipation notes, which was only $50,000 in fiscal 1975, has risen to $466,710 in fiscal 1979 (or $2 on the tax rate) as the city is forced to make more and more short-term loans.

Tobin, Shea and Foy painted this bleak picture of the city's finances:

The city budget for fiscal 1979 was $92,717,730. The budget for 1980 is $96,605,855, an increase of $3,888,125.

Of that increase, $3,233,597 is mandated by contract, law or court decision including $205,000 for employee insurance, $510,097 for retirements, $270,000 for workmen's compensation, $1,943,500 for debt service, and $260,000 for property appraisal.

"Property appraisals were mandated by the court," said Tobin. "Fringe benefits for employees, negotiated by previous administrations, amounts to $4 on the tax rate."

The fiscal 1979 deficit, which has to be raised on the fiscal 1980 budget, includes: Overlay (money set aside to cover tax appeals and rebates) $1,119,281, temporary loan interest $625,752, revenue deficit $2,133,315, for a total of $3,878,349.

"The fiscal 1978 deficit was $7,855,945, which we bonded most of it," said Tobin, "so we have cut the deficit almost in half. The deficit is going down but it is still mandated on us."

"The problem of the deficit," said Shea, "is its effect on the tax rate because we have to raise the entire amount."

The auditor said that $7,700,000 of the fiscal 1978 deficit of $7,855,945 was bonded so the effect on the 1979 tax rate was only $655,945, or about $2.50.

This year, however, it will be the full $3,878,349 or an increase over last year of $3,222,404.

Add that to the $3,888,125 increase in the budget and you get a $7,110,529 impact on the tax levy for fiscal 1980.

"We have certain offsets," said Shea. "The one known offset we have right now is a net increase in state aid on the cherry sheet of $1,474,467. That's what the state gives us, minus charges."

"This reduces the impact on the tax levy to $5,636,062."

"If no other revenue is found; if we stop right there; this means a tax rate increase of about $20 per $1,000 valuation."

"If you take the total union demands on the table right now," added Tobin, "you're talking $22 per $1,000 on top of the $20."

In many cases, such things can be made up out of "free cash", which Shea explained as the city's excess and deficiency (E and D) fund minus unpaid property taxes.

But, he said, the E and D fund stands at $535,115 and unpaid property taxes are $6,469,293, leaving a deficit of $5,934,177 in free cash.

A total of $2,916,261 in unpaid taxes is tied up in two cases before the tax appellate board. As

In 1933, Everybody Did It 10 Percent Salary Cut Not New

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Mayor Tobin's offer to take an up to 10-percent salary cut revived strong memories for Henry Nilsen, a former city engineer who's been through it all before.

While the city's going through tough times financially, it's nothing compared to those toughest of tough times, the Great Depression of the early 1930's, says Nilsen, a Merrimont resident.

At the low point of the Depression, in 1933, the city's finances were so bad city employees were asked to take a 10-percent salary cut by then-Mayor Charles Ross.

Surprisingly, just about all of them did, he recalls. "It was unanimous, as far as I know," he says.

The voluntary cut was in effect from March 1 until the end of 1933, says Nilsen, now 79.

City engineers like himself were hit hardest by the cut, he said. Budget problems forced them to work a three-day work week, starting May 29 of that year. This was because the highway, water and other departments that used the engineers' services didn't have money in their budgets to pay the fulltime salaries. The three-day week was also in effect until

Tobin Offers To Cut Own Salary As Example To City Employees

"Now, more than ever," said Mayor Tobin, "we should remember the words of John F. Kennedy: 'Ask not what the city can do for you...' The unions ought to be asking what they can do for their city."

And with that Tobin volunteered to take at least a 5 per cent cut, possibly a 10 per cent slash, in his own $25,000 a year salary, and suggested that each city worker "making a damn good salary" do the same.

Tobin is currently engaged in an apparently stalemated struggle with city employee unions over a cost of living pay hike which, he says, would cost the city some $22 on the tax rate.

"I'm not suggesting that the rank and file, the laborers, clerks and technicians who can't afford it, take a pay cut," he said.

"But the City Auditor informs me that we have several hundred city employees who make more money than the Mayor, including the hospital director, the school superintendent and a lot of fire and police officers."

"If they took a 10 per cent across the board cut... The salary budget for the city of Quincy is $62 million. A 10 per cent across the board cut would reduce the budget by $6 million."

"If we reduced it 5 per cent across the board it would amount to a good $10 on the tax rate. That would be $1,250 out of the Mayor's salary."

"If there are several hundred city employees making more money than the Mayor and I'm willing to donate $1,250 perhaps they would be willing too."

"If they did I'd go back to the City Council and reduce the budget by several million dollars."

"How many city employees want to stand up and say, 'Let's put the city first?'"

Squantum Resident

Ruth Ferrara Honored As 'Treasury Employee Of The Month'

Squantum resident Ruth V. Ferrara was recently chosen 'Treasury Employee of the Month' by Robert Q. Crane, state treasurer.

In announcing the honor, Crane called Mrs. Ferrara "a very capable and efficient individual who brings a refreshing enthusiasm to everything she does."

Mrs. Ferrara, a resident of 24 Orchard St., is head clerk in the treasury's registered bond department. It is her job to record, certify and send the bond certificates to the rightful investors. Last year her office handled over $50 million in general obligation bonds.

Mrs. Ferrara said she enjoyed the job because, "although I handle many facts and figures, I also get to deal with the public, and dealing with people has always been the most fun for me."

A 28-year resident of Quincy.

TREASURY EMPLOYEE OF THE MONTH Ruth Ferrara of Squantum accepts her citation from Robert Crane, state treasurer.

Mrs. Ferrara is a member of Mayor Tobin's Commission on the Status of Women. She devotes much of her spare time and energy to local theatre groups like "The Young At Heart Theatre" and the "Hingham Civic Music Theatre."

The honor was a pleasant surprise, said Mrs. Ferrara, while Crane called it "very well deserved."

SHATTER-PROOF GLASSES

Well over 20,000 children and 100,000 adults are injured each year in accidents involving broken eyeglass lenses. For many, the accident results in blindness. Ironically, this needless tragedy is easily preventable.

Shatter-resistant lenses have been available in this country for many years. The effectiveness of protective lenses has been well established. Studies show that during the past ten years over 34,000 persons involved in accidents avoided serious eye injuries by wearing safety glasses.

Evidently, the reason that most people do not own shatter-proof glasses is their invalid assumption that they would be unflattering because of extra thickness and weight. Surprisingly, this is completely untrue. Today's safety glasses are 50 percent lighter than glass lenses and in appearance cannot be distinguished from ordinary glass.

DOVE To Review First Year Progress

DOVE, a non-profit agency providing specialized services for battered women and their children will review the progress of its first year tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at Quincy District Court.

DOVE encourages persons who are interested in volunteering their time to help stem the problem of domestic abuse to attend.

Since DOVE opened its shelter for abused women from Norfolk County and the surrounding areas in September, 1978, more than 100 women and 170 children have received temporary housing. Many hundreds more women have received counselling and guidance through the DOVE hot line, 471-1234, and DOVE's court advocacy program.

The first year experience of DOVE has provided much insight into the problem of domestic abuse. The staff has compiled statistics showing the most frequent days and times of entering the shelter; the age, education, occupation and employment of the assailant and the victim; the weapon used, the age and number of children who have been housed at the shelter; the destination of the women after leaving the shelter and other pertinent information.

Over the next month, DOVE plans to refine and further analyze this information and prepare an annual report and presentation. Since very little data is available on the issue of domestic violence, it is felt that this material will be a tremendous resource for agencies dealing with domestic abuse as well as creating a better understanding of this growing problem.

Groups which may be interested in arranging a speaking engagement should contact DOVE's business office, 471-5087.

Burke, Kelly Named To City Posts

around City Hall for the past two decades, although his job as head of the Election Division has kept him hidden in the basement most of the time.

A graduate of Quincy High School in 1941, he is a licensed real estate broker and worked for Boston Gear Works for 18 years before joining the City Clerk's office.

He and his wife, the former Constance Roberts, have one daughter, Marilyn. He is a member of the Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus, and the Quincy City Club.

"Tommy Burke has many of the same qualities of George Riley," said Mayor Tobin. "He has excellent rapport with the City Council and the department heads. He knows how to handle problems."

Tobin said Riley is leaving the post to devote more time to his insurance business.

Kelly, in addition to serving in the Army, has worked as department manager, purchasing officer, buyer and communications consultant for several New England firms.

A 27-year resident of Quincy, he attended Bridgewater State College and Central Missouri State College and the Army Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

He is married to the former Stella Sharek of Manchester, N.H., and they have one daughter, Mrs. Denise M. Moss of Cape Elizabeth, Me.

Kelly is a member of the Wollaston Legion Post, past commander of the now defunct Firemen's VFW Post in Boston, and past president of the Chapter 4 Reserve Officers Association.

No Rebate For Granite Squirrel

Two renovations to downtown storefronts mentioned in a Sept. 20 article in The Quincy Sun will not be rebated with Community Development Block Grant funds, according to James Lydon, city planning director.

The projects mentioned were a granite squirrel in front of 30 Chestnut St. and the painting of Claus Gelotte.

"The Department of Planning and Community Development has not authorized a rebate nor does it intend to do so," Lydon said this week.

Police Gird For Pope's Visit

MBTA will shut down Tuesday morning," he said. "The Pope's schedule in Boston is already three hours late and if there is a delay in Ireland it may be later."

"We'll be there until the end," Finn said he has asked the MBTA to supply police officers inside the station where the expected overcrowding presents a hazard to life and limb.

The MDC has assigned men to patrol Wollaston Boulevard, particularly at the intersection of East Squantum St., and others will be stationed at the Neponset Bridge.

The Boston Harbor Marina has parking spaces for 6,000 cars, said Finn, and it is expected there will be buses to shuttle people to the North Quincy MBTA station or direct to Boston.

Squantum First Church Marks 65th Anniversary

The First Church of Squantum celebrated its 65th anniversary recently with a special service of thanksgiving and a concert on the church's newly acquired organ.

The church honored one of its members of long standing by naming the organ "The James Ellsworth Saraner Organ."

Sumner, known to most as "Bud", was honored for his years of leadership in the church's music programs and his efforts in procuring the Allen Digital Computer Organ. He was presented with a certificate of appreciation.

Donald Frazer, chairman of the organ fund-raising committee, made the surprise announcement that the church council had voted to name the organ for Sumner.

"In essence, we honored him as a true minister of music," said Frazer. "With his musical work over many years, Bud has shown great talent and has always been willing to share his gifts with the congregation to the greater glory of God. It is for that that we honor him."

The Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin said, "The really exciting thing about this organ to me is the fact that the cost of the instrument $18,000 - was raised by the members and friends of our congregation in just eight months. That is Christian faith and prayer at work."

Saturday night's concert was performed by Lambert W. Brandes, organist, and Lois O.

Brandes, soprano. Refreshments were the responsibility of Genevieve Todd, chairman, assisted by Renee Johnson, Adelaide Nelson and Joan Hansen. Pourers were Doris Longmire, Adelaide Nelson and Joan Hansen. The anniversary cake was made and donated by Genevieve Todd and all flowers for the occasion were made by Vera Malmgren. Ushers were Ruth Danforth, Grace Holmes, David Mildram and Thomas Williamson. The Greeters were Donald and Barbara Frazer and James and Janet Sumner.

Sunday morning's service of thanksgiving included a recounting of the church's history by Dr. Langevin. The choir sang "Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee," by Bach. The congregation joined in a Litany of Re-dedication of the church at the Lord's Supper. That Litany and all of the hymns, including one that had been written by Mrs. L. B. Titus especially for the First Church of Squantum, were the same as the ones used on the occasion of the original dedication on September 20, 1914.

The Lord's Supper was prepared and served by Ellen Ogilvie, David Mildram, Kenneth Ray, Sandra Stohlberg, Donald Frazer, Grace Holmes and Thomas Williamson. Greeters were Sue Sullivan and her daughter Kathy. The Coffee Hour was hosted by Hazel Mayne, Barbara Frazer, Grace Holmes, Tommy Adams and Holly Bumpus.

The event which will be followed by a reception and cook-out. Each person attending is responsible for bringing his or her own food and beverages.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor of The Way Up, will conduct the baptism.

To Unify Campus

ENC Asks City Abandon Part Of Wendell St.

Eastern Nazarene College is asking the city to abandon a couple of hundred feet of Wendell Ave. near Sachem St. to help unify its campus and reduce security and traffic problems.

The abandonment was requested in a letter to City Council President John J. Quinn at a recent Council meeting and the request was forwarded to the Planning Board for consideration.

Richard Pritchard, spokesman for ENC, said there are no specific plans for use of the 200 to 300 foot section of street on which the college owns land on both sides.

"The street cuts through the middle of the campus," he said. "We would like to bring the campus together and also have options for future development of the college."

"There is a lot of traffic on the street and this has created security problems with outsiders able to drive through the campus at will."

Pritchard said fire lanes could be maintained to permit access by emergency vehicles.

City Councillor Stephen J. McGrath said most of the residents of the area do not oppose the abandonment but serious concerns have been expressed about parking problems.

Some of the streets nearby have been designated tow zones.

"I would like to see what they plan to do with the cars that now park on Wendell St.," said McGrath.

Pritchard said there is enough campus parking available now, adding, "It's just a matter of channeling the traffic to the right places."

"If we had the street perhaps we could force the cars to use the lots," he said.

Access Roads Ready In Spring

Vane St. Parking Plan Design Work Underway This Winter

A task force of the North Quincy Local Development Corp. has begun a feasibility study of alternative uses of the Vane St. parking area, the Phase II portion of the area's redevelopment plan.

President Andrew T. Walsh discussed the future of the plan and current streetscape improvements of Billings Rd. at a meeting of the corporation recently in Sacred Heart School hall.

It was disclosed that design work on the Vane St. parking area will be done during the winter by Sasaki Associates and the access roads will be implemented in the spring of 1980.

Walsh announced that the North Quincy LDC has been funded for $25,000 by the city of Quincy through the Department of Planning and Community Development. The money will benefit businesses moving into the area.

Treasurer Joseph Doran reported that the LDC realized a profit from the Craftfair that was held on Saturdays during August and September.

Doran also read a letter to Rev. Cornelius Heery of Sacred Heart Church commending the active participation of Sacred Heart School children in the Constitution Bicentennial celebration.

Jane Ford of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center distributed booklets listing all North Quincy business establishments. The booklets also will be sent to homes in the North Quincy area.

Brendan Gallagher, clerk of the corporation, reported on the float that the LDC plans to enter in the Christmas parade Nov. 25 and asked for volunteers to assist in its construction.

For the first time in its history, the Quincy Christmas parade will be extended to North Quincy.

Jack Silverstein announced that there will be a sidewalk sale in North Quincy on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 19 and 20, to coincide with completion of streetscape improvements.

John Horrigan announced that the annual election will take place Wednesday, Oct. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Sacred Heart School. Nominations were taken from the floor.

QCA, Wollaston Park Assn. Sponsoring Candidates' Night

A Candidates' Night, sponsored by the Quincy Citizens Association and the Wollaston Park Association will be held Oct. 18 at 7:45 p.m. at the Woodward School, Hancock St.

The 22 candidates whose names will appear on the Nov. 6th Quincy ballot have been invited to speak. Time has been allocated for questioning of the candidates after each group speaks.

The program will open with the two mayoralty candidates, followed by the 10 candidates for ward councillor; the five candidates for councillor-at-large, and the five candidates for school committee.

In its letter of invitation to the candidates, the Quincy Citizens Association said:

"We believe the voters of Quincy are particularly concerned about city expenditures, the rising tax rate, and the effects of 100% revaluation and classification. Residents are also interested in Quincy's future regarding proper development, while preserving the quality of life and small-city amenities people moved here to enjoy. We hope you will address these concerns in your remarks."

The Quincy Citizens Association, Inc., whose motto is: The Voice of the People has sponsored similar candidates nights for the past seven years, to acquaint the voters with the candidates and to give them the opportunity to question the people running for public office.

It's Only Temporary

Billings Rd. Inconvenience Will Be Worth It, Says Condon

The temporary inconvenience caused by improvements to Billings Rd. in North Quincy will result in "a much more attractive, pleasant place to shop," said Joanne Condon, Ward 6 city councillor, at a recent coffee hour.

"The condition of the street and sidewalks has caused many residents to question what is happening," said Mrs. Condon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dietrich, 28 Athorpe St., North Quincy. "The inconvenience to merchants and residents is only temporary and the end result will be gratifying," she said.

The "streetscape" renovations are the first phase of improvements to the North Quincy Business District, she said. Phase Two calls for redesign and expanding of the Vane St parking facilities.

"I have been working with the business community for a long time to try to improve the area," said Mrs. Condon. "We formed the North Quincy Development Corporation to seek federal funds to aid in the much-needed improvements in the area."

Residents and business community must continue to work together to benefit the neighborhood, she added.

TO ALL HOMEOWNERS:
SAVE MONEY WHILE SAVING ENERGY
AT THE SAME TIME.

Today when mortgage rates are so high, many home-owners are looking to improve what they already own. They are also looking for ways to combat sky-rocketing fuel prices at the same time.

If you are looking to insulate or weather-strip your home, or if you want to install energy saving devices such as storm windows and doors, or window quilts, a heatolator for your fireplace, solar panels, water saving devices for your faucets, you qualify for some real savings from us and the Federal Government.

We'd like to help you make these energy saving conversions.

Our Energy Saving Home Improvement Loans are available at 10% per annum which, as you know, is lower than most mortgage rates today. And remember at Income Tax time, an IRS approved energy loan allows 15% Federal Tax Credit up to $300.

The time to act is now before materials and rates become higher than what they'll be in the Fall.

GD And The Squeaking Wheel

The squeaking wheel, they say, gets the oil. And, maybe the noisy protester gets the contract: In this case, General Dynamics and its recently awarded $23.7 million contract to repair a Navy cable ship.

General Dynamics a few weeks ago lost out with a $97 million bid to build a Navy cable ship. The Navy handed the plum to National Steel of San Diego even though Quincy's figure was $10 million lower.

Howls immediately went up here from Congressman Brian Donnelly, General Dynamics, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Local 5 Shipbuilders union, Mayor Arthur Tobin and other officials.

You can't help wondering if the $23.7 million repair contract might have been shuffled off elsewhere by the Navy if there hadn't been so much local hollering over the big one the Navy steered to San Diego.

The Chamber of Commerce still has its lets-all-write-to-Jimmy Carter campaign going urging the President to intervene to help the Quincy yard get more Navy work.

Numerous letters have already been dashed off to the White House by Chamber members. How much help they'll be is hard to estimate. But, one thing is certain: they're not going to hurt the cause.

At least Washington now knows -- after apparently forgetting -- that Quincy still has a good, big shipyard with a talented workforce.

And, that there are a helluva lot of people closely watching who's getting what Navy contracts at what prices.

So, keep the letters moving.

MAYOR Arthur Tobin and Senator Paul Harold seem to be burying the political hatchet -- a little anyway. At the groundbreaking for the new $11 million National Fire Protection Association headquarters in West Quincy, the pair were seen shaking hands and politely chatting.

BUT definitely don't invite former Mayors Walter Hannon and Joseph LaRaia to the same party unless you like battle royals. To say they don't like one another is the understatement of the year... They had a big row at the Constitution Bicentennial Parade touched off, they say, when LaRaia moved to shake hands.

LA RAIA, in fact, has been getting the cold shoulder among most political figures who are mentioned (by fictitious names) in his book... LaRaia, who really whacked most of them around, page after page now wants to shake hands with them and wonders why they snub him.... "Don't you have a sense of humor," he asked one councillor whom he really gave the business to in his book.... "No," the councillor replied. "I didn't think it was funny." And he walked away.

MAYOR Tobin has received two reserved seat tickets for Pope John Paul's Mass on the Boston Common. The invitation came from the chancellor of the archdiocese of Boston.

"I am very pleased to accept this invitation on behalf of the city of Quincy and the people of the city," said Tobin.

Now, if he can only get through the traffic.

THERE WAS A lot of good ribbing at the dinner for George Riley, leaving his post this week as Mayor Tobin's executive secretary to return to private business.

But, there was one touching moment when George was made the first honorary police captain by Mayor Tobin with Police Chief Francis Finn and former Mayor James McIntyre taking part in the presentation of a plaque and badge.

George's late father was Capt. Edward Riley and McIntyre's father was Capt. William McIntyre. They--and Finn--were close friends and admirers of George's father who was one of the top police detectives in New England and a great guy. Ed Riley spent a lot of his own time chasing leads to solve cases and never looked for anything in return.

SENATOR Paul Harold's nieces and nephews got an unexpected treat on a recent visit to the State House with their uncle. They met Gov. Edward King who presented them with official Edward J. King Louisville Slugger baseball bats.

Timmy, Duffy and Courtney Harold were visiting Massachusetts with their parents, Harold's brother Bill and his wife, Christine of San Diego, Calif. Also making the State House trip were Joey, Patrick and Kerin Harold, children of Paul's brother, Joe, and Ellie Harold of Weymouth.

The Senator who didn't get one of the bats, later offered to buy one from the kids but they all refused.

New $11 Million Headquarters

NFPA Groundbreaking 'Sign

By TOM HENSHAW

It was the third of five groundbreakings for Gov. Edward J. King that day and he thought that was "significant".

"It shows that people here have confidence if they are supplied with certain things," he said.

"The basic thing we are obligated to provide is an economic climate which will encourage new business and encourage existing business to stay and expand."

Gov. King, who campaigned on a promise to improve the business climate in Massachusetts, presided over the groundbreaking for the National Fire Protection Association's new $11 million headquarters in West Quincy.

"I am very grateful for this expression of confidence," he said.

"We hope that this construction goes right ahead, not marred by any shortages of material and certainly not by any disagreement between the working force we need and the capital investment that made it all possible."

NFPA President Charles S. Morgan promised that "we will be the best of neighbors, sensitive to the best interest of those with whom we will share this part of Quincy and cooperative as best we know how."

He said Quincy was chosen over many other possible sites because "Quincy is a city that reflects quality, a consideration important to our staff and a reflection of the kind of membership we enjoy."

The newly constructed private way leading up to the NFPA site on Pine Hill from Willard St. was named Batterymarch Park.

"For more than 40 years," said Morgan, "during the period of the association's greatest growth, the place name Batterymarch became identified with the NFPA all over the world."

"People who knew of our existence knew that we lived at 60 Batterymarch, Boston."

"The decision has been made to give this location the historic name that is deep-rooted in NFPA's history which will add distinction to this glorious Quincy."

Metal Unsatisfactory, Says Trainor

City Hall Annex Not Finished — Yet

Although dedicated and fully in use, the new city hall annex lacks a few finishing touches before it will be considered officially completed.

Architect T. Owen Trainor says he is withholding approval on about $10,000 in exterior metalwork he considers unsatisfactory.

"The finished metal on the exterior was not installed properly in compliance with our specifications," said Trainor. Trainor's two firms, T. Owen Trainor Associates and Construction Planners, Inc., designed, engineered and oversaw the construction of the annex.

The problem, he says, is one of "oil-canning" -- trade talk for slight dents and ripples in the exterior metal. The average person probably wouldn't notice the defects unless looking for them, Trainor added.

The subcontractor responsible for installing the metal strips is PPG (Pittsburg Plate Glass), Trainor said.

The main contractor, Moscone, Inc. of Boston, has contracted PPG to rectify the problems, he said, but "I'm not satisfied with their (PPG's) progress. They're just dragging their feet on it."

Thanks Sun For Constitution Bicentennial Coverage

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of the Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial Committee of Quincy may I extend our deepest appreciation for the outstanding coverage which we received from your newspaper.

The Bicentennial Commemorative edition was superb and professionally oriented toward a true appreciation of the historic background of the city of Quincy and the period of the drafting of the Constitution by John Adams,

James Bowdoin, and Samuel Adams. The follow-up edition of The Sun was a true representation of the memorable events of the weekend of September 6th through 9th. You should be highly commended for the continued publicity which your newspaper carried about the Massachusetts Constitution while it was in Quincy. The success of the weekend was not only noted in numbers, with seventy-five hundred people viewing the Constitution, but also in the happy spirit of conviviality that prevailed in our city and the noted cultural uplift, which we all hope will continue.

Thank you again for your sincere interest in the finer things in Quincy, particularly our historical attributes.

A 'Thank You' For Coverage Of New York Team Visit

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Thanks for the good coverage The Sun gave the Action Babe Ruth team from New York when they were in town. This is the fourth year a team has been coming and thanks to people's good hearts they have a wonderful experience.

The kids don't get away from home very much and there is more benefit than appears on the surface from the experience for the boys as well as the people who take them into their homes and hearts. It is a rich human experience for all concerned and there'll be quite a bit of exposure for the Quincy Sun in New York, pictures and all.

and any businessman trying to cope with the rising cost of doing business can appreciate the economic problems of producing a newspaper.

The Sun has been blessed with loyal readers down through the years, mainly residents who like having a community oriented newspaper -- a newspaper devoted to their community interests.

The Sun was established in September, 1968 as "Quincy's Own Weekly Newspaper" -- a publication concentrating on Quincy news and Quincy people.

We have expanded our news coverage these past 11 years and will continue to do so in the future. We want to bring to our readers the best weekly newspaper we possibly can.

The National Newspaper Foundation in Washington, D.C. recently recognized The Sun's accomplishments as a community newspaper by presenting The Sun with the National Blue Ribbon Newspaper Award for its "high standards of service to its community."

The Sun's weekly circulation is now just a little under 11,000.

A newspaper has a responsibility to its community and to its readers to report the goings on fairly and accurately.

We have tried to do that -- giving those on both sides of an issue the opportunity in The Sun's news columns to present their side of that issue.

Editorially, we have taken strong stands on many issues. We have tried to "tell it like it is."

We will continue to offer both sides the opportunity to air their side on any issue affecting Quincy. And we will continue to speak out editorially.

As we begin our 12th year we want to again sincerely thank you -- our readers and advertisers -- for your continued support and encouragement these past 11 years. And a special thank-you goes to our ever growing army of faithful newscarrriers who bring The Quincy Sun to Quincy homes.

You, all of you, as we have said before, are as much a part of The Quincy Sun as we, the staff.

Without you, we never would have reached our 11th birthday. With your continued help -- and encouragement -- we look ahead to our 12th year.

Thank you, sincerely,

Della Chiesa Assails QTA As Political Group

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa charged that the Quincy Taxpayers Association had become a "political organization" by endorsing candidates for the Plan E City Council.

"In the current issue of 'Tips on Taxes,' the monthly publication of the association, the organization has in substance done nothing less than endorse a slate of candidates," he said.

"Seven candidates are mentioned in a favorable light and no mention is made of the other 14 candidates seeking election to the City Council."

Della Chiesa was not one of those mentioned.

YACHT YARD GOES PRIVATE

Edward D. Whiting, president and general manager of the Quincy Adams Yacht yard, announced that the company will return to building pleasure craft after 15 years of primarily government work.

Whiting said the yard had contracts to build a 68-foot diesel twin-screw power boat and an 85-foot auxiliary schooner and was negotiating to build two more luxury yachts.

Value of the four contracts would be $750,000.

RAIDERS TIED

Jack Crowley passed to Al Adams for the touchdown but the North Quincy High School football team had to settle for a 7-7 tie when Dedham came up with a last period score at Stone Field, Dedham.

CIVIL DEFENSE DEFICIENT

Major Franklin G. Woodward, Air Force coordinator for Massachusetts, told a Rotary luncheon that Quincy lacks air raid wardens and does not have enough volunteers for its Ground Observer Corps.

"If we are to preserve the American way of life, each one of us must find some place in the civil defense setup of our community," he said.

STUDY CITES CITY WORKERS

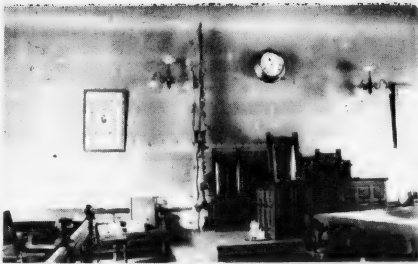

A study by the U.S. Census Bureau showed that Quincy had more municipal employees than most other cities in the over 10,000 population class.

The census figures showed that Quincy had 1,848 city workers, or 21.3 for every 1,000 population, compared to the average of 12.9 for a thousand other American big cities.

City's High School Bands To Perform For Pope

The combined marching bands of the city's three high schools have been invited to perform in the ceremonies welcoming Pope John Paul II to Boston. Mayor Arthur Tobin announced Tuesday.

The bands of North Quincy, Quincy and Quincy Vocational Technical High Schools will perform as a unit Monday near St. Monica's Church, off Old Colony Ave. in South Boston, as the Pope's motorcade passes through the area, Tobin said.

The services of the bands were offered to Archbishop Humberto Medeiros' secretary, Rev. William Helmick, by the mayor's office, Tobin said.

Tobin credited School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon for coordinating the three bands, and Rev.

William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church; Bishop Thomas V. Daily, chancellor of the archdiocese and Congressman Brian Donnelly for interceding with the archbishop's office on behalf of the Quincy bands.

The official invitation came from Monsignor Robert McNeil, archdiocesan director of Catholic Youth Organizations.

"This is a very positive thing," Tobin said of the invitation. "We just had a very great gala celebration for the bicentennial of the state constitution and now the high schools' bands have been selected to play for the Pope. This really puts Quincy on the map."

"I think this is a very good thing for the young people of the community."

PRESIDENTS AND RAIDERS gathered under the same roof recently to practice their serenade for Pope John Paul II. The bands of Quincy and North Quincy High School will perform as a single unit in the parade welcoming the Pope to Boston next Monday. The two bands met at the National Guard Armory on Hancock St. to rehearse. Conducting is Michael Cahill of Quincy High School.

For Everyone's Safety

Students, Motorists Must Be Alert And Cooperate

By ANTHONY R. POLLARA
Quincy School Safety Officer

Approximately 13,000 Quincy youngsters are moving through the city's streets going to and from school.

Alertness at all times is required of motorists if we are to complete the school year without accidents. Many of the exuberant kids cross streets in droves, others sometimes race out unexpectedly. It is the adult driver who must be alert.

The citizens of Quincy - the school department, police, parents, youngsters and motorists - must all cooperate to avoid accidents.

In an effort to protect the students, from pre-kindergarten pupils to college men and women a major safety force will be on hand.

The main streets and intersections will be monitored by 45 women traffic supervisors and regular police officers. They will be assisted by nearly 1,000 pupils serving on safety patrols.

Every citizen can help to make the miles traveled between home and school a pleasure and not a hazardous trip by encouraging children to follow these rules:

- Always walk on the sidewalk.
- Cross only at corners, looking both ways before crossing.
- Use crosswalk whenever possible.
- Don't cross from behind parked cars.
- When crossing at a traffic light, wait for the light to change and for traffic to stop before crossing.
- Obey your school traffic supervisor and patrol.

- Watch for turning cars.
- Never dart out into the street.

Additional safety rules for school bus riders are:

- Wait for the bus in an orderly line.
- When boarding or leaving the bus, do not run.
- Place books or bundles where they cannot slide or fall.
- Keep arms and legs out of aisles.
- Your head, arms and bundles are safest inside the bus.
- Don't talk to the bus driver except in an emergency.
- Don't open windows without permission.

Remember that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Know When To Stop For A School Bus

School buses are rolling again and motorists are cautioned to be extra vigilant whenever they are in sight.

Motorists - and truck drivers - are reminded that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has specific laws to protect the buses and the youngsters they are transporting.

Drivers must re-acquaint themselves with the school bus law which is easy to understand because it is so precise as to the alertness demanded of drivers.

The Massachusetts law provides:

"When approaching a vehicle which displays a sign bearing the words 'SCHOOL BUS' and is equipped with front and rear alternating flashing signal lamps which are flashing, as provided in section 7B, and which has been stopped to allow passengers to alight from or board same, a person operating a motor vehicle shall, except when approaching from the opposite direction on a divided highway, bring his vehicle to a full stop before reaching said school bus and shall not thereafter proceed until such school bus resumes motion or until such person is signaled by the driver of the school bus to proceed or the said signal lamps are no longer flashing."

Presidents Seeks 3rd Against Revere

Quincy's football team goes after its third win in a row Saturday when it hosts non-league rival Revere at 2 p.m. at Veterans Stadium.

Coach Tim Fitzgerald hopes the Presidents will play four periods of solid football instead of resting on its laurels after an impressive first half as they did last Sunday against Weymouth North.

Quincy rolled over Weymouth North, 32-6, for its second Suburban League win but Fitzgerald was disappointed in the second half performance.

Revere, a Greater Boston League team, is 1-1, walloping Arlington, 27-8, last week after losing to Haverhill, 20-6.

"We had a fine first half at Weymouth but had a letdown after the half," Fitzgerald said. "We can't afford such letdowns in a close game. I was very disappointed with our second half showing."

The offense was once again sparked by Co-Capt. Tommy Brennan, who rushed for 120 yards and scored three touchdowns (five for the season). In his opener he had gained 147 yards with two TDs.

Dave Austin had a good day at quarterback, completing eight of 15 passes for 122 yards and a touchdown and also ran well. Ed Iodice again ran well as did Dan Goldrick, who also blocked extremely well.

Big Fran Duggan, Paul Bandera and Jeff Heath were singled out for their work in the offensive line, with Heath playing an outstanding game at center.

The defense played outstanding ball in the first half but let up a bit in the second half and Asst. Coach Bill Mayer admitted he was disappointed that Weymouth scored in the last period. South scored on a quarterback keeper.

Mayer hailed the defensive performances of Lou Matthews, John Kavanaugh, Bill Flynn, Walter Kilgallon, Jim McNeil, Mike Petrillo, Paul Martin, Chris Chevalier, Charlie McCall, Brennan and Todd Veale. Matthews, Veale and Paul Flynn had pass interceptions.

Brennan put the Presidents on the scoreboard first when he scored from the five and Ron Pettinelli kicked the point.

In the second quarter Brennan scored again from the 10 and Bandera scored on a 10-yard pass from Austin. Pettinelli kicked the point after Bandera's TD.

In the third period Brennan made it 26-0 when he completed the hat trick with a six-yard run.

After Weymouth averted a shutout, Iodice added the final touchdown with a minute and a half left in the game from 10 yards out.

Fitzgerald was once again disappointed at the number of penalties called on his team. "We hurt ourselves a lot for the second game in a row with our penalties and this could prove costly in close games," he said.

The Presidents, who rushed for 339 yards in their opener, added 256 yards on the ground last week to go with their 122 yards through the air.

Raiders Must Tune Offense For Newton N.

By TOM SULLIVAN

North Quincy's defense played its heart out last Sunday but Coach Dave Burke must do something about his offense as the Raiders prepare to meet Newton North Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium following a 16-0 loss to Brockton.

Newton comes to Quincy following a 13-6 win over Framingham South and a 24-21 loss to Medford.

Brockton is picked by just about everyone to win the Suburban League crown this fall but North's inexperienced defense did an outstanding job containing the Boxers' vaunted offense and the score could have just as well been 2-0 instead of 16-0.

Both defenses were outstanding as evidenced by the fact the rival punters, North's Brian O'Leary and Brockton's John Asack were forced to punt seven times each.

"It was just a great job by the defense, but we have to start moving the ball," said Burke, whose team fell to 0-2. "We have a problem at quarterback and we have to work hard there. We had four passes intercepted today."

Each of the Raiders' three quarterbacks had at least one pass intercepted. Jack Brown having two grabbed and Kevin Durkin and Dave Cavanaugh one each.

North held Brockton's ground attack to a net of 143 yards, 34 of them coming on the Boxers' last play for a touchdown. Although Chuck Colombo, one of the Suburban League's premier passers, passed for 92 yards by completing 10 of 22, 21 of these yards came on a questionable pass interference call which set up Brockton's first touchdown with seven seconds left in the first half. North's secondary played well with several boys doing well on man-to-man coverage. Brockton had 13 first downs.

North, which gained only 50 yards in the opening loss at Milton, could pick up only 40 net yards rushing and another 46 yards passing as the three quarterbacks hit on only three of 17 passes. North had six first downs.

Defensive coaches Jack Raymer and Ken McPhee hailed the play of the entire defense but had good words in particular for Capt. Leo Graham, a standout all afternoon.

Also singled out were Paul O'Sullivan, Jim McGuinness, Chris Pettrillo, Glen Segalla, Joe Cremin, Steve Mastrorilli and Tony Camillo.

Burke had good words for Bill Dailey, who had most of what little ground yardage North picked up, and Pat Carroll for his blocking.

The offensive line continued to have trouble opening holes for the backs but Asst. Coach George Liset explained, "This is a very inexperienced line with four juniors who had little or no varsity action and the boys were outweighed by at least 30 pounds a man. We are stopping ourselves, the other teams aren't stopping us. We just have to keep working hard and as the boys gain experience, we should improve." Ed Miller, Jim Dodd and Dave Penzo were praised for their efforts.

Midway in the first period Asack kicked to the North seven and three plays later Durkin was tackled in the end zone for a safety.

It appeared that would be the score at the half but with time running out pass interference was called on North at its three and on the first play Colombo passed to John Hancock with just seven seconds left for the touchdown. Asack kicked the point. It looked as if offensive interference should have been called on Brockton.

North's determined defense continued to bottle up Brockton's attack but late in the game a North pass was intercepted on North's 32. After picking up a first down, Brockton was penalized back to the 34 and on the first play Jay Magee raced around left end and went the distance for the final touchdown. Asack again kicked the point.

North Girl Swimmers Defeat Blue Hills

The North Quincy girls' swim team, showing steady improvement under Coach Bill Walker, easily defeated Blue Hills Regional, 98-51, for its first win last week.

Kit Harrow and Jacqui Pike were double winners and swam on winning relay teams and Marjorie Botolotto placed second in three events for the Raiderettes, who had lost their opener to Brockton's powerhouse, despite setting three school records.

Harrow won the 100-meter freestyle and 50-meter freestyle and Pike won the individual medley and 100-meter butterfly. Pike also swam on the winning 200-meter medley team and Harrow joined the winning 400-meter freestyle relay team.

Other North Quincy winners were Julie Evanson, 200-meter freestyle; Carolyn O'Toole, one-meter dive; Susan Quintiliani, 500-meter freestyle; Diana Dawson, 100-meter backstroke, and Mary Tenney, 100-meter breaststroke.

Although Brockton, always one of the best in the state in swimming, breezed by North, as expected, 126-46, the three records helped ease the pain of the loss.

Harrow set a record in the 50-meter freestyle (28:05), breaking a mark which had stood two years; the 200-meter relay team of Dawson, Tenney, Pike and Harrow set a new school record of 2:15.978, shaving three seconds off the old mark, and Dawson shattered a three-year old record in winning the 100-meter backstroke.

Head Coaches Named At ENC

The athletic department of Eastern Nazarene College has announced the head coaches in the various varsity sports for the upcoming school year.

The Crusaders participate in nine intercollegiate sports.

Robert Taft has been named the new cross country coach, replacing Jerold McCloy. Taft joins the new physical ed department as a faculty member. ENC opens on Saturday at 2 o'clock, hosting Nyack College.

Stafford Frederick is beginning his third year as soccer coach. Last season he led the Crusaders to a 12-4-1 record, losing to Barrington, 1-0, in the NCCAA Northeast Regional championship. ENC will be home to Nyack Saturday at 2.

Athletic Director Nancy Detwiler begins her eighth year as coach of the women's volleyball team with an impressive career coaching record. She has lost only 20 matches in her seven years at ENC. Last season's team went 21-8, finishing second in the Mass. Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Division II state championship. The ENC women open Saturday at home against Nyack at 2.

Ron Bradley, a former small college All-American at ENC, will be coaching basketball at his alma mater for the fourth year. ENC had a fine 22-10 record a year ago, winning NCCAA District and Regional championships. The Crusaders will open on Nov. 23 when they take part in the Codfish Bowl Tournament at Boston State College.

Don Constantine will also be coaching the women's basketball team for the fourth year and he will bring an impressive 40-13 record into the new season which opens Nov. 30 at Boston College. Two years ago the Crusaderettes won the MAIW state title.

Bradley also will coach the baseball team next spring. The season will open just after Easter.

Dave Daniels will be in his second year as men's tennis coach and Gary Calhoun will be making his debut as women's coach.

ENC began a women's softball club last year. A coach for this year's team has yet to be named.

Experience Key For North

The North Quincy soccer team had a 3-10-3 record a year ago and the Raiders' chances this fall depend upon how quickly the new players mature, according to Coach Paul Bregoli.

Bregoli has only two returning veterans because four players expected back and who would have started failed to report for a variety of reasons.

And to make his job even harder, the young squad (17 sophomores are included) has been hit hard by illness and injuries in early season games.

North dropped its non-league opener, 4-1, to Norwell, then lost to Waltham, one of the top Suburban League teams, 5-0, and to Newton North, probably the No. 1 league team, 9-0, before tying Quincy, 3-3. Last Friday the Raiders lost to Madison Park, 8-3, in a non-league.

North will play at Brockton Friday and will host Weymouth North next Wednesday at the home field behind Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"The only returning veterans are Joe Flynn, senior halfback and tri-captain, and senior Dave Lapsley, another tri-captain," Bregoli said. "Flynn is one of the top players in the league and Lapsley is tremendously improved with a hard left-footed shot."

The other tri-captain is Bill Bradley, only a sophomore. "It isn't often you see a soph elected tri-captain, but this kid has fine ability and leadership qualities already," Bregoli added.

North is inexperienced at forward. Senior Steve Sweet, out for the first time, was being counted on for scoring punch but he broke his ankle in three places in a scrimmage against Silver Lake and is sidelined for the season.

Among the most promising forwards are junior Gary Donaghey, junior Bill Bourikas, junior Steve Dodd, senior Steve Morrissey, senior Ed Ahearn and sophomore Rich Palma.

For fullbacks Bregoli has senior Rich Farmer, junior Chris Dunn, who will also play halfback, junior Paul Gill, junior Steve Kavanagh, the team's most improved player, and sophomore Charlie Spiropoulos.

Junior Paul Mallory is the starting goalie and his coach says, "as he goes, so do we." Sophomore Kevin Wood is a promising goalkeeper who started against Newton North.

Senior Bobby Biagini one of the most outstanding athletes at North, is playing soccer for the first time and plays either fullback or forward.

Andrews.

Rounding out the squad are Scott Brennan, Lester Gerry, Mark Tenney, Kevin Warren, Paul Donovan, Ken Nutley, Mike Kreebie, Aril Slahabuddin, Jay Williams, Dennis White and Joe Casanova.

North controlled play despite the loss to Norwell. Bradley scored on his first varsity shot with Ahearn assisting. Kavanagh was outstanding at fullback.

Three starters were out of the lineup against Waltham and Kavanagh, Braxley and Gill played well in defeat.

Five starters were out due to illness or injuries against Newton. Palma, Lapsley and Dunn played well.

The Raiders were tied by Quincy late in the game. Flynn scored unassisted, Palma also scored unassisted and Donaghey put North ahead, 3-2, with Bourikas assisting.

Flynn scored all three goals last Friday in the loss to Madison Park, a strong Boston City League team. Biagini was a pleasant surprise, playing an excellent game in his second appearance at forward.

Bregoli's assistant coach this year is Jim McGinley, a former Raider standout was all-England at Massasoit Community College and the MVP in the junior college tournament.

Quincy Off To Shaky Start

Quincy soccer coach Jim McGuire hopes to improve on last year's 1-12-3 record but the Presidents are off to a rough start with only a 3-3 tie with North Quincy in their first four games.

Quincy displayed a fine defense in its first two Suburban League games, losing to Weymouth North, 1-0, and to Brookline, 2-0. Following the tie with North Quincy, the Presidents lost to Newton North, 5-0, last Friday.

Quincy will play at Weymouth South Friday and will host Cambridge Rindge and Latin next Wednesday. Home games are played at the field behind Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"We face very strong competition in the Suburban League, but we hope to improve on last year's record," said McGuire. "We have a strong halfback line and greatly improved fullbacks. We are inexperienced in goal but sophomore Peter Papile and junior Paul McCaffrey have played well."

Senior Co-Capt. Bob Palermo, sophomore newcomer David Church and junior Geoff McGhee are outstanding halfbacks, and junior Bill Flanagan, junior Lou Reardon and senior Mark Giglio are excellent fullbacks.

Other seniors are Co-Capt. Tom Roche, a forward, halfback Dave Elsmore and forward Peter Tautvaisas and returning juniors are forwards Paul Arthur, Joe Norton, Dave Solimini and Claudio Sala, and back Mark Hubbard.

Newcomers expected to help the Presidents are senior forward Mike Nigro, junior forwards Dave Van Mothman and Gabriel Febo, sophomore halfback Dave Goulart, sophomore forwards Bob Berrelli and James Hapennie and sophomore back Jeff Morrison.

Palermo gave Quincy its tie with its cross-town rivals with his second goal of the game in the fourth period. Nigro had the Presidents' other goal.

Newton North, the class of the Suburban League, bombarded goalies Papile and McCaffrey with 36 shots as each played a half. McGhee and Palermo at halfback and Norton at forward played well in defeat.

North Girls Blank Quincy, 3-0

The North Quincy girls' soccer team, looking good in early season games, last week blanked Quincy, 3-0, to improve its record to 1-1-1.

The undermanned Quincy team later lost to Newton North, 7-0, dropping its record to 0-4 and the First Ladies are still without a goal.

North will play at Brockton Friday and next Wednesday will host Weymouth North at O'Rourke Field.

Quincy will be home to Weymouth South Friday at O'Rourke and next Wednesday will be at Cambridge.

The Raiderettes scored three second half goals to top the First Ladies and Lisa Cavanaugh, continuing to shine in goal, turned aside 10 Quincy shots.

Christine Tedeschi scored the first North goal and Denise Wood and Kim Alberti had the others.

Despite the loss to a strong Newton North team, several Quincy girls turned in good performances. Nany MacDonald played well at center halfback, Eileen Morrison was outstanding at forward and Diane Folander at fullback also played a good game.

In their earlier games the Quincy girls had bowed to Weymouth North, 5-0, and turned in one of their better performances in losing to Brookline, 2-0.

Most people believe that orthodontal work, to be effective, has to be done at a young age. It is certainly true that there are advantages to orthodontic work at a young age. The mouth and teeth are more malleable. Also, people are more used to seeing braces on children than on adults. But, it is never too late to have the work done. Teeth can be properly relocated at any age. New developments in braces make orthodontal work less intrusive. Many of the new braces are made of clear plastic, rather than of metal, so that they are almost invisible on the teeth.

City Is In Deep Financial Trouble

of June 30, General Dynamics owed $2,107,413 and State Street South $808,848.

"They are questioning the assessment of their property," said Tobin. "They are not doing anything illegal. The law says that if a tax bill is under appeal the taxpayer only has to pay a portion."

"If they come up with the $3 million," said Shea, rounding off the total, "then we are down to $3.4 million in our unpaid taxes and our free cash deficit drops, but it's still about $2.8 million."

Tobin said that the cases of 16 other taxpayers whose unpaid bills total $1,700,000 are now in the hands of the city solicitor, who is to begin legal proceedings.

Shea explained that there are three ways to further offset the expected tax levy.

"One," he said, "is an increase in the property valuations in the city. We cannot look forward to any increase in valuation."

(In fact, although Shea did not mention it, the city could be faced with a decrease in valuation under the so-called Tregor decision of the State Supreme Court, which authorizes a reduction to the lowest residential valuation of commercial property on appeal.)

"Second," said Shea, "we can increase receipts."

"But we had a $2.1 million revenue deficit last year, so if you add this to the $5.6 million impact on the tax levy it means we have to raise actual receipts about $7.7 million to hold the tax rate."

"That is impossible."

"Third, we could cut the budget and effect some savings. But because of revaluation classification conformance that is required of us we have to first find $500,000 in the present budget before we can even think of budget reduction."

Tobin noted that historically whenever the tax rate goes up the overlay account (the reserve for abatements) goes up too.

For instance, in fiscal 1977, when the tax rate soared from $159.90 to $194.80 the overlay went up from $2.6 million to more than $3.9 million.

"Every time there is a huge increase in taxes," said the Mayor, "the overlay account goes up accordingly because people just don't have the ability to pay."

"If we raise the tax rate now, with close to 1,000 Quincy families at General Dynamics under the threat of being laid off, who potentially can't pay their taxes, then we'll have to go out and borrow money -- but there's no money coming in and we would simply go further into the hole."

That led to an explanation by Treasurer Foy of tax anticipation notes (known as TANs), which is the money that is borrowed to cover operating expenses, paid back when tax revenues come in.

"We have a tax levy of $55 million," he said. "We get half of it in November. With abatements and exemptions, you figure to collect $24 million in the fall."

"Right now, through Sept. 20, we have borrowed $16 million, or two-thirds of the total, to meet current expenses, including salaries, and we're not even half way through that part of the year."

"It's not a healthy situation. If we keep going the way we're going now in our borrowing, we could get into May and June and have payless paydays. Then we'd have to dip into the next fiscal year and borrow against that. We'd just be pushing the ball down the line."

Foy produced a chart that showed these borrowings on tax anticipation notes each Sept. 20 for the past five years: fiscal 1976, $2.0 million; fiscal 1977, $7.2 million; fiscal 1978, $13.6 million; fiscal 1979, $11.8 million; fiscal 1980, $16.0 million.

Tobin said that if the city employee unions were granted an injunction preventing the setting of the 1980 tax rate, he and the auditor and the treasurer would refuse to sign any more TANs.

"When we sign such a note," he said, "what we are saying is that we are guaranteeing that we have the money to pay back the bond out of tax receipts."

"If the unions get an injunction, on the advice of the city solicitor, there is no way the three of us can guarantee payment without perjuring ourselves."

"If we are prohibited from sending out tax bills to raise money then how can we guarantee the money?"

"If we don't sign any more notes then we will have no money as of the first week in October and, sometime later in the month, no city employee will be getting paid."

Foy said the problem of city's short-term borrowing is compounded by the increasing interest that is being paid.

In fiscal 1975, according to Foy, the total was $50,000; in fiscal 1976, $107,634; in fiscal 1977, $189,341; in fiscal 1978, $328,158; and in fiscal 1979, $466,710.

"The sad part of it is," he said, "this just goes out. There is no return."

Interest rates are soaring, too. Foy produced the following chart that showed the high and low interest rates in percentages by the city on short-term borrowings over the past five years:

Fiscal '76 - 1.97 to 3.79
Fiscal '77 - 1.98 to 3.21
Fiscal '78 - 2.38 to 3.96
Fiscal '79 - 3.59 to 6.23
Fiscal '80 - 4.70 to 5.93

"And it will go higher this year," said Foy. "The prime rate is up to 13.25 per cent and the rule of thumb is that for municipal borrowing the high is about half the prime rate."

"The interest rate is judged by the city's ability to tax. If they get an injunction against us being able to tax then it will have an effect on the rate -- if we are able to borrow at all."

So, the dozen or so engineers, already earning 90 percent of their normal salary, saw another 40 percent lost because of the short week.

Nilsen, who later became chief city engineer, was hurt more than most.

"I got married in 1926. I had a house, I had a son in 1933. I had to refinance my house," he said.

He received, during the time of the three-day week and 10-percent cut, a weekly salary of $40, gross.

Nilsen, who retired in 1970, admits to being no fan of the unions, now representing city engineers and other employees. He offered his own advice to discontented employees: "they've got the best deal in the world."

agreement, saying that the state "tax cap" legislation made it impossible to fund it.

The agreement had called for a $800 increase for all employees, starting in July plus a seven percent increase in January of 1980.

A Sept. 14 letter from Joseph McParland, chief city labor negotiator, told Shea and representatives of other city unions the $800-plus-seven-percent city offer was being withdrawn and the signed contracts voided.

"He's been saying that verbally for several weeks," Shea said. There's no other offer from the city on the table right now."

"The mayor is unable or unwilling to give us an offer," Shea said. The work stoppage is the union's way of saying "We want to straighten this thing out," he said.

"Our membership is furious," said Shea. "They're telling me, 'we have to do something to end this.'"

"We've been meeting with them regularly," said McParland Tuesday. However, he said, there is no offer from the city on the table right now.

If the union decided to ignore the cease and desist order and stage the walkout, the city would seek contempt of court charges against Shea and the union, McParland said.

employees would be on the job to handle emergencies, McParland said "we don't know that for a fact."

"If somebody dies in that hospital tomorrow because there isn't a phlebologist to take blood, or a technician to take care of somebody, I think Mr. Shea ought to accept some of that responsibility," McParland said. "We're not talking about whether or not the streets get swept, we're talking about people living or dying."

Shea said the walkout was not technically a strike.

"It's just a one-day thing, as opposed to us staying out until we win," he said.

"He's taking this very lightly," McParland said. "Mr. Shea can laugh and dance over this all he likes, we're taking this very seriously. As far as we're concerned, this is a strike."

The hospital cancelled all elective surgery and all elective admissions for Wednesday, which will result in a loss of between $50,000 and $100,000, he claimed.

If the one-day walkout doesn't get the negotiations moving, Shea said, the rank-and-file will undoubtedly begin to talk of a strike.

However, he said, he couldn't predict how the membership would vote on a strike ballot.

Rubbing fingers or using furniture polish on an old piece of jewelry or metal is not sufficient to bring the gleam back. Fortunately, most metals and stones can be refurbished with the proper type of polish. However, there are sometimes special problems. Old brass, for example, is often covered with lacquer to keep its luster, and the lacquer may have to be removed before polishing. To remove the lacquer, first do a test patch. Apply a small amount of lacquer thinner and wipe to see if it is the proper strength. Then use a polish designed for working on brass. If the results are not good, bring the piece to a professional. Professional advice can help save time, energy, and expense, as well as the original piece.

When you need professional advice on the purchase of a piece of jewelry be sure to consult with our specialists at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. We're always happy to help you make your selection, and have jewelry in a wide range of prices to fit most budgets. Hours: 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Mon. thru Sat.

Heating Oil Supply Up— But So Is The Price

The supply of home heating oil in the state has increased substantially, but the average price is at a record high, reports the Massachusetts Office of Energy Resources (MOER).

MOER's Sept. 5 survey of 125 oil dealers showed an average price of 84.9 cents per gallon. In-state inventories were 14 percent below last year - slightly better than mid-August, when inventories were down by 29 percent.

Prices in eastern Massachusetts averaged 84.5 cents per gallon, with individual prices ranging from 80.2 to 87.9.

The survey showed some encouraging aspects, said Joseph S. Fitzpatrick, director of the office of energy resources.

"On the supply front, if this trend continues, we are cautiously optimistic that with meaningful conservation, supplies will be adequate this heating season.

However, the price problem persists," he said.

Brownell Seeks Welfare Heat Aid

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) has filed legislation to allow the Department of Welfare to pay unpaid heating bills of families receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

Brownell said he filed the bill to adjust the inequities existing under the present law and to prevent undue hardship to low income families during the cold winter ahead.

The present law, enacted in 1975, does not permit the Department of Welfare to pay overdue utility bills but has been widely interpreted to allow payment for oil heat and exclude gas heat.

"The Welfare Department's interpretation of the existing regulation has been unfairly discriminatory and those needy families having gas heat have had to face court ordered shut-offs by the gas companies," Brownell said.

"Natural gas prices increased at the astonishing rate of 28 percent last month and this increase just cannot always be absorbed by those on a limited income."

New Hearing On Airport Noise

Mayor Tobin has invited officials of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) to a public hearing on airplane noise Thursday, Oct. 18, at 7 p.m. in the Quincy Vocational Technical School gym.

Specifically, the hearing will be on the FAA's Draft Environmental Impact Statement that recommends planes taking off from Logan Airport's Runway 22R fly over South Boston, Quincy and Milton.

Invitations to the hearing were sent to Langhorne M. Bond, administrator; Quentin Taylor, assistant administrator; Robert E. Whittington, regional director; John Mattson, chief of air traffic; and Lawrence Sullivan, regional counsel, all of the FAA.

The Mayor's invitation to Whittington actually was a request that the FAA itself set up the hearing under the regulations of the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) and offering the Vo

Tech gym at the time designated.

Tobin noted that the storm that has been swirling around the airport's takeoff patterns for the past 16 months qualifies for a hearing under the CEQ's criteria of "substantial environmental controversy concerning the proposed action."

"You must certainly be aware of and know that there is substantial environmental controversy concerning the FAA's proposed action regarding departure procedures from Runway 22R in the city of Quincy," said the Mayor.

"This controversy has been widely reported in the news media.

"Moreover, the substantial interest in the FAA's holding a public hearing is reflected and substantiated by the fact that a citizens group comprised of over 2,000 members has asked me to request this public hearing."

The group to which Tobin referred is Citizens Against Airplane Noise (CAAN) and its chairwoman, Bernice Mader, expressed immediate delight over the hearing.

"I hope that citizens will respond by attending the public hearing and giving eyewitness testimony to the FAA regarding their dissatisfaction with the FAA's choice of airplane routes from the Draft Environmental Impact Study," she said.

She urged that the Mayor's office and CAAN join forces in alerting the citizens of Quincy to the importance of the hearing.

Invitations also were extended to Sens. Edward M. Kennedy and Paul E. Tsongas, Cong. Brian J. Donnelly, Sen. Paul D. Harold, Reps. Thomas F. Brownell, Robert A. Cerasoli and Michael W. Morrissey, Massport Director David W. Davis and members of the City Council.

Union Loses Bid To Delay Tax Rate

A request by a city employee's union for an injunction preventing the setting of the city's tax rate was rejected Monday in Norfolk County Superior Court, Dedham.

Judge Herbert Abrams denied the request filed by the Quincy City Employee's Union of Hospital, Library and Public Employees (HPLPE). The judge had no comment on the ruling, nor can the attorneys for either side inquire as to the reasoning behind it, according to Robert Moscov of the court clerk's office.

The suit asked that the city be restrained from setting its tax rate until it appropriates money to fund a pay raise negotiated with the city engineers' union. The city has been ordered by the state Labor Relations Commission to honor that agreement and has appealed that decision.

The appeal was the key to the judge's decision, said John Keefe, president of HPLPE.

"We knew that would happen," Keefe said of the ruling. Because representatives of the city solicitor's office filed an appeal Friday on the Labor Relations Commission ruling, Judge Abrams lacked jurisdiction on the dispute.

"That was a fast move to prevent the injunction," Keefe said of the appeal.

City employees will have to wait until next year for pay raises unless funds for them are approved before the tax rate is set. By law, no money can be appropriated after the rate becomes official.

An injunction against setting the tax rate would have resulted in payless paydays for city employees starting sometime in October, according to Mayor Arthur Tobin.

If they were prohibited from sending out this year's tax bills, the mayor, auditor and treasurer could not guarantee that the city could pay back money borrowed against its bond, Tobin said.

Arguments in the Monday morning hearing were "very short, very brief," said Robert Fleming, city solicitor.

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

A hearing to show cause why the license of P.D.M., a scrap yard at Intervale St., South Quincy, should not be revoked was continued for one week by the Quincy License Board at Tuesday's meeting.

Revocation was proposed for failure to comply within 60 days to the board's decision of June 21, with regard to having all work done within the building, and removal of all outdoor equipment.

Building Inspector Allan MacDonald told the board at last week's meeting that some of the equipment has been sold while other equipment has been moved to another lot on the property, which is unlicensed. If the lot was assigned a street number it would be 189 or 187 Intervale St.

The board addressed itself to the matter of the unlicensed lot at Tuesday's meeting.

Mrs. Mary Gregoire, of

P.D.M., told the board that she and her husband bought the entire parcel of land in 1972, and have used it as a scrap yard since then, as did the previous owner.

City Solicitor Robert Fleming was asked if there would be legal conforming use of the lot in question since it has been used as a junk yard continually since 1938.

He said that if both parcels of land were bought by the Gregoires at the same time and are being operated as a scrap metal yard, non conforming use would apply.

He said that even though the license is only issued for 175 Intervale, a lot of times the license is not the determining factor.

The matter was continued until next week when the full board will be in session. The Building Inspector was not at Tuesday's meeting.

The Pope's Mass A Night To Remember

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The rain, when it finally came, came down wet, really wet, heavy and chilling.

It soaked the clothing all the way through to the skin—but it couldn't dampen the spirit. The 400,000 or more jammed into Boston Common smiled good naturedly as each looked like he or she was standing in a shower bath with their clothes on.

But few, if any, would have swapped places with anyone sitting comfortable and dry in a living room watching on television.

There was Pope John Paul II—not in a TV newscast on a balcony in Rome but there in person, moving about on a moder-

Boston Common. The first Pope ever to set foot on Boston soil.

And, you keep saying to your self, you're there. So was the rain. But who cares about a little rain? Or even a lot of rain?

"I greet you, America the beautiful!" the Pope was saying. "Beautiful even if it rains."

The crowd laughed and chanted "Viva il Papa".

Mayor Arthur Tobin, his wife, Shirley, and I got a last minute invitation from a friend of the mayor's to sit in the reserved section.

Tobin Frustrated

Red Tape Slows Quincy Sq. Development

By TOM HENSHAW

Mayor Tobin says he is being frustrated by governmental red tape in efforts to build a 10-story office building on the Della Chiesa Parking Area and the Burgin Parkway Extension.

"There are some technical hangups on the UDAG (urban development action grant) to build a parking garage over the MBTA tracks by the Della Chiesa project," he said. "There is a possibility I'll be going back to Washington on it."

He said he didn't think the grant itself is in any danger.

"In order to do certain things," he said, "you have to have prior commitments from the MBTA and those haven't come through. It's the red tape and technical matters I have to straighten out."

Tobin said the MBTA has been very helpful, but we're on a timetable and they have been tied up with the Papal visit. They have priorities and we have priorities. I have to meet with them to free up some of these problems."

Plans for the Burgin Parkway Extension which would connect downtown Quincy with the Southeast Expressway in South Quincy are not moving fast enough to suit him either, the Mayor said.

"There are similar technical problems there that have to be worked out," he said. "When you have a project of that magnitude you'd be surprised at the bureaucratic red tape that can pile up. It can get very frustrating."

Much of the future development of downtown Quincy depends on construction of the Burgin Parkway Extension, which would give persons living south of Quincy access to the shopping area by way

$454,000 Deficit Seen In School System's Oil Budget

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

The skyrocketing price of heating oil may cause a deficit of around $454,000 in the school system's fuel oil account, according to School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon.

A memo to Creedon from Stephen Moynihan, his administrative assistant for business affairs, reports the 1979-80 oil budget was based on a price of around 40 cents per gallon for heating oil. This is less than the average price of 41.2 cents per gallon the school department paid last year.

Prices for the more expensive types of heating oil are expected to climb close to $1 per gallon this winter, Moynihan's memo reported.

When asked by School

Committee member Francis Anselmo if the department could break even on the oil account, based on this information, Creedon replied, "No way."

The Quincy Oil Company has predicted that prices for the two types of heating oil used by the school system: Number 2 and Number 5 oil: will hit 98 and 66 cents per gallon respectively by the end of the heating season, according to Moynihan's memo. This would mean a deficit of about $454,000, he reported. Even if oil stayed at its present prices—75 and 57 cents per gallon—the oil budget would come up about $355,000 short, he claimed.

The committee budgeted $530,850 in its 1979-80 fuel account. This figure was based on a predicted 1.35 million gallons of oil at an average price of around 40 cents per gallon.

Last year the system used 1,369,544 gallons of oil at an average price of 41.2 cents per gallon. The $530,850 budget was exceeded by $33,795.

The energy overrun isn't due to any wastefulness in the school system, Creedon claimed. In fact, he said, the school system has cut its use of heating oil by about 25 percent since 1973, he said. The school department used 1.8 million gallons of heating oil during the 1971-72 school year.

The first step in the reduction, Creedon said, was "simply asking people to be sensitive to the thermostat," asking them to draw shades at the end of the day and

Council To Decide

Oct. 15 How

To Fund Revaluation

The City Council will decide Oct. 15 how to fund the estimated $500,000 cost of hiring a private firm to aid in its revaluation of residential property.

Judge John Wilkins last week gave the city until Nov. 19 to hire a private firm to speed up the revaluation and fund it. If not, the judge said, the funds will be deducted from state payments to the city due Dec. 15.

The council Tuesday asked the city assessors and Dennis Harrington, assistant city solicitor to meet with it on Oct. 15 to discuss funding of the project.

The city had been using CEIA employees, paid under a $375,000 appropriation, to gather data on property value.

But, the State Department of Revenue last month told the city it wasn't moving fast enough to be certified for classification by June 30, 1981. City officials then put the work out to bid by a private firm, the results of which are not yet in.

Harrington said of the judge's order, "Actually, it's to the benefit of Quincy, because they cannot certify classification until the city is revalued at full and fair valuation."

The Quincy Citizens Association candidates night, originally scheduled for Oct. 18, has been changed to Thursday, Nov. 1, at 7:45 p.m. in the Woodward School.

Dorothy C. Kelly, secretary of the QCA, said the original Oct. 18 date had been preempted by Mayor Tobin when he scheduled a hearing on airplane noise at the Quincy Vo Tech School gym.

Faltering QTA Starts Drive For New Members

By TOM HENSHAW

The Quincy Taxpayers Association, once the scourge of free-spending politicians, is in such bad shape that its directors are thinking of hiring a professional fund-raiser, not so much to raise funds as to find new members.

"Membership is very low," Executive Director Harry Roemer told the board last week. "I hate to give you numbers but it's very low. We're not getting new members as fast as the old ones are dying off."

Membership in the QTA is estimated to be about 1,100, or about one-quarter of the more than 4,000 of 25 or 30 years ago when the organization could make the weight of its membership felt when it came time to run the city budget up the flagpole.

The board of directors heard a presentation by Michael Sullivan of Dickinson Advertising on the best way to go about soliciting new members. They voted to set up a membership committee to look into it further.

"This used to be THE association to belong to," Roemer told the 11 people who showed up for last week's meeting at State Street South. "We had thousands and thousands of members and we used to meet at the Neighborhood Club and it was quite a thing."

He traced the downfall of the 47-year-old QTA to a decision by an earlier executive director to support 100 per cent valuation.

"That went over like a lead balloon," he said. "Our membership deserted us. But thinking people stayed with us. They know that we must have watchdogs on the treasury. We must have someone watching the budgets."

In recent years, he said, Quincy has split up into 26 little neighborhood groups, each for the purpose of saying, "We don't want it in our backyard," while the Taxpayers Association, which is interested in the whole city, has withered.

"We make the year financially," he said, "but in some instances we have to borrow $1,000 at the end of the year and pay it back when the memberships are due the first of the year. It's not getting any better. It's getting worse."

And the prestige and clout of the QTA has fallen, too, Roemer said. "I went to the Mayor two weeks ago," he said, "and I asked, 'Is there any way I can help you with this labor problem?' He didn't want any help. I sat right at his desk and he refused the help of the Quincy Taxpayers Association."

"I want to get back to a financially successful outfit where we can have at least one paid employee, maybe two, and we can have some clout. Do you think the political people want us? They'd be tickled to death to see us go down the drain."

Roemer told the board that he had not received any payment, except for out-of-pocket expenses, since 1974.

'Early Alert' To Aid Quincy Senior Citizens

Quincy has been placed on "Early Alert."

Early Alert is a program, sponsored by the Council on Aging with the support of the Police Department and the U. S. Postal Service, designed to locate elderly people in trouble in their homes and help them.

The program was announced Tuesday by Mayor Tobin, who said it is the first of its kind on the South Shore and the second (after Boston) in the whole state of Massachusetts.

Michael D. O'Brien, director of social services for the Council on Aging, explained Early Alert like this:

Each senior citizen who signs up for the program receives a small decal to be placed inside his or her mailbox. It identifies the occupant of the house or apartment as a participant.

Should the mailman notice that mail has been piling up at the box for a day or two, he notifies the Council on Aging which, in turn, attempts to reach the elderly person by phone or personal visit.

If no contact is made, then police are authorized to enter the apartment to see what is wrong.

O'Brien told some 60 senior citizens who gathered to hear the announcement of the program that it "is designed to help you feel safe and secure in your homes in case of any kind of problem."

Persons who are 60 years old and over who wish to enroll in the Early Alert program should obtain a registration form, fill it out and mail it to Council on Aging, 1 Cliveden St., Quincy, 02169.

'Total Ordinance Revision'

Kelly Proposal Would Tighten Drinking Laws

City Councillor Leo J. Kelly has proposed a revised city ordinance that would tighten the ban on public drinking and spell out in detail those places where it is prohibited.

Kelly called it "a total revision of the existing ordinance . . . this one is stronger."

Kelly, who is a juvenile division officer at the Quincy court, said the existing ordinance is so weak that judges have dismissed cases against violators because "it doesn't hold water."

The ordinance proposed by Kelly sets down the following definitions of public places where drinking or the consumption of alcoholic beverages would be forbidden:

Public ways: all ways to which the public has a right of access.

Park: any public park under the care and control of the city, including the Veterans' Memorial Field.

Playgrounds: any playground under the care and control of the city.

Beach: any beach under the care and control of the city and beaches within the limits of the city to which the public has a right of access.

Public parking areas: any public parking area under the care and control of the city.

Private parking areas: any private parking area throughout the city to which the general public has the right to access.

The exception is that the licensing board may issue a license for possession and consumption of liquor for no longer than one day at any given time.

The proposed ordinance was sent to the ordinance committee.

Downtown Boycott Set To Begin

The planned boycott of downtown banks and other businesses by a coalition of city employees unions is scheduled to begin today (Thursday).

Literature distributed by "United City Unions" is urging city employees to "close all checking and savings accounts or withdraw all but $10 minimum" at seven downtown banks today.

Starting Friday, the literature continues, "do not patronize any downtown merchants. This includes lunchrooms, banks, stores, restaurants, etc.

Supermarkets in all sections of the city are also on the boycott list."

The boycott was approved Sept. 10 by about 350 members of the 14 city employees to protest stalled contract negotiations with the city. Mayor Arthur Tobin has refused to grant pay raises for some unions and has not funded raises previously negotiated with others.

The money just isn't there, says Tobin. He insists that even if city employees don't get the raises they're asking for, the city is in dire financial straits.

CURING BREAST CANCER

Breast cancer is so common - over 60,000 American women contract it every year - that physicians agree that every woman should examine her breasts every month for signs of it. At least 85 percent of all breast cancers are curable if caught early enough. But all too many are fatal because of needless delay. The intelligent woman who examines her breasts monthly, and in a systematic manner, stands an excellent chance of detecting cancer early - before it can endanger her life.

Unfortunately, far too many women wait too long to see their doctors when a suspicious lump is felt. In a recent study of several thousand breast cancer surgery patients, the average size of the tumor was a little over an inch - three times the size of the smallest lump that can be felt. If you are not sure how to examine yourself, ask your local Cancer Society office or your family physician.

Architect Says:

$2.4 Million City Hall Annex 'Biggest Bargain'

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Like a new father handing out cigars, architect T. Owen Trainor might have been the proudest man in the city.

The man whose firm designed, engineered and supervised the construction of the new City Hall Annex calls his baby "the biggest bargain in the city."

Born in controversy, Trainor's creation has been criticized for reasons of finances, esthetics and energy conservation. But the Quincy-based architect has strong answers for every complaint.

"One of the biggest complaints we have received is that of energy conservation," he says.

Trainor says criticism has been to the effect that "this fellow Trainor must be on the moon" to design, during this era of energy problems, a glass building—supposedly more expensive to heat and keep cool.

Not so, he insists.

The new annex is "more energy efficient than any public or private building in the city," he says.

The glass exterior is a key to the energy saving, instead of a drawback, he adds. The entire building is wrapped in thermopane glass—a double layer of glass with air space in between, which acts as insulation. The glass is tinted, keeping out much of the sun's rays, and covered with a reflective coating, which deflects about 20 percent of the heat.

In addition, Trainor says, "the building has one of the most sophisticated HVAC (heating, ventilating and air conditioning) systems in any city." For example, he says, thermostats in the offices adjust automatically to such subtle changes as the shifting rays of the sun or the increase in body heat when people enter the room.

The 33,000 square foot addition was designed to be converted easily from gas to oil heat. Solar heating could also be installed at a "minimal cost," he added.

T. OWEN TRAINOR

Esthetically, some feel the shiny glass clashes with the granite Greek Revival style of the 1844 City Hall. Trainor has received letters to this effect; "usually from places like Weymouth," he says.

The annex's design was intended "not to compete with the existing building, but to complement it. I envisioned the existing city hall as a jewel and tried to design a jewel for the box to sit in."

Inspiration for the glass design came from the John Hancock Tower, where huge glass panes mirror nearby Trinity Church and historic Copley Square.

"Using the reflective glass is considered an outstanding architectural solution to the problem of how to be compatible with a historic landmark," Trainor says of the Hancock design.

Because he was associated for many years with the architectural firm of I.M. Pei, which designed the Hancock Tower, "I naturally gravitated towards that solution," he says.

The overall reaction to the building has been "a tremendous outpouring of compliments...apparently people like it," Trainor says. "I expected much more criticism."

Fiscally, the project will be completed in good shape, Trainor claims. Although Mayor Tobin and Public Works Commissioner James Ricciuti expressed fears of a cost overrun when construction bids were opened in March of 1978, this has not been the case, he says.

Enough funds were left over from the $2.44 million federal grant which financed the project to spend $175,000 on renovations for the old city hall, Trainor says.

This work brought fees paid to the general contractor, Moscone, Inc. of Broad St., Boston to $2,115,000 according to Trainor. His own firm received $220,000 for architecture and engineering and $60,000 for its construction management services. The remainder of the grant, about $45,000, was paid to the city for its bookkeeping services during construction, Trainor said.

When asked if there were any drawbacks to his design, any changes he might make in hindsight, Trainor said he couldn't think of any.

"Breakage will be a problem," he admits. "Everytime a kid throws a rock through one of those panes, it will cost the city $1,000." But, he says, the advantages to the glass design will outweigh any drawbacks.

We were just eight rows, a few feet from the foot of the red carpeted, yellow flower banked altar. To our right were Senator Edward Kennedy and his wife, Joan, Gov. Edward King, Henry Cabot Lodge, Congressman Brian Donnelly and their wives.

When the Kennedys arrived just before the Mass started, the crowd chanted "Ted For President!" "Ted For President!" But you knew who the real star was this night.

Earlier, before the rain started, you noticed all the young people in this sea of humanity. You later learn that the Pope himself had decreed that 10,000 tickets be given to the young. And they were listening, hanging onto his every word, as the rains continued to come splashing down.

"Tonight, in a very special way, I hold out my hands to the youth of America," the Pope said.

It touched off one of the biggest roars of approval from the crowd followed by cries of "Long Live The Pope!" "Long Live The Pope!" from the thousands of young people.

"He's my Pope, he's my Pope," cried a young nun from behind and as you stand, she runs onto your chair to flash a picture because the elevation offers a better view.

"Umbrellas, down in front," goes up the chant from those standing behind. "You people in the reserved seats have got to suffer a little."

The umbrellas go down.

A Lebanese priest says to several teen-age girls standing behind the ropes, "You know, you would think with all the clergy that is here, we would have a little influence on the weather."

"Not," he was reminded, "in New England."

"Tonight, I want to repeat what I keep telling youth," the Pope said. "You are the future of the world and the day of tomorrow belongs to you."

More roars from the crowd - from both young and old.

"I'm glad he remembered us," said a teen-aged girl behind us.

"He's so cute," said her friend peering through the rain with binoculars for a closeup look.

The Pope's homily lasted some 40 minutes and was interrupted by applause and chants at least 25 times.

He spoke in English, his words strong, crisp and clear.

The crowd had started to gather at 5:30 a.m. Just about everyone there had sandwiches, candy, cookies, etc. stuffed into their pockets or in bags to help nourish them through the long wait.

If there was any liquor or beer, it was well hidden. It was never visible.

Some brought playing cards. Some brought signs like "Protestants For The Pope" and "Your Hope For The Future Is Here."

By 1 p.m. you begin to spot a few familiar faces: Robert Chenette of Merrymount, standing alert in front of the altar heading up the Boston Police detective security. In the crowd you see Richard Sweeney, the funeral director and his wife; Clement O'Brien of the Quincy Housing Authority, Don Almeida of the Quincy Savings Bank, Frank Moran, And, Gerald Walsh checking for tickets those trying to get into Section C.

And there are a number of familiar faces among the 300 priests selected to distribute Holy Communion: Fr. William McCarthy, Fr. Daniel Graham, Fr. Joseph Connolly and Fr. William Walsh of St. John's; Fr. Cornelius Heery and Fr. James Hawker of Sacred Heart; Fr. Gerald Ostermann, St. Boniface; Fr. Lawrence Pratt, Fr. David Delaney, and Fr. Mark Sheehan, formerly of St. John's Church. And among the concelebrants of the Mass with 15 cardinals and 30 other bishops are two more familiar and popular local figures from the past: Most Rev. Thomas Daily, formerly of St. Ann's, now Auxiliary Bishop of Boston and Most Rev. Joseph Maguire, formerly of St. John's, now Bishop of Springfield.

The rain turns into a steady, heavy downpour during Communion with the priests distributing wet, soggy hosts from under umbrellas if they were lucky to have someone near them to share an umbrella.

For Fr. Graham there was both rain and tears. He wept as he distributed Communion to the physically handicapped, so touched by them. They had sat all day in their wheelchairs and were now soaking wet but without a complaint as they held out their hands for Communion.

For a throng of such multitude, everything seemed to go off without a hitch. There were no problems or incidents to mar this historic occasion. Some 400,000 or more persons of all ages and religions jammed together in the rain. And no problems.

You couldn't help wondering what it would have been like if this had been a rock 'n roll concert under the same circumstances.

Finally, the Mass which lasted an hour and a half, was over. And the crowd started filing out still orderly.

But not before one more rousing cheer went up for the first Pope to ever visit Boston and, of course, the night to celebrate a Mass here.

It was a night to remember for those who were there. A night to long cherish. You had just witnessed a chapter in history. And you were there. Soaked and chilled. But you were there.

KEEPING TABS on the Pope's progress are Sheila Ritchie of Becket St., North Quincy (dark coat) and Marie Maguire of East Milton, who brought a tiny portable TV to Old Colony Ave. in South Boston.

Only High School Unit

Combined Band Greets Pope With Polish Hymn

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Overcast skies and a four-hour wait for a 10-second look didn't seem to dampen the spirits of the Quincy band which helped welcome Pope John Paul II to Boston Monday.

A combined band representing the city's three high school bands accompanied by several dozen friends, relatives and school officials, traveled by buses to Preble Circle in South Boston to serenade the Pope and the thousands awaiting his arrival.

The band, composed of about 170 students from North Quincy, Quincy and Quincy Vocational Technical High Schools, was the only high school unit invited to perform along the route of the Pope's motorcade. The other 20 or so units performing at various points ranged from CYO church bands of a group known as "Lucky Louie's Polka Band."

Those present at Preble Circle were rewarded for their wait about 4 p.m. with a brief glimpse of the smiling Pope, as his open-top limousine cruised by at about 20 miles per hour, shielded on each side by jogging Secret Service men.

The festive occasion was made even more so by the presence of several hundred Polish-Americans from Dorchester's nearby St. Mary's parish. Members of the group sang traditional songs and carried signs greeting the Pope in his native tongue, and many showed up dressed in Polish folk costumes.

The weather cooperated, for the most part. The cloudy skies, which threatened rain all day, contributed only a fine mist in the later part of the afternoon. The heavy rain which put a damper on the Pope's Boston Common Mass began after the band's buses had returned to Quincy, about 5 p.m.

The day's activities started about 11:30 a.m., when most of the 10-bus convoy left the Quincy-High-Vo Tech area accompanied by police escort. About 10 minutes later it was joined by the three buses carrying the North Quincy band members.

The entire caravan pulled into Preble Circle, at Day Blvd. and Old Colony Ave., at noon.

First person to bound out of the police car which led the way was Patricia Toland, vice-chairwoman of the school committee.

"Somebody had to show them the way," quipped Mrs. Toland. She was joined in the trip by fellow committee members Francis Anselmo, Mary Collins, Christopher Kennedy, Joan Picard, School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon, and assorted other school officials.

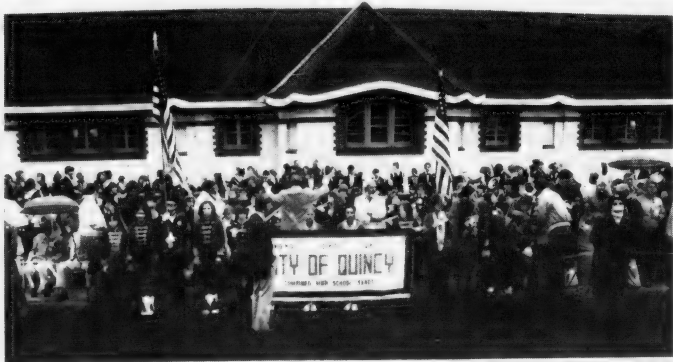

Band members wasted no time unloading their instruments, chairs, music stands and other equipment from a school department truck and were rehearsing within a half hour of their arrival.

After the first rehearsal, there was time for the band members to eat one of the 300 hot lunches provided by the school department and wander about the area, observing the growing crowd, the colorful Polish-American contingent and the vendors selling Pope John Paul II mementos ($4 for a large button, $2 for a smaller one and $1.50 for a pennant.)

The band prepared nine songs for the day's program - a mixture of traditional Catholic hymns and patriotic tunes, like "God Bless America" and "America The Beautiful." Chosen to be played at the Pope's appearance, according to Quincy High band director David Cahill, was "My Cheery Boga (We Want God)," a Polish hymn reportedly among the pontiff's favorites.

"We've been practicing for about two weeks," Cahill said of the combined band. The respective North Quincy and Quincy bands had been rehearsing separately previous to that, he said.

Directing the rehearsals were Anthony Ferrante, music director for Quincy public schools, David Watson, director of the North Quincy band, and Cahill.

COMBINED BANDS of Quincy, North Quincy and Quincy Vocational-Technical High Schools perform in South Boston before the Pope's arrival, conducted by Anthony Ferrante, music director for the Quincy school system. Band directors also shown are Michael Cahill, Quincy High and David Watson, North Quincy High.

Pope John Paul II Comes To Boston

HEAVILY GUARDED by Secret Service agents, Pope John Paul II reaches out to the thousands waiting for him near Preble Circle, South Boston.

CRUISING PAST at about 20 miles per hour, the Pope has a smile and a wave for those who waited to see him.

HOPING FOR A LOOK at the Pontiff, are Polish-American youngsters, from St. Mary's Parish in Dorchester, dressed in traditional Polish folk costumes.

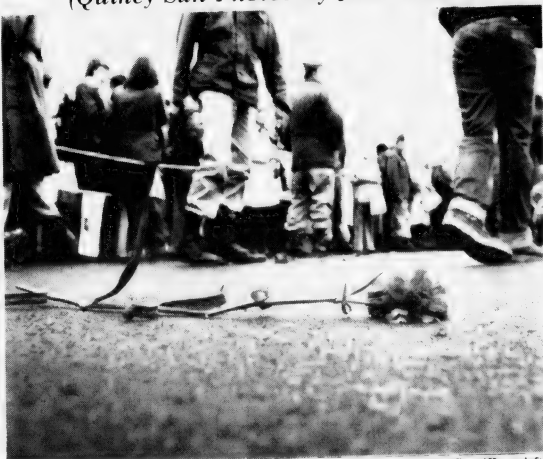

BEARING GIFTS for the first Polish Pope are several Polish-American youngsters, who hoped the Pontiff would stop to greet them. But, the motorcade never slowed down as it passed through Preble Circle.

POPE JOHN PAUL waves a greeting to throng. Barely visible in the back seat behind him is Cardinal Humberto Medeiros.

AFTER THE MOTORCADE had passed, a fallen carnation tossed to the Pontiff was left behind.

Quincy Legislators In Pope's Welcoming Party

Sen. Paul D. Harold and Reps. Thomas F. Brownell and Michael W. Morrissey (all D-Quincy) were members of the official reception committee that greeted Pope John Paul II at Logan Airport. Some 400 people were in the welcoming party, including members of the State Legislature, the Boston City Council, the Governors Council and various judges and other local officials.

Atty. Gen. Francis X.

Bellotti of Quincy also was at the airport to greet the Pope. The legislators were bused to the airport from the State House and bused back in time to reach their places in the reserved standing room section for the Mass on Boston Common. The crowd was so thick at the time that the 100 legislators remaining in the party had to be escorted to their places by members of the State Police.

Pope's Visit Causes No Problems In Quincy

The day the Pope visited Boston turned out to be just another rainy day at home for the Quincy Police Department. "It didn't seem to be too much of a problem at all," said Lt. William Murphy. "It really was no different than any other day. Maybe the weather scared people off."

Quincy Police had made elaborate plans to handle an expected huge influx of cars and people using the MBTA's Red Line to travel to Boston for the Pope's Mass on the Common Monday. "We were surprised," said Lt. Murphy. "I went in town at 3 o'clock and I had no trouble." He said there were no traffic problems and no troubles on the "T", which maintained a rush hour schedule all day but closed down at the usual time with the last train arriving at Quincy station at 12:30 a.m.

Police Scholarship Set Up In Memory of Capt. Riley

George R. Riley, who recently resigned as Mayor Tobin's executive secretary to return to private business, has set up a scholarship fund in memory of his father, Police Capt. Edward G. Riley, with an initial endowment of $1,500.

The City Council voted Tuesday night to accept the gift, the interest on which will be used to award each year a $100 scholarship to "a deserving Quincy resident son or daughter of a Quincy police officer."

Details of the scholarship are to be worked out by Riley, the Quincy police chief and the president of the Quincy Police Mutual Aid Association. The city treasurer will be custodian of the fund.

Riley resigned as the Mayor's executive secretary Monday to return to his insurance business.

Delcevere King Protests Lack Of Harvard Crimson

Delcevere King of Quincy (Harvard '98) protested to the Harvard Student Council against the use of colors other than Harvard crimson at the various class reunions.

It was embarrassing, he said, to attend his class dinner in June and find the colors most in evidence to be blue and white right after Yale had beaten Harvard in baseball.

King was fresh from an intensive campaign to introduce the word "scofflaw" into the English language to define someone who defied the American prohibition laws.

ZONING SURVEY UNDERWAY

President Scott of Technical Advisory Corp. of New York told the Quincy Planning Board that a field survey, the first step in the zoning of Quincy, had been finished and new maps made.

Scott said the preliminary survey had shown that the city was especially rich in playground areas, which he called a "most fortunate condition."

"I don't know who has been responsible," he said, "but it is an indication of most remarkable foresight on the part of some governing body."

SAFETY RECORD HAILED

The city of Quincy drew praise from the State Department of Motor Vehicles for a highway safety record that showed only four auto deaths in 1924 compared to 11 in 1923.

"The record in Quincy is a remarkably good one," said DMV Statistician C. B. Hubbell. "Quincy is what may be called a 'through route' city, many thousands of tourists passing through it."

Square In Spain Named For Her

We Know More About Columbus Because Of Her

By TOM HENSHAW

There were 90 men with Christopher Columbus on Oct. 12, 1492, when he discovered America -- 24 on the Nina, 26 on the Pinta and 40 on the Santa Maria.

Three of them, in addition to Columbus himself, were Italian -- Jacome el Rico of Genoa; Anton Calabres, probably a Calabrian; and Juan Vecano, most likely from Venice.

Four of them were convicts facing the death penalty -- and three of them, Alonso Clavijo, Juan de Moguer and Pedro Yzquierdo, were condemned for helping the fourth, Bartolome de Torres, to escape.

All of those pertinent facts might still be lost in the mists of time were it not for the work of Alice Bache Gould, or Alicia Gould y Quincy, as she was known in Spain.

Miss Gould, granddaughter of one of the many Josiah Quincys who grew up in the Quincy Mansion on Muirhead St., spent 42 of her 85 years in musty Spanish archives identifying members of Columbus' crew.

By 1942, when Samuel Eliot Morison brought out his "Admiral of the Ocean Sea", she had the names of 87 of them, missing only Columbus' page boy, the steward aboard the Santa Maria and the steward on the Nina.

By the time of her death in July, 1953, she had them all, including Bartolome de Torres and the three who rescued him, all of whom received royal pardons for shipping aboard Columbus' fleet.

Unfortunately, except for a brief mention of her work in Morison's book and some articles in the Patriot Ledger at the time of her death, Miss Gould herself has now become lost in the mists of time.

She was born in Quincy Jan.

ALICE GOULD

5, 1868, daughter of Benjamin Apthorp Gould, mathematician and astronomer, and his wife, the former Mary Quincy of Wollaston.

The Goulds were a special family in their own right. The American progenitor, Zacch-us Gould, came over in 1638 and settled in Topsfield. A descendant was Hannah Flagg Gould, the poet.

An earlier Benjamin Gould, Miss Alice's great grandfather, was the last man to cross Charlestown Neck in retreat from Bunker Hill and commanded the guard at West Point at the time Gen. Arnold turned fink.

Alice Gould was graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1889 and traveled widely until she discovered her life's work, almost by accident, in 1911.

She was in the Archives of the Indies in Seville, Spain, at the time, looking up some obscure fact about the island of Barbados when she stumbled across the name Pedro de Lepe.

Pedro was a matter of dispute among Columbian scholars at the time. Some said he was a member of Columbus' crew. Some said he wasn't. Others maintained that he never existed at all.

The document that Miss Alice held in her hand -- a pay stub -- proved at least one of those points. It was a heady feeling. It turned her on. She settled in Spain and dove into the archives.

By 1925, she had settled once and for all a matter of contention that had divided scholars for centuries: Columbus, or rather Cristoforo Colombo, was indeed born in Genoa.

She came across a royal decree of inheritance setting up the maintenance of a house in Genoa for a member of Columbus' family. The document stated flatly that Columbus was born in Genoa.

Historians of the day estimated that Columbus' crew numbered anywhere from 69 to 160 men. Miss Alice not only found that there were 90 but what they were paid.

North Quincy Business Directory Now Available

At a recent meeting of the North Quincy Local Development Corporation, merchants were presented with the first copies of the "North Quincy Business Directory".

Over 100 merchants and professional people are listed in this booklet.

It represents the combined efforts of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, which supplied the labor, and the North Quincy Local Development Corporation, which funded its printing.

This summer, two CETA Youth Corps workers, Dorothy Peterson and Debrah Bleehen, went door-to-door in the Hancock St. - Billings Rd. area collecting information from the merchants and professional people. Philip Hamric, a summer staff member of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, produced and printed 4,000 copies of the booklet. Community volunteers spent many hours collating and preparing it for delivery.

Copies of the "North Quincy Business Directory" are being delivered to homes in Atlantic by volunteers, who will also be delivering the October issue of the Atlantic Neighborhood News.

There are extra copies available at the Neighborhood Center and through the North Quincy L.D.C. to anyone who wants to have an indexed guide to the stores and services provided by the North Quincy Business District.

fall home improvement

Indoors and out, fall is the season to remodel

REPLACE LOOSE-FITTING rusty old windows like this with snug-fitting aluminum-framed units that can cut heat loss through the window substantially. Pre-assembled aluminum replacement and storm windows don't need painting and can be removed or tilted-in for easy cleaning.

Energy and money savers . . .

Replacement, storm windows cut fuel use

Rising fuel costs and lowered thermostats may make you feel uncomfortable this coming winter if your windows and doors aren't sealed effectively against leaks and drafts.

Where windows are worn, warped or loose-fitting, modern replacement windows may be your solution.

However, if your existing windows are in repairable condition, storm sash will give you the needed protection.

Offset initial cost

Either way, savings in energy will help to offset the initial expense because good replacement of storm windows and doors, properly installed, can cut heat loss through these apertures by as much as 40 percent.

In addition, Uncle Sam will help defray some of the cost by allowing you a tax deduction of 15 percent of the first $2000 you spend for such fuel-saving devices.

Never need painting

Aluminum-framed replacement and storm windows continue to be the most popular type because they never need re-

(Cont'd on Page 24)

Expenditures for home remodeling are expected to reach a record $42-billion this year and double by 1985, according to the National Home Improvement Council.

Why the rapid growth in home improvements?

"New home prices are beyond the reach of many Americans," explains NHIC President Eugene B. Squires. "Mortgages are difficult to obtain and when they are available, interest rates often exceed 10 percent."

Instead of moving, more homeowners are remaining in their present homes and remodeling to meet their expanding needs.

They might enlarge a tiny kitchen, replace a worn roof or add insulation to keep fuel bills in check.

"Or they might choose to remodel simply because their tastes have changed or because they want to 'keep up with the Joneses,'" says Squires.

For a simple project, the homeowner may decide to tackle it himself. On most jobs, however, a qualified home improvement contractor can actually reduce costs—by offering money-saving suggestions and using his skills and experience to avoid costly mistakes.

"Reputable contractors also see to it that complicated building codes are met," points out the NHIC president, a contractor himself. Building codes may vary from one community to the next.

A permit is usually required whenever structural work is involved or the basic living area is to be changed.

"If, for example, you want to partition off a segment of an unfinished basement and complete it as a room, you'd probably need a building permit," says Squires.

Qualified contractors know the regulations and will prevent the homeowner from paying penalty fees for failing to file required permits.

How do you determine whether a contractor is qualified?

Squires recommends selecting a professional who has an established place of business, is financially stable, and is willing to provide references from satisfied customers.

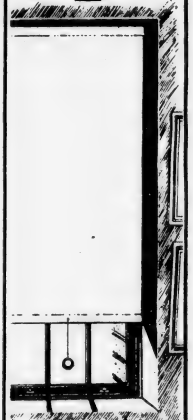

"Check on his reputation

Save Gas and Money ... shop locally.

with the local Better Business Bureau and Chamber of Commerce, and ask the contractor if he's a member of a professional association," the NHIC president advises.

Members of NHIC, the largest professional association in the remodeling industry, pledge to follow a prescribed code of ethics which assures consumers of "the highest standards of integrity, frankness and responsibility."

Pre-project agreements keep everybody happy

If you are hiring a contractor, the National Home Improvement Council has some suggestions on how to get the most out of the relationship.

First of all, says NHIC, tell the contractor your needs—don't tell him how to do it.

A good professional contractor is experienced in the home improvement and remodeling field. He knows about the latest products and procedures, can judge which is best for a particular job, can handle complicated installations, is aware of building code and safety requirements, and will stand behind his work.

To do a good job, he must know what you want and how much you can afford to spend.

From the homeowner's point of view, it's important to have a clear understanding—before work begins—of exactly what the contractor will provide.

● A written contract covering the exact work to be done, the quality and brand of materials to be used, the job's completion date, the final price and the schedule of payments.

● A certificate of insurance showing that the contractor is covered for workmen's compensation, as well as for personal liability and property damage.

● A stipulation in writing of who assumes responsibility for obtaining building permits and seeing to it that all building code requirements are met.

● A sketch of the project as it will look when completed, showing dimensions and—where applicable—color, style and materials.

● A list of the guarantees and warranties covering workmanship, products and materials that will be made available to the homeowner.

NHIC also suggests that homeowners get up to three comparative cost estimates before assigning a project.

To evaluate estimates, consider the amount of work, quality of materials and any extras—such as after-job clean-up—in each bid.

Don't hesitate to investigate a contractor's credit rating or to check out the jobs he's done for previous clients. A call to the local Chamber of Commerce or Better Business Bureau can determine if any complaints have been lodged against him.

How, when and why to buy a roof

The wise home-owner buys a new roof in the same way as he buys any other expensive and necessary item which he and his family will live with for many years.

He shops carefully, finds out as much as he can about the product, looks at samples, makes comparisons, and then makes his purchase on the basis of careful judgment and the most critical evaluation.

A good judgment in this area, however, can be far more difficult for the home-owner since he will purchase a new roof only once or twice in his lifetime, on the average.

Special purchase

Most of us are far less familiar with this type of shopping than with the problem of buying a new car, for example. And, in some ways, the purchase is unlike any other expenditure since it involves not only a product but the cost of installation as well.

Here are some hints on buying a new roof which should prove helpful in making a "best buy" in this critical area.

The first pertinent question, of course, is "when?" Can the existing roof be repaired? Or is it time for a complete replacement?

If your house is 15 years old, and has never been re-roofed, it may be time for a new roof. Look for such signs of age as shingles which are curling at the edges, splitting, dried-out, and showing lots of bare spots where the granules which protect the surface have disappeared. Are there granules in the gutters and around the drains?

If the roof is beginning to leak, as well as to show these signs of old age, it is definitely time to buy a new roof.

If the house is no more than fifteen years old, and has never been re-roofed, it may be possible to install a new roof over the old one without going to the additional expense of ripping off the existing roof.

Double damage

If the roof and the deck beneath it show signs of considerable damage from rain, snow, hail, etc., after a particularly severe winter, it may be necessary to rehabilitate both structures.

If some damage has occurred to the roof, which remains essentially sound otherwise, it may be possible to have the damaged area repaired and to live with the roof for quite a number of years without a total replacement.

This is a judgment which calls for a reliable professional roofer.

Finding a professional roofer with a good reputation is the same as locating a good professional in any other category. Look around the neighborhood for houses which have recently been re-roofed and ask your neighbors if they are pleased with the installation.

Job well done

Does the new roof look good? Did the roofer complete the job on time? Is your neighbor happy with the work? Does he recommend him?

Local home centers are good sources of recommendations for competent professional roofers of good reputation. Local Better Business Bureaus should also be checked out.

Comparison shopping is definitely in order. Just as you looked at more than one house before buying the one you live in, talk to at least two or three roofers before you make up your mind.

Get an estimate

The professional roofer will inspect your roof and then provide a complete estimate, in writing, of the work that has to be done. He will show you samples of shingles in both standard and premium (heavier) weights.

In the long run, the cost of the premium shingle may actually be less!

Compare the estimates you receive from the different contractors and roofers, based upon the same materials and installation considerations. The decision then is up to you.

The chances are good that you will then be able to make a "best buy" in purchasing your new roof.

Convert porch to family room to add space, lower energy bills

Tacking plastic over porch screens not only kept driving rain and drifting snow, a midwest homeowner discovered. It kept the heat in. The porch was 20° to 25° warmer than the outside.

If plastic was this effective, he reasoned, walls specifically designed to capture solar energy would be more so.

He installed heavy insulating glass to trap the sun's rays; added a dark floor to absorb those rays, and Levolor blinds to control the amount of sunlight admitted.

He insulated the perimeter of the slab and the ceiling to retain the captured heat; installed an electric heat pump to provide fan-blown warm air on chilly, cloudy days.

This is something you might do, too: by converting a porch into a family room, not only gain living/dining space but also cut energy bills and maybe even earn a tax credit on your solar investment.

Keep furnishings simple for easy maintenance.

Choose wall paneling with a tough finish that needs only occasional wiping; sliding doors with grids quickly removable for window cleaning; a self-venting range that removes moisture and odors; plastic laminate counters, ceramic flooring, vinyl wallcovering that you can sponge; aluminum mini-slat blinds with virtually invisible cords that don't attract dust; rattan furniture that has the warmth of wood but that sunlight doesn't affect.

Transform Eating Into Dining With The Flick Of A Switch

The lighting of the dining room is one of the most important decorative decisions in the home. Particularly in the chill days of fall and winter, and during the holiday season, the dining room is in much use as a place for elegant entertaining, family conviviality, and the celebration of holidays.

With the proper lighting, the enjoyment of dining is enhanced. Focused downlights shine on glass, china and silver to create a delightful shimmer that is visually exciting, stimulating to the mind, and encourages conversation.

The central chandelier is usually expected to carry the full load of lighting in the dining room, but specialists point out that the main fixture should be balanced with supplemental lighting as well. This may include pinpoint spots or downlights flanking the chandelier, track lighting along a wall, sconces over a buffet, or uplights through floor plants. Without a balanced level of light, there are harsh shadows on the faces of those around the table. (Who needs extra lines?)

For even more flattering "people light," place the lighting on a dimmer switch as restaurant designers do. This provides a variance from early-morning high light levels at breakfast to dim intimacy for late-evening relaxing over wine.

The styling and size of the fixture is also an important consideration. The fixture should either contrast or complement the overall decor of the room. Therefore, a smoked-glass and chrome fixture would complement a contemporary room, and the sinuous curves of French Provincial furnishings would be accented by the elegant simplicity of a Georgian brass chandelier.

The size of the fixture should be in proportion with the size of the room. Recommended sized sizes are: for a room 10' x 10', a 12" x 12" chandelier; a 12' x 12' room, a 20" x 26" chandelier; and for a 14' x 14' room, a 24" x 20" chandelier. But the design of the fixture also relates to proper sizing. An open airy design has less apparent bulk and can be over-scaled, whereas chandeliers with large center bodies appear more massive and may be under-scaled.

Most fixtures are hung too high over the dining table. AHI specialists comment. If the fixture is suspended from 30-36" above the surface, it provides a gentle wash of light and is still low enough for appreciation of the fixture itself.

A little "lightplan" will create a dining room where meals become a memorable experience for family and friends.

Vinyl Siding Never Needs Paint Or Surface Coloring

Paint your home with a garden hose. That is virtually what you can do with an exterior sidewall cover of solid vinyl siding. Most soil will just wash away, while any dirt and grime may be removed with minimum effort.

Vinyl siding is clean and refreshingly different. It never needs paint or other surface coloring. The color on the outside runs throughout the material.

In addition to charm and beauty, vinyl siding provides home comfort and protection and prevents moisture seepage. Walls and furnishings are guarded against unsightly water damage caused by wind-driven rains and melting snow or ice.

Made of one of the toughest of all plastic compounds, solid vinyl siding has proved its rugged durability over many years under conditions of severe corrosion and weather exposure. Vinyl will not support fire nor will it conduct lightning or electricity. It is impervious to pollutants in the air and is unaffected by fungi and termites.

Solid vinyl siding has the look of wood without the work. A variety of styles and colors create handsome architectural effects. The standard clapboard style with a smooth finish has been supplemented by the development of the Branded type.

This new style resembles handsome woodgrain textures. In addition, there is the vertical style, particularly effective in highlighting areas such as doorways, porches, and gable ends of houses.

Supplementing the siding line are solid vinyl soffit and fascia systems, a complete solid vinyl gutter and downspout system with all of the necessary components.

VICE ADVICE

A well-equipped shop may have a metal-working vice mounted at the left side of the workbench and a woodworking vice at the right.

But the most commonly used is the utility vice, a lighter duty version of the machinists' vice. It usually has pipe jaws located below the flat jaw facings and comes in jaw widths from three to five inches.

In winter, windows are especially energy-wasteful. They are responsible for as much as 35 percent of heat loss in a typical house. That's because window glass is a conductor of heat. In fact, 3 to 4 times more costly furnace-generated heat is lost through the window than through the sash around it.

In a study conducted at the Illinois Institute of Technology, researchers tested out standard window shades that retail for less than $6 each. Their findings: shades keep in 24 to 31 percent of the heat that normally escapes through windows.

Here's how. When shades are drawn, heat "bounces" back like a basketball off a backboard. That is why the Window Shade Manufacturers Association suggests that when it is most cold outside — in the evening, at night, and during the early morning — pull your shades down to the sill. Be sure there is very little space between the vertical edges of the shade and the window frame. This will block the escape of interior heat. During the sunny hours, raise the shades and let the sun warm up the inside.

The Illinois Tech findings are good news during this high-cost fuel era. Less heat loss means less fuel waste and lower fuel bills. The researchers estimate that proper window shade use can chop as much as 8 cents off each heating dollar for a typical home in a moderate climate.

Dollar-for-dollar, window shades are the homeowner's best investment in fighting the high cost of keeping warm during the cold, cold months of winter.

Color choice primary in kitchen remodeling

By BARBARA ROSS
Vice President
Dexter Design, Inc.,
New York

The nationwide boom in kitchen remodeling says one thing: the kitchen is still the hub of the home and often the center of family activities and entertaining.

Home owners are buying with discretion, but are willing to spend $6,000 or more for a new kitchen. According to the latest estimates, a total of 4.5 million kitchens will be renovated this year alone.

Whether the renovation is to be done by a professional kitchen remodeler or the do-it-yourselfer, the big challenge is to analyze the real needs and then provide a complementary environment.

Design suggestions from the remodeling contractor are often a vital factor in the final selection.

The single most important challenge in the well designed kitchen is color selection. An exotic scheme can be worked up around the color of the month to produce a colorful kitchen.

Although these kitchens may photograph well when all the elements are introduced—pots, pans, various colored fruits and vegetables and, most importantly, people wearing multi-colored clothing—the scene becomes a confusing visual assault.

I always use neutral colors when designing. Aside from being background colors, they inject much-needed tranquility in today's fast paced lifestyles. A neutral background surrounds you. It is quieting, comforting, and accepting.

Color in the environment emits emotion, and the world is chaotic enough, particularly in urban areas, where noise, concrete, flashing lights, crowded subways and freeways are a fact of life.

Predictions from manufacturers of cabinetry, laminates and appliances all indicate that neutral kitchens are becoming very popular.

Neutrals expand space

It should be pointed out that a neutral scheme, white or almond especially, expands space. Cabinets and window frames painted in dark or contrasting colors stop the eye, breaking up the space to appear smaller.

At a time when houses are getting smaller and space is at a premium, visual expansion is a main consideration.

Other current industry trends point to a swing in color to subdued pastels and gray tones.

White and yellow, long considered the staples of kitchen design, are now rivaled by the neutrals—almond, terra cotta, and the full spectrum of browns and beiges.

Wood finishes have gone from the deep, dark mediterranean of fifteen years ago to natural finishes from light to medium honey tones. Laminate manufacturers report a dramatic shift to dimensional effects.

Formica Corporation, for example, is now offering woven grass, pencil cane and basket weave, all with textured surfaces.

Many possibilities

The neutral kitchen does not have to be just contemporary or without color. A neutral kitchen can be traditional in styling, complete with wallpaper and some element of color.

Color, however, should be marks thoroughly with a dry cloth.

- A shower curtain will get clean in the washing machine. Fill the machine with hot water, the shower curtain and two bath towels. Add ½ cup each of detergent and bleach. Run through entire cycle, and rinse in plain water to which you have added at least one cup of vinegar. Do not spin dry. Be sure to put in the bath towels, because this method won't work without them.

DON'T FOOL YOUR THERMOSTAT!

Don't position a lamp in close proximity to a thermostat. The heat from the lamp bulb raises the temperature in the air, causing the thermostat to "think" the room is warmer than it is. In winter, the heat will not go on properly and, in summer, the air conditioning will be working overtime.

NEUTRAL KITCHENS can be sleek and elegant yet warm and inviting maintains Barbara Ross shown above.

used with discrimination. Even accents should be chosen with consideration for their emotional effects.

Remember, additional colors come from a variety of elements that go into a kitchen, everything from pots and pans to place mats and dish towels.

Color tips to keep in mind: an accent of red, particularly in eating areas, is terrific because it is a warm color and stimulates the appetite.

White suggests cleanliness, important in food preparation areas. With white, there is unlimited opportunity to provide accent colors in kitchen towels, napkins and place mats. All can be changed as often as desired to bring in new colors.

It's time to reprogram your thinking about kitchens. The kitchen, as well as the rest of the home, is not the event. What occurs there, the day-to-day activities of the family, is the main event.

Prior to doing any designs, I always ask my clients to fill out a simple questionnaire that reveals exactly how the kitchen is to be used.

The answers may prove helpful in remodeling the kitchen just the way you and your family always dreamed.

- Do you like the idea of an eating area in the kitchen?

- Do you enjoy cooking for an appreciative family and friends, or is meal preparation a chore to be handled speedily with as little effort as possible?

- Do you enjoy baking and doing a lot of it?

- Would you rather stand or sit when cleaning vegetables and preparing food at the sink?

- How many portable appliances do you use frequently that require accessible storage space?

- Do you like wood cabinets or the smooth clean look of easy-to-maintain laminate cabinets?

- How many portable appliances do you use frequently that require accessible storage space?

- Is it important to you to have desk space in the kitchen for cookbooks, telephone books and housekeeping papers within easy reach?

- What are the colors in adjacent rooms?

Give a fresh new look to the same old furniture

If one glance around your home brings on thoughts of a complete overhaul—but you can't afford it—cheer up. Simple ideas that don't cost lots of time or money can provide a fresh new look.

Here are some suggestions:

- Play musical chairs art: rearrange paintings or move them from room to room.

- Do the same with furniture. Form an "island" in the center of the living room by moving the couch and one or two armchairs into a cozy grouping. The open area around the perimeter is a perfect place for plants.

- Kitchen walls have a mean way of getting soiled. Just spray the soiled areas with degreaser, and you can wipe the dirt away with a damp sponge.

- Borrow your child's crayons to remove scratches on wood furniture. Choose a black crayon for black furniture and dark brown for mahogany pieces. Just rub the crayon on the scratches, then buff the painting or require maintenance and, although they are lightweight and easy to handle, they won't shrink, swell or rot.

Storm Windows Cut Fuel Use, Add Comfort

Standard sizes fit most types of windows—picture, bay, double-hung, single-hung, vertical and horizontal sliders, and doors of all kinds.

If your windows are not standard size, aluminum replacements and storm can be custom-fitted to accommodate any size opening. You can order them in anodized finishes or painted to match or blend with any decor.

Replacement windows come as completely pre-assembled units with aluminum frame, balances, hardware, weather-stripping and trim, and some have self-storing screens.

The newest and best of these are thermalized. This means that an insulating material in the frame and in the sash, along with insulating glass (two or three sheets of glass separated by a dead air space), helps keep heat inside during the winter and outside in summer.

These aluminum replacement windows insulate just as well as wood and, in most climates, don't require storm sash.

Other aluminum-framed replacements come with either double or single glazing plus storm windows and self-storing screens.

There are sliders that lift out and new double-hung windows that tilt into the room for easy cleaning.

All of them can effect substantial fuel savings. If heating oil reaches the anticipated 80¢ a gallon by mid-winter, a family in Minneapolis, Minn., with a window area of 250 sq. ft. and using oil heat, could save as much as $350 a year by replacing old windows with thermalized, double-glazed aluminum plus storm sash; in Des Moines, Iowa, $275; and in New Haven, Conn., $240.

Triple the savings

Savings could be three times more if they heat with electricity and about half with gas. As fuel costs rise still further savings can climb proportionately.

Where prime windows do not have a serious air leakage problem and can be caulked and weather-stripped properly to make them relatively airtight, storm windows may be your solution.

Such an investment, less costly than replacement windows, could pay for itself within three to six years by similar reductions in heat-loss and fuel use.

A storm window provides a second window over the original glass, and its low-maintenance aluminum frame helps to reduce air leakage around the perimeter of the prime window.

Leave air space

For storm windows to be most effective, there should be an air space of at least one inch between the two windows because, just as with double-glazed replacement windows, this air space acts as insulation.

Storm windows should fit snugly and have weep holes at the sill to allow for sufficient "breathing" to the outside. This reduces condensation on the window panes and sill.

Most popular variety

The most popular storm is the triple-track aluminum-framed window with self-storing screens that slide neatly into place. They, too, come in mill, anodized and painted finishes and in standard sizes and custom fit.

Shop carefully before you select any new windows, and compare the quality of the various types available. Look for neat, strong joints, a substantial frame and general construction, glass that weighs at least 18 ounces per square foot, and thick weather-stripping.

Try to see complete windows as well as the small sample in the salesman's kit.

Now there's a no-wax floor you can really afford.

The floor is Armstrong Sundial™ Solarian®. You know it really is a no-wax floor, because it has Armstrong's exclusive Mirabond® wear surface that keeps its sunny shine far longer than ordinary vinyl no-wax floors. But it costs far less than many floors you have to wax! So there's no longer any good reason for putting up with the endless drudgery of waxing, stripping, and re-waxing that old floors require. Dairy Freeze To Close At 11 P.M.

Dairy Freeze, on Adams St., will close at 11 p.m. bringing it in line with other Lakin Square fast food establishments, ruled the Quincy License Board at Tuesday's meeting.

The board made the ruling because of complaints from area residents of noise at the establishment late at night.

Dairy Freeze, open during the warm months, had had no set closing time.

The motion was made by Police Chief Francis X. Finn and seconded by Fire Chief Edward Barry. The voting was 3-2 with Finn, Barry and Building Inspector Allan MacDonald in favor, Health Inspector Dr. Robert P. McKeogh and City Clerk John Gillis opposed.

The board had heard complaints Sept. 18, from Lakin Square residents who told of litter, odor, noise, and parking problems connected with the Dairy Freeze. The board suggested that the two parties meet to work out their differences.

John Wallace, of Dairy Freeze, reported that the meeting was exceptionally good and that some resolutions had been made.

He said that Dairy Freeze would improve its policy of policing the area for litter, clean their system for removing odors more often, and would line their parking lot for six spaces.

Carolyn Reardon, of the Lakin Square Neighborhood Association, was slightly less pleased with the results of the meeting.

She asked that Dairy Freeze close at 11 p.m., as do Burger King and some other establishments in the area, citing that it is a working class area and people need some quiet.

She also said that while the two parties agreed on the designation of parking spaces, the association didn't go along with Dairy Freeze's attitude that they don't have to address the problem of traffic beyond their parking lot.

Wallace agreed to put signs in the window asking customers not to park on side streets and side walks, and he asked that the police put up a tow sign.

Len Fell, of Edy St., also told the board he wanted more cooperation from Dairy Freeze on parking problems beyond its lot. He said, "Dairy Freeze's actions say to me 'I want to use your premises and driveway'."

"If you [Dairy Freeze] restrict me, I must then restrict you," Fell said.

Wallace said that Dairy Freeze doesn't want to use the neighborhood. He said it has turned down offers to rent the space during the four or five months that it is closed because it would be inconsiderate to neighbors. He also pointed out the high taxes they pay, and limited amount of time they are open.

Chief Finn said he didn't see how people could live in the area with a lot of noise.

License Board Says No To Sub Shop

The Quincy License Board denied a request from Leo F. Driscoll, of Marshfield, for a common victualer license to Driscoll's Sub Shop at 496 Hancock St., North Quincy.

The request was denied because of the surplus of such shops in the area. Councillor Joanne Condon had also opposed the shop.

The board also:

- Continued to Oct. 9, a request from Sacred Heart Rectory for a permit for a one day flea market Oct. 13, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the school hall.

- Granted an auctioneer's license to Bruce Patrick, 192 Billings St., with the stipulation that he pay back fees for the license, and that no auction materials be stored in Quincy.

- Granted a one day all alcoholic license to the Quantum Yacht Club for a "Trophy Day" Oct. 6, 8 a.m. to midnight, and Oct. 7, 1-8 p.m., pending approval by the Health Dept.

- Granted, subject to approval of the Building Inspector, a common victualer license to Vasilios Giansmidis for Friendly Pizza, 1622 Hancock St., (formerly Bob & Ray's Submarine Sandwiches).

- Granted, with the stipulation that they check with the Health Dept., and have a police officer on duty, a one day - all alcoholic license to Troop 6, Boy Scouts of America, Houghs Neck Congregational Church, for a 50th anniversary celebration Oct. 13, 7 p.m. - midnight at North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall. The license fee was waived because it is a non-profit organization.

- Granted a request from St. Boniface Church for a one day all alcoholic license for a dance Oct. 12, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the church hall.

- Granted a request from the Hospital, Library and Public Employees for a permit for use of a public address system mounted on a van Oct. 5, 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

- The board also agreed to send a letter of reprimand to Wendy's Hamburgers, Southern Artery, for failing to remove a sidewalk sign when directed to by the police.

The sign was causing pedestrians to step into the street to pass by. Police finally removed the sign themselves to the police garage.

McGowan Picked To Lead 'Tax Ax' Campaign In Quincy

John McGowan, of 31 Grenwood Rd., Quincy Center, chairman of the Republican City Club, has been named to serve as Quincy coordinator for the "tax ax" petition signature drive.

Backers of the drive are seeking to have an income tax plan devised by Rep. William G.

Robinson (R-Melrose), the Republican floor leader, placed on the 1980 ballot.

They need 62,000 signatures in order to introduce the petition in the 1980 session of the state legislature.

Robinson claims his proposal would return $318 million to taxpayers over two years with each taxpayer saving between 7 and 60 per cent of what he or she is scheduled to pay on 1979 income.

It would repeal the 7½ per cent surtax, reducing withholding deduction on July 1, 1980.

The Victorian period is known for its highly modest attitude towards sex. Discretion was necessary in all sexual and love relationships. Some Victorians devised ways of getting messages to their lovers that might not be easily decipherable to others. The arrangement of stones in rings often conveyed messages. A combination of ruby, emerald, garnet, amethyst, rose quartz, diamond, in that sequence, meant "regard", or love, in modern parlance. Another combination of the same stones could signify the name of the loved one, or yet another the name of the lover. Today diamonds are traditionally given as a token of love. For a fine selection come by and see us at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. We have a fine choice of diamond stock, loose or mounted, and you are welcome to come in to choose your own diamond and setting. We handle setting, designing and remodeling on our premises. A Cucumber's Pickle

Let us contemplate the sad fate
Of the crisp, brisk, young cucumber,
Who lay in a leafy green field
In blissful oblivious slumber
All of a sunshiny summer.

Who rudely was yanked from his bed,
One of a great number,
And thrown in a great bath of brine,
(This happened in early September --
A terrible thing to remember!)

Slowly he felt himself change, it
Made him increasingly glummer;
His temper got sour and mean --
A pickle by early November!
A nosh for a butcher or plumber!

How like ourselves, when Fate's finger, fickle,
Turns a young kook to a sour old pickle!

Red Tape Slowing Quincy Sq. Development of the Expressway for the first time.

"We have the people who want to get involved," said Tobin, "and it's a frustrating thing. We could get down to the nitty gritty on negotiations for a hotel in Quincy Center if plans for the road were farther along."

"It's not a matter of faulting anybody. There's just so many different agencies involved."

Meanwhile, some plans for Quincy developments took a step forward last week.

The Planning Board approved a Chapter 121A agreement for Campanelli Enterprises, a tax incentive plan that would permit the Braintree developer to build the 10-story office building at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts.

SCI Investment Co. of Genoa, Italy, confirmed its plans, disclosed earlier by The Quincy Sun, to construct a $4.5 million office building on Newport Ave., North Quincy, near the State Street South complex.

their rank and biographical material.

"It wasn't always a matter of sitting down in a musty hall with a musty document, either."

Once she went to the town of Moguer, hometown of several crew members, to look up certain records only to find that they had been sent to the local jail for use as toilet paper.

In order to go through them, she had to be locked in the jail, released for lunch, then locked in for the afternoon when authorities refused to let the records out. Inmates helped her in her search.

Over the years, Miss Alice came to be such a well-known and beloved figure in Spain that a square in Simancas was named "Plaza Alicia Gould y Quincy", in the Spanish fashion of using names of both parents.

The Spanish government, too, recognized her services, awarding her in 1952 the coveted Ribbon of Queen Isabella the Catholic. Miss Alice, a Unitarian, wore it proudly.

Once settled in Spain, she returned to the States only for occasional visits but she relished meetings with other Americans visiting Spain. One of them was Francis Spellman, archbishop of New York.

"At the Cathedral (in Seville) where I saw the tomb of Columbus," he wrote in Collier's magazine in 1943, "I was introduced to an old lady, Miss Alice Gould.

"I knew that she was an American and I asked her from what part of the States she came. She answered, 'Quincy, Mass.' She was amazed when I said, 'I am from Whitman, Mass.'"

"Tears came to her eyes. She had been away from home for 30 years, studying the archives in Spain, and is one of the foremost authorities on Columbus. I told her I knew the house in which she said she was born."

She died in Simancas, Spain, on July 25, 1953, while walking to the archives where she had worked for so long. Spanish friends had a plaque placed on the bridge where she died.

But the real epitaph was written by Samuel Eliot Morison, author of the definitive work on Columbus. He called her work "the most important piece of original research yet done in the present century."

George Stephenson Promoted

Stephenson is an administrative technician with a unit of the Strategic Air Command at Minot Air Force Base, here.

His father, Harold Stephenson, lives in Bingham, Me.

South Quincy Junk Shop License Suspended

By NANGY McLAUGHLIN

The Quincy License Board voted Tuesday to suspend the junk shop license of PDM, Inc., 175 Intervale St., until conditions set by the board are met.

The conditions are that the establishment conform with zoning requirements and have "non-see through" fencing, subject to approval by Building Inspector Allan MacDonald; store no junk on Intervale St. or unowned adjacent property, and have no sign off the premises.

The board wrestled for well over an hour with technical questions of zoning, legal non-conforming rights and the intent of the board in issuing the original license to PDM in 1972.

The establishment has been before the board on a number of occasions since then. Most recently for failure to comply within 60 days to the board's decision of June 21, with regard to having all work done within the building and removal of all outdoor equipment.

Asked why the conditions were not met within 60 days, Mrs. Mary Gregoire of PDM replied the work was completed a few days after the time period and that a genuine effort had been made.

Police Chief Francis X Finn said a judge would deem that reasonable.

Atty. James Gallagher represented area residents Selma and Edgar Bookman, who asked why PDM had not complied with restrictions in the original license.

That led to discussion of whether the original restrictions on PDM's license for Water St. carried over to the Intervale location.

MacDonald said they did carry over. City clerk John Gillis said they were unique to the Water St. location.

After more discussion, Gillis said that if board members hadn't digested the situation by now they never would, and called for a motion.

Motions were made by Chief Finn and Inspector MacDonald, both of which failed to receive enough backing. Chief Barry made the final motion which was seconded by Health Inspector Dr. Robert P. McKeough and unanimously approved by the board.

take other small steps.

The school system began a window replacement program four years ago replacing hundreds of old windows which leak heat. Heating systems in some schools have been revamped to make them more efficient, he said.

Creedon said he would not recommend a mid-winter school closing or a four-day school week, two ideas mentioned as possible energy savers. Both solutions offer "little or no real energy saving," said the superintendent.

Even when the schools aren't in use, they still have to be heated to a certain minimum temperature, which varies from school to school. This is to prevent freezing in the water pipes and other problems.

Besides, Creedon said, sending 13,000 children for six weeks in mid-winter would result in the home thermostats being turned up. Thus, the community as a whole saves little energy, he said.

Surprisingly, Creedon said, the best time to close the school system down, in terms of saving energy, would be in the spring months.

Then, he said, the entire heating system could be shut off, without any damage to the buildings.

BILL DAILEY picks up some ground for North Quincy against Newton North as John Buckley (75) comes up to try and help.

Raiders Host Cambridge, Eye First Win

Despite a brilliant two-way performance by Capt. Leo Graham, who sparked a 100 percent improved offense, the North Quincy football team will still be seeking its first win Saturday when it hosts Cambridge Rindge and Latin (0-2) in a 1:30 p.m. Suburban League game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Cambridge dropped its opener to Quincy, 18-12, and bowed to Weymouth North, 12-2. Its game last week with B. C. High was postponed.

In each of its first two games North Quincy gained only about 50 yards on the ground but, led by Graham's 85 yards, picked up 160 yards against Newton North but it went for naught as Newton scored with 58 seconds to play to hand the Raiders their third loss in a row, 13-7, in a morning game at Veteran's Memorial Stadium.

"Graham was just outstanding. he is an ideal leader," said Asst. Coach Ken McPhee. "He was our defensive leader last year and is again this year and now that he is getting a chance on offense, he is doing just as well there. He deserves all the accolades he receives, he is as fine a player as I've ever coached and I don't see a better two-way player in our league this year."

Graham would have had an additional 50 yards and a touchdown only for a bit of bad luck early in the second period.

With the ball at midfield, Graham raced through the right side of the line and broke into the clear. With no one around him and a certain touchdown ahead, the wet ball squirted out of his hands at Newton's 35 and it was recovered by Newton's Bob Kenney.

"It was a shame this had to happen to Leo because he played such a super two-way game," McPhee said.

Head Coach Dave Burke was pleased with the greatly improved offense, led by Graham.

"We moved the ball much better than in our first two games and everyone did well on offense," he said. "Bill Dailey, Pat Carroll and Dean Zoia ran well as did Jack Brown, our junior quarterback. Brown may have solved our quarterback problem. He ran the team well. I feel much better about the quarterback situation now. And the offensive line was just great. The kids played so well today it's a shame they couldn't have won it. We are coming along and the boys are gaining experience. We have a very inexperienced team and we faced three of our toughest opponents right at the start."

"The defense did a tremendous job for the second week in a row but two missed assignments on pass plays lost the game for us," said McPhee, who coaches the defensive unit with Jack Raymer.

Hailed for their defensive play were Graham, Paul O'Sullivan, Chris Pettillo and Joe Feeney, who started his first game. Others receiving praise on defense were Rick Anderson and Tony Camillo.

Asst. Coach George Liset, delighted with the great improvement in the offensive line, singled out Dave Penzo, Kevin Doherty, Lou DiPietro, Jim Dodd, Ed Miller, John Buckley and Joe Mullen for their performances.

The Raiders took the opening kickoff and drove to Newton's 30 but were stopped. Jack Leone, who barely missed a 40-yard field goal at Milton, tried a 47-yarder and it just missed again. He had the distance but the ball went to the left.

Following a Brian O'Leary punt, Newton started on its 47 and a 24-yard pass from Dennis Berube to Royce Terrell moved the ball to North's 29. With fourth and nine, the same combination clicked for 28 yards and the first touchdown with time running out in the opening quarter. Noel Foley kicked the point.

There was no scoring in the second or third periods but late in the third quarter the Raiders staged their best drive of the year to tie the score early in the fourth period. It was mostly Graham with help from Zoia, whose dad, Pete, was an all-time North great. Daily and Brown. Brown's first pass completion to Leone brought the ball to Newton's 11 and three plays later Graham scored from the one. Leone kicked the tying point.

Late in the game O'Leary punted and Newton's Foley returned to the Raiders' 34. On third and six, North left big Keith Annesse open down the left sidelines and he grabbed Berube's pass for 28 yards to the one from where Gary Frechette, who broke the all-time Newton rushing record during the game, scored. The kick for point was blocked.

Burke was asked if he considered going for two points following the Raider score. "I thought, with seven minutes left, we had time to at least move into field goal range," he said.

Newton gained a net of 189 yards on the ground but this inked.

Newton gained a net of 189 yards on the ground but this included runs of 53 and 39 yards. It added 89 yards through the air with three for seven, and had nine first downs. North Quincy had a net of 160 yards on the ground, added 42 yards with four for nine through the air and had 11 first downs.

Bregoli Disappointed But Not Disheartened Over North Soccer

Although the North Quincy boys' soccer team has yet to win a game, Coach Paul Bregoli may be disappointed, but he's not disheartened.

"We have a lot of things going against us," Bregoli said. "We are young, have been hit by a lot of injuries and illness and the lack of a youth program in Quincy is a big handicap to us and to Quincy."

The Raiders lost three games last week, all shutouts. They turned in an excellent effort in losing to Weymouth South, 2-0, with Paul Mallory outstanding in goal. North held Weymouth until the final period. Mallory had 12 saves including several spectacular diving saves.

Bob Biagini, a senior playing his first year of soccer, had three good scoring chances, his shots going just wide including a header off a corner kick by Dave Lapsley. Bob Palma and Joe Flynn also barely missed scoring.

Bregoli was disappointed in a 4-0 loss to Cambridge Rindge Latin, describing the Raiders' performance as "flat and lackluster."

Mallory was out with the flu and Ed Ahearn, starting in goal for the first time, played well. Paul Gill did a good job in a game marred by rough play and questionable officiating.

Despite being walloped by Brockton, one of the top teams in the Suburban League, 8-0, last Friday, Bregoli felt the Raiders played one of their best games of the year. Ahearn had a fantastic day, stopping 30 shots and having some incredible saves.

Biagini played well again and just missed on a shot on which he and the goalie collided, both being slightly injured. Gary Donaghey, Lapsley, Flynn and Bill Bradley all played well.

"We need some offense and I shifted Flynn, one of the best players in the league, to forward and I think this will help our attack," Bregoli said. "Biagini has been just great. I feel if he had come out for soccer as a sophomore, he would definitely be one of the best players in the state."

North, with several players still sidelined, will host Brookline Friday at 3:30 at the field behind Veterans Memorial Stadium and next Wednesday will be at Waltham.

Jim McGuire's Quincy team is also winless following a 3-1 loss to Weymouth South Sunday despite some fine efforts. The Presidents will be at Brockton Friday and next Wednesday will be home to Weymouth North at the field behind the stadium at 3:30.

Quincy Youth Football

Panthers, Apaches, Raiders Roll

By JIM NABSTEDT

The Panthers rolled to their second straight win Sunday in the Quincy Youth Football League by handing the Elks their first defeat, 32-20, in a game played under poor field conditions. The game was not as close as the score indicates.

Bob Glidden scored twice for the Panthers, once on a 60-yard run on an end-around play and once on a 60-yard kickoff return. Mark Lamie also had two touchdowns on runs of 30 and 10 yards, and Bob Burns scored on a two-yard plunge. Kevin Caber passed to Gerry Britt for a two-point conversion.

Kevin Cameron and Chris Shaughnessy sparked defensively and Glidden and Billy Chaison blocked well.

The Apaches rolled over the Sailors, 24-0, for their second win in a row as the Sailors lost their second.

Kevin Mahoney scored first on a two-yard keeper after Jimmy McNamara had set it up with a 45-yard run. McNamara scored the second TD on a 28-yard run and Danny Ceurvels scored the third touchdown on an 11-yard run. The Apaches added all three two-point conversions.

Offensively Rick Reardon, Gino Buccella, Steve Dever, Eric Peterson, Jim McCarthy and Brian Webb were outstanding, while Eddie Page, Jim Milano, Dan Kelly and Ralph and Tony McDermott played strong defense. For the Sailors Gary Curley and Colin McLeod were standouts.

The Raiders topped the Manets, 8-0, in a hard-hitting defensive battle. Dave Norton scored the touchdown on a 20-yard run and also added the two-point conversion.

Eric Abrew, Kevin Tierney, Don Norton, Brian Walsh, Paul Nash and Larry Cunningham stood out for the Raiders and Bill Stanley, Mike O'Neil, Mark Cohen, Bob Carty and Greg Hanley played well for the Manets.

Next Sunday it will be the Raiders vs. Sailors at noon, Apaches vs. Panthers at 1:30 and Elks vs. Manets at 3 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy 21, Revere 12

Presidents, Brennan Seek 4th At Waltham

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy football coach Tom Fitzgerald calls him "the best back in the state" and Co-Capt. Tom Brennan looked like just that last week as he led the unbeaten Presidents to their third win in a row with another outstanding two-way performance.

Fitzgerald, Quincy's second-year coach, feels he'll be able to tell just how strong his team is Saturday when it goes to Waltham to face the Hawks (2-1), always one of the Presidents' toughest opponents, in a Suburban League game. Waltham defeated Brookline, 26-8, and Weymouth North, 21-12, after bowing to Burlington, 20-16.

"If there is a better back in the state than Brennan, I'd like to see him," Fitz said after the 5-7, 155-pounder, a real workhorse, gained 172 yards in 27 carries and scored his sixth touchdown in Quincy's 21-12 non-league win over Revere at soggy Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Brennan, who has gained an amazing 441 yards in three games, also turned in his usual standout defensive performance as the Presidents outlasted the Patriots of the Greater Boston League, but made things hard for themselves.

QUINCY SCORING

	TD	PAT	Total
Brennan	6	0	36
Iodice	3	0	18
Bandera	1	0	6
Austin	1	0	6
Pettinelli	1	5	5

"We should have won much easier than we did, mistakes hurt us," the veteran coach said. "Our offense was again outstanding but fumbles set up both of their touchdowns and they gave me a few more gray hairs."

Although Brennan dominated the ground game, Ed Iodice again ran well as did quarterback Dave Austin. Fullback Dan Goldrick, who continued his fine blocking, also picked up some valuable yardage.

Quincy stuck to the ground with Austin throwing only five passes and not completing any, the only department in which Revere held an edge.

The offensive line was again opening up big holes with Asst. Coach Peter Chiella singling out Howie Chadbourne for a particularly outstanding effort and also hailing Geoff Callisch, Tom Rand, Jeff Heath and Fran Duggan.

Defensively Lou Matthews had a great day with 13 tackles and he received special praise from coaches Bill Mayer and Joe Goguen. Linebacker Bill Flynn, with five tackles, also sparkled as did Mike Petrillo, Charlie McCall, Paul Martin and John Kavanaugh.

Fitzgerald was especially pleased with the way his team cut down on its penalties. "We hurt ourselves in the first two games with too many holding penalties," he said. "Today we didn't have one. The only 15-yarder we had was for clipping late in the game and it is too bad it nullified a 37-yard run by Brennan. Otherwise, he would have had more than 200 yards, which not too many schoolboy players reach."

"Also, we are improving on our important extra point conversions. We were none for three in our opener and two for five in the second game, but today Ron Pettinelli kicked three for three. This can be important in close games."

Quincy rolled up a net of 243 yards on the ground and clicked off 16 first downs. Revere, which featured some hard running backs and gained most of its yardage on outside runs, had 122 yards on the ground, 28 yards on passes (four for eight) and had nine first downs.

Quincy took the opening kickoff and marched downfield from its 36 to score on a 12-yard run by Iodice after the Presidents had picked up five first downs. Pettinelli kicked the point.

Quincy continued to dominate the first half but couldn't score again until midway in the second period after Walter Kilgallon recovered a Revere fumble at Revere's 33.

This time it was Brennan from the 11-yard line, his sixth TD of the year, and again Pettinelli kicked the point.

A fumble set up Revere's first touchdown midway in the third period. Revere's Paul Drover recovering on Quincy's 43. The Patriots picked up three first downs and Ed Santosuosso scored from this one. Martin then made a leaping interception of a pass on the try for the important two points.

Quincy received a big break on its way to its clinching touchdown. With four and six, Brennan was stopped well short of a first down, but Revere was offside and, with fourth and one, Austin faked handing off and raced unmolested around right end for 22 yards and the touchdown. Pettinelli kicked his third point in a row.

Another fumble set up Revere's second TD. Revere recovering on the Presidents' 16, just after McCall had made a great leaping pass interception. On the second play Santosuosso swept left end, was apparently stopped twice but shook loose and went the 16 yards. Another pass try for the two points was incomplete.

Another Revere threat ended with a fumble on Quincy's 19 and Quincy held the ball until the end.

North Needs Cross Country Help

North Quincy's undermanned cross country team is off to a slow start as expected, and Coach Lou Tozzi feels the Raiders are in for a lot of trouble unless more boys can be talked into joining the squad.

Tozzi had only the minimum of five boys for the first meet and North bowed to Weymouth South, 19-36.

The first Raider finisher was Mike Ricciuti in fourth place. John Barrett placed fifth, Gary Morin eighth, Gerry McCormick ninth and Bill Timmons 10th.

"We are going to have tough going due to the lack of interest,"

Tozzi said. "We are going to have to do something to revive interest in cross country in order to get back on top where we used to be."

Tozzi is acting girls' coach as no one applied for the job to replace Jeff Strungis. There is also little interest among the girls but currently running well are Mary Crehan, a junior and the only veteran; sophomores Kara Crehan and Deidre Donovan and ninth-grader Linda Kennedy.

The North teams will host Brockton, which annually have the top teams in the Suburban League and next Tuesday the Raiders and Raiderettes will run at Brookline.

● Girls' Soccer

North Defeats Cambridge, 12-0

The North Quincy girls' soccer team defeated Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 2-0, last week for its second win of the year.

Lauren Apollo and Chris Tedeschi scored the Raiderettes' goals. Denise Galewski was a defensive standout and Ann O'Hare played well at forward.

The North girls lost their next game to Brockton, a Suburban League power, 2-0, despite the fine performances of Tedeschi and Apollo.

The North junior varsity tied Brockton, 3-3, with Siobhan Corrigan scoring two goals and Susan Cahill the other.

The 2-3-1 Raiderettes will play at Brookline Friday and next Wednesday will host Waltham at O'Rourke Field at 3:30.

Coveted Challenge Cup

'Bola' Youngquist Finally Wins The Big One

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Torsten Youngquist, 75, and one of the area's most respected yachtsmen, finally did it.

After over 50 years of trying, Youngquist finally won The Big One:

The Quincy Challenge Cup, second oldest yachting challenge cup in the country.

"It was quite a thrill, and a surprise, too," said the man known to friends and fellow yachtsmen as "Bola". An ailing back had caused him to sit out most of the summer's race season.

"I hadn't been feeling well all summer," he reports. "I didn't even put it (the yacht) into the water until two weeks before the challenge cup."

Friends talked (Bola) into entering the race and the Weymouth native rustled up a crew for the annual competition. With the help of the three youngsters, Joseph Craven, John Gallagher and Richard Kehoe, all of Weymouth, Youngquist's boat, Bola IV, earned two firsts, a second place and a fifth place in the four races. The challenge cup was awarded on the basis of points earned in the races, held the weekend of Sept. 1 and 2.

Taking part in the race were 17 "Class 210" yachts - 29-foot fibreglass boats.

Victory was sweet for Youngquist, who first tried for the cup in 1922. "We've had quite a few celebrations since we won it," he said.

TORSTEN YOUNGQUIST proudly holds the Quincy Challenge Cup he's been trying to win since 1922 and finally did.

The Challenge Cup has been around since 1898, which puts it second only to the America's Cup. The sterling silver cup is now in the perpetual possession of the Quincy Yacht Club.

Valued at $600 in 1898, it now is worth several times that, Youngquist says.

Junior Baseball Tryouts Saturday trying out at noon and 12-year olds at 3.

Pee Wee B's

Quincy's Pee Wee B hockey team walloped Neponset, 7-1, sparked by George Hartford's hat trick. Kevin Zanardelli, Derek Holt, Jim Milano and Mark Simonelli had one goal apiece.

Holt had three assists and Zanardelli, Barry Miller, Pat Feeney, Jim Kane, Dave Fasano and Gerry Coughlin one each.

In Brownell Survey

Quincy MBTA Riders Score Fare Hike, Security, Schedules

Most Quincy residents would rather see an MBTA fare increase than a boost in property taxes to subsidize the system, according to a survey taken by the staff of Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy).

The survey, which was compiled from interviews taken Aug. 8, 9 and 10, at the Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy stations, also showed that:

- A fare increase of 50 per cent or more could substantially reduce ridership.

- Red line commuters are unhappy about the scheduling of trains.

- The MBTA needs to do more to promote and make available the pass program in Quincy.

- Security is still regarded as a problem at the Quincy Center station.

- Quincy commuters do not plan to make use of the new Quincy Adams station.

Brownell said the major finding of the survey is that regular riders of the MBTA, if given a choice, would prefer a fare increase over a property tax increase.

The figures were 63 per cent for a fare increase, 24 per cent for an increase in property taxes, 11 per cent for no increase at all and 2 per cent for an equal balance.

It was found that the size of any fare increase would have a significant impact on commuter use.

A total of 61 per cent said they would stop using the MBTA if there were a 100 per cent increase, 21 per cent would be turned away by a 50 per cent hike, 9 per cent at a 25 per cent boost, and 8 per cent at a 10 per cent rise.

Asked if the state should subsidize the MBTA for lower fares, 56 per cent answered in the affirmative while 44 per cent said they were against further subsidization of mass transit.

The survey also showed that there is a high degree of dissatisfaction with "T" scheduling.

If they were in the position of policy makers, the respondents said, almost 50 percent of them would change the scheduling, 12 per cent would do something about comfort and access, and 6 per cent would change the fare structure.

Only 31 per cent of the Quincy residents surveyed said they used the MBTA pass program, apparently because it is not readily accessible to them, being available only at the Washington St. station in Boston.

"I am going to recommend that the pass program be made available in Quincy to encourage the use of public transportation," said Brownell. "In addition, the 'T' should do more to educate the public to the benefits and economies that can be achieved by the pass program."

Quincy residents apparently believe that the new Quincy Adams station in South Quincy is a South Shore station rather than a Quincy one. Some 70 percent of them indicated that they will have no use for it.

Respondents at the various Quincy stations were split in their views on security.

Almost 43 per cent of the people questioned at the Quincy Center station said they felt security was inadequate. The figure was 30 per cent at the Wollaston station; 15 per cent at North Quincy. Overall, 33 per cent were dissatisfied.

"It is apparent that the Authority has to do more to bolster the public's confidence in the security area," said Brownell. He said he plans to forward survey results to Gov. Edward J. King; Barry Locke, secretary of transportation; and Robert Foster, chairman of the MBTA.

A copy will also go to the Special Commission on Transportation which is currently reviewing transportation policy on a statewide basis. Brownell is an ex officio member of the commission.

Toland Moderates Guidance Panel

Patricia Toland, vice-chairwoman of the School Committee, organized and moderated a panel discussion at the New England Personnel and Guidance Conference in Boston recently.

The theme of the panel was how School Committee members view the role of guidance in the schools. Representatives of the Braintree, Dover-Sherborn, Winchester and Cambridge school boards took part, along with Mrs. Toland.

"The general consensus was that guidance is going to have to grow into new roles if they are to justify their budget expenditures," said Mrs. Toland.

Tells Teachers, Committee

Tax Hike Even Without Pay Raises, Tobin Warns

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Mayor Arthur Tobin turned the School Committee's last meeting into a classroom, giving the board and about 400 schoolteachers a crash course in the city's finances.

The bottom line, said City Auditor Charles Shea, city auditor, is that "there is going to be a tax rate increase this year, unless the manna comes down from heaven, or somewhere."

Even without funding pay raises for city employees, the city is facing a hike of about $20 per thousand, Tobin said. Giving in to the wage demands of all 14 city employees' unions would add another $22 to the rate, Tobin claimed.

In addition, the city has to borrow more and more money to pay its bills, although anticipated receipts aren't increasing.

"If we keep headed in this direction, we won't make May and June," Tobin said.

The city is now putting together an offer for the teachers and other city employees, Tobin said.

"There will be an offer on the table," said the mayor. "You may not be happy with what we offer, but that's it. That's not a threat, or a 'take it or leave it'."

The teachers, who marched from the National Guard Armory to the School Committee meeting, arrived about 45 minutes into the meeting.

Before they showed up, Tobin had blasted the committee for its attempt to force him to fund pay raises for three city unions.

The committee voted at its Sept. 12 meeting to send Tobin a supplemental budget request for $135,000 to fund pay raises for custodians, teacher aides and secretaries in the school system. Those agreements were negotiated after the school department's $33 million budget was approved by the city council this spring.

Tobin told the School Committee at its Aug. 8 meeting he would not accept any supplemental budgets requests. The committee would either have to renegotiate those raises or take the $315,000 out of its existing budget, he said.

But, at the Sept. 12 meeting, William LaForest of the custodians' union told the committee that his group would file a collective bargaining grievance with the state Labor Relations Commission because the custodians' contract, signed July 1, had not yet been implemented. The committee then voted to ask Tobin to fund all three contracts.

That budget request, delivered to Tobin's office on Sept. 14, was returned to the school department in about an hour, the mayor said.

Tobin called the budget request "an attempt to embarrass the office of the mayor" and said the committee was "trying to win certain favors with certain groups."

If the committee voted to return the request to him, Tobin promised to return it "twice as fast as the first came back."

"If you don't understand English, send it back. The couriers will meet in the Bargain Center parking lot that's how fast it will be returned."

"If you want to fund the contract, fund it. You have the right, the authority and the power to fund it. Don't be part of a sham or a fraud. I won't be part of it. I never asked the members of this committee not to live up to your responsibilities; I never asked you not to bargain in good faith. All I asked was that you not negotiate in a vacuum."

"Is this what you want for this city's children?" Tobin asked, referring to the contract turmoil. "Is this what you want for this city's residents? A government run by threats and intimidation?"

"I will not be intimidated. I will not be coerced. I will not be hit over the head and I will not be demanded to do things."

Midway through Tobin's remarks, the horde of teachers arrived and rapidly filled up the Quincy High "method center", to which the meeting had been moved in anticipation of the crowd.

The committee's rules of order were suspended to allow Robert Garner, president of the teachers' union, to speak.

Garner called the teachers' salary request an immediate four-percent increase and a three-percent raise six months later "not unreasonable."

Furthermore, Garner said, "it wouldn't cost a dime" for School Committee negotiators to bend on some of the non-salary items now in dispute.

"I don't think we should be asked to forego a pay raise or take a 10 percent cut while many large corporations and wealthy individuals pay no taxes at all," Garner told Tobin.

This claim was "incorrect," the mayor said, adding that his administration has collected $600,000 in unpaid back excise taxes.

With that, Tobin, assisted by City Auditor Charles Shea and Treasurer Robert Foy, launched into a 20-minute discussion of the city's present fiscal crunch. The presentation was complete with the appropriate figures marked on large sheets of paper, stacked on an easel.

Meetings between negotiators for the School Committee and the teachers' union are continuing, with the help of a state-appointed mediator.

School committee member John Sullivan said that, unless negotiations with the teachers were settled at the board's next meeting, "I will introduce a public motion on a suggestion to break this deadlock."

Sullivan later said he was "not at liberty" to discuss what sort of motion he would try to introduce.

However, Patricia Ioland, School Committee vice-chairwoman, said any motion Sullivan introduced relating to teachers' salaries or other contract conditions would be ruled out of order. Sullivan's daughter is a teacher in the Quincy school system. According to the state's conflict of interest statute, Sullivan may not vote or introduce any motion on the teachers' contract.

5% Drop

School Enrollment Down 652 Students

The official enrollment in Quincy public schools' regular day programs continue to drop, showing a five-percent decline from last year.

According to figures scheduled to be presented to the School Committee Wednesday by School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon, enrollment has dropped by 652 students.

Total enrollment in the regular day programs fell from 13,552 to 12,900 between Oct. 1 1978 and Oct. 2 of this year.

These figures do not include Quincy Junior College enrollment, which is also off by 102 students, or Adult and Community Education classes, which increased by 113 students.

Enrollment in high school and other secondary programs dropped by 46 students (3,767 to 3,721) while junior high enrollment fell by 163 (3,404 to 3,241).

The biggest drop, however, came in pre-school and elementary classes, where about a seven percent decline is recorded. Enrollment there fell by 446 pupils, from 6,381 to 5,938.

The effects of the declining birth rate is especially evident in the elementary classes, where the first, second and third grade totals (653, 762 and 788) are about two-thirds the size of the largest class Grade 11 (1,179 students).

Declining enrollments in elementary classes has led the school department to take such steps as "reduction in force" (RIF) layoffs of teachers and combining different grade levels into a single class in some schools.

Contract Awarded For Wood Rd. Connector

The MDC has reversed an earlier decision and awarded a $15,000 contract to William P. Capone Co. of Rosindale to build the long-sought Wood Rd. Connector in West Quincy and Braintree.

The 125-foot roadway would link Wood Rd., Braintree, to Chickatawbut Rd. in the Blue Hills Reservation and ease traffic problems on Willard St., West Quincy.

Rep. Michael W. Morrissey said the connection would enable motorists traveling north on Willard St. to get on Chickatawbut Rd. without making a U-turn around the islands.

It's Official: Election Nov. 6

The City Council has officially set the city election for Tuesday, Nov. 6.

It was necessary under the law for the Council to set the election date last week and councillors also voted to use the same polling places that were used in the preliminary election.

'Discussing Matters With Others'

Tobin Reopens Talks With 3 Union Locals

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Negotiations have been reopened with three locals of two city unions, Mayor Arthur Tobin said Tuesday.

Those locals are the ones which signed contracts with tax-cap reopener clauses, which allowed the city to void the original agreements and renegotiate if tax cap legislation made funding impossible, said Tobin.

As far as talks with the other 12 city unions, Tobin said, "we are discussing matters with them, but not offers."

The unions which signed reopener contracts are Local 880, which represents hospital technicians and Local 1139, which represents public works and other hospital workers.

Offers have been discussed with those unions for "two or three weeks," Tobin said.

On other labor fronts, the city employees' boycott of downtown banks and stores seems to be having little or no effect.

"United City Unions," which claims to represent all 4200 city employees, has asked them to withdraw all funds from seven downtown banks, beginning last Thursday and boycott all downtown stores, starting last Friday.

The boycott was ushered in by the appearance early Friday of about 35 cars bearing "Boycott" signs, which occupied almost all parking spaces on Hancock St. between School and Granite Sts. All of those cars were eventually ticketed for meter violations.

Over 200 employees took part in the boycott picketing last Friday.

Managers at three downtown banks report one withdrawal related to the boycott at one bank, none at another and "a few" at a third. A spokesman for the third bank said that company could not release figures on withdrawals.

In addition, spokesmen for several retail stores report little effect from the boycott thus far. Union leaders reportedly have claimed that as much as $2 million in cashed city paychecks and account withdrawals were taken out of Quincy banks last week by the employees.

The average weekly city payroll is $1.2 million, according to City Auditor Charles Shea.

John Keefe, president of the Hospital, Library and Public Employees union, has been the leading figure in organizing protests against Mayor Tobin's negotiating position.

Tobin said Tuesday that Keefe's public statements on the city's labor problems have been "a bundle of misinformation."

Keefe was unavailable at press time for comment on Tobin's remark or for a report on the boycott's effect.

Tobin Seeks Transfer Of Half Million To Pay For Court-Ordered Revaluation

By TOM HENSHAW

Mayor Tobin will go before the City Council Monday, Oct. 15, with a transfer order stripping various budget accounts of a half million dollars in order to pay for a court-ordered revaluation of all the property in the city.

"I am not asking the City Council to appropriate any new funds," said Tobin. "The various city departments are just going to have to cut back on the funds they have now."

There were indications, however, that at least half of the needed $500,000 will come from the interest that has been accumulating on revenue-sharing funds held by the city.

Supreme Court Justice Herbert P. Wilkins last week ordered the city to hire a commercial appraisal firm for a "complete and timely" revaluation not later than Nov. 19 or it will be done for the city and the money deducted from state aid.

Chief Assessor John Comer conferred Tuesday with potential bidders on the revaluation contract. Asst. City Solicitor Dennis E. Harrington said bids will be opened Oct. 30 and, hopefully, the contract will be awarded after the Nov. 5 Council meeting.

Firms that attended the meeting were Systems Technology Associates, Concord; Sabre Systems and Services, Dayton, Ohio; Robert J. Finnegan and Associates, Acton; and J. M. Clemenshaw Co., Cleveland.

Comer said a representative of A.B.S. Computer Services of Quincy also sat in on the meeting since a computer service will be needed later to keep valuations up to date.

Tobin said that failure of the City Council to act on his transfer order "will hold the city of Quincy in contempt of court" and lead to a state takeover of the revaluation process.

"The court will direct the Department of Revenue to act," he said, "and they will take it out of the hands of local officials and we will have no say on it whatsoever."

If the state takes over, he said, there could be a lapse of time between revaluation and implementation of classification when the entire city could be taxed on the basis of 100 per cent valuation.

New Parking Regulations Sought For Russell Park

The Traffic Commission has proposed changes in the parking regulations on Russell Park, Quincy Center, to aid doctors and other professional people who maintain offices on the street.

The City Council last week sent the proposal to the Ordinance Committee for a hearing after Daniel G. Raymondi, the ward councillor for Russell Park, objected that he had not been apprised of it.

The new rules would prohibit parking on both sides of Russell Park 240 feet easterly from Hancock St. and limit parking on the rest of the street to two hours.

"There has been a long-standing problem there because the people using the MBTA park and walk to the station," said Raymondi. "Many professional people need the parking spaces in front of their homes and offices."

Some Disintegrate Building Inspector Warns On Wood Stoves

By TOM HENSHAW

Building Inspector Allan F. McDonald is concerned over the growing number of wood stoves that are being installed in Quincy to help meet the expected heat crisis this winter.

Some of them have been known to disintegrate at high temperatures, he said.

And, to compound the concern, the state has declared a moratorium until Jan. 1 on the issuance of building permits for the stoves, thus clearing the way for installation of uncertified wood burners.

The Building Inspection Department is currently preparing a letter to Mayor Tobin urging that the city refuse to recognize the moratorium, a move that is permitted under law.

"There is nothing to fear from a good stove properly installed," said McDonald, "but uncertified stoves and those that are improperly installed, there is plenty to fear."

McDonald said a gas-fired boiler in the home will run to about 400 degrees in temperature and an oil burner will go up to from 400 to 800 degrees.

"These wood stoves go up to 1,600 and sometimes 2,000 degrees," he said. "Some of the stoves that they have been testing actually disintegrated at those temperatures."

Quincy, he said, had three fires last year from wood stoves that were "bootlegged" into the city.

The reason for the state moratorium on building permits for stoves is not clear but there is speculation that Gov. King was pressured into the move by large inventories of uncertified stoves held by distributors.

The growing popularity of wood stoves is unquestioned.

Assistant Building Inspector Taylor Ahearn went to Boston last week to get a copy of the latest edition of the state's Wood Burning Stove Installation Guide and was told the entire edition was gone in 36 hours.

Ahearn said the approved stoves carry a label put on by any one of six testing laboratories or by one of the associations that have established national codes.

"I won't approve an uncertified stove," said Ahearn.

"When people point out to me that there is a moratorium, I say, 'Fine, I'm going to give you an approval that this stove has been approved by reason of the moratorium established by Gov. King. If your insurance company will accept that, fine.'"

"They used to say that if everyone in Quincy, on a given cold night, were to light his fireplace, there wouldn't be enough fire apparatus in Metropolitan Boston to come here and put them out. That was before wood-burning stoves.

"You can imagine how serious the situation is now."

'Hardgoods Supermarket' Opening On McGrath Highway

A "hardgoods supermarket" is opening on McGrath Highway where the New England Telephone Co. used to repair its trucks.

Sheldon Woolf, president of National Hardgoods Distributors Inc., announced Tuesday that the 18th NHD store in New England will open Tuesday, Oct. 16.

It will have a staff of up to 24 people selling a variety of more than 10,000 items geared for the do-it-yourself market in nine different departments on 17,000 square feet of sales space.

Earl L. Woolf, vice president of NHD Inc., said the company has spent some $400,000 on building renovations, which included turning the front from McGrath Highway to the Stop & Shop area on Southern Artery.

Mayor Tobin said the NHD store "is part of our overall economic development program, not only to bring in new development but to refurbish and renovate many of the vacant stores."

Next week, he said, announcement will be made of the filling of the former A & P store at Quincy Ave. and Scammel St. and, the week after that, the filling of the old Gilchrist building with three new stores.

Sheldon Woolf said the announcement of the Quincy store came on the same day that the company was opening new outlets in Randolph and Melrose. There is another store in South Weymouth.

"We try to run a neighborhood store with a contemporary thrust," said Woolf. "People can shop in the neighborhood and get as good a value as they can get in any mass merchandising store."

"In our stores you can buy an individual wing nut, nails by the pound or rope by the foot. We will cut glass for you and custom mix your paint."

"We will go out of our way to accommodate a customer, something that is missing in this plastic world where everything is thrown at people."

Earl Woolf said the NHD store is competitive with discount houses but is not really a discount house itself.

"I use the terminology when people ask me about pricing that we sell at the lowest possible price," he said. "We not only capitalize on the strengths of discount stores but make up the difference in their weaknesses."

"We can tailor a store to an individual community. Our merchandise is not canned. This is the way that we are different from stores like K-Mart and Zayre's."

The staff will be especially trained to advise customers, he said, even to the extent of hiring tradespeople like electricians or carpenters.

The old phone company building has been vacant for about three years.

Impasse Declared

Teachers Talks To Fact-Finding

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Negotiations between city teachers and the School Committee will soon go to the fact-finding stage, after being certified as an impasse by the state-appointed mediator.

The impasse was declared by mediator Elliot Klitzman after the Tuesday, Oct. 2 negotiating session.

According to Mary Curtin, chairwoman of the Quincy Educational Association's negotiating committee, the impasse was declared after a compromise settlement proposed by Klitzman was rejected by School Committee negotiators at that session.

But School Committeewoman Patricia Ioland, a member of the board's negotiating committee says that's news to her.

"There was no compromise proposed, that I can remember," said Mrs. Ioland. "If there was, I'd like to know what it was. A compromise means people bending a little and nobody is bending at all."

The state Labor Relations Commission will prepare a list of potential fact-finders, and the two sides must agree upon a mutually acceptable choice, said Mrs. Ioland. A fact-finder is usually chosen within 10 days to two weeks after the impasse is certified, she said.

Fact-finding is one of several steps that negotiations must pass through under the Labor Relations Commission regulations. In this step, the fact-finder listens to each side's presentation on the issues, studies the points of difference and proposes a compromise solution. This solution is non-binding and can be rejected by either side.

If no agreement is reached through fact-finding, the talks go into arbitration—a similar process that also results in a non-binding suggested solution.

Arbitration is the final step in the process and the two parties are sent back to the negotiating table to begin anew if there is no settlement.

Differences in the talks center around a pay raise for teachers, the method of conducting "reduction in force" (RIF) layoffs and a school committee proposal that teachers work an extra 45 minutes each day.

$107,610 In New Wiring

The city's Wire Department issued 115 permits for work costing an estimated $107,610 in September.

According to William H. Pitts, wire inspector, 172 total inspections were made, 12 defects noted, $1,512 in fees collected and 42 Mass Electric Company certificates of approval issued. There was one fire call and 14 reinspections in September.

McCauley Proposes Audible Traffic Signal At City Hall

City Councillor Francis X. McCauley would like to see the traffic lights on Hancock St. in front of City Hall reinforced by an audible traffic signal.

"People are just whizzing through the traffic signals constantly," he told the Council last week. "I understand audible signals have been very helpful in similar situations in Chelsea and Everett."

McCauley's suggestion is one of several proposals being considered by the Traffic Commission. Others include:

Widening a portion of Sea St. opposite the Police Station in order to facilitate traffic flow coming from Houghs Neck and Merrymount.

"If you ever had the misfortune of coming down there in the rush hour there is a little jog in the street that prohibits three lanes from flowing freely," said McCauley.

"The middle lane blocks out

Life Might Be Beautiful If You Never Had To Borrow Money

Yes, if you had enough money to meet all your needs at all times, life could be much simpler for you. But most of us do not enjoy this financial freedom. For instance, the biggest purchase most of us make in our lifetime—the buying of a home—usually requires bank help with a mortgage.

There are, of course, other financial needs you may face from time to time, whether buying a car, remodeling your home, acquiring a yacht or just consolidating a lot of bills.

The Quincy Co-operative Bank would like to help you with your small loan problems. We hope you never have to borrow but when you do, don't borrow more than you need. And if you have a savings account with us, remember that you can get a passbook loan for only two percent interest above the passbook rate. That's the lowest interest you will ever pay on a loan unless your wealthy aunt gives you an interest free loan.

If a passbook loan is not possible, try our small loan services where we do our best to meet the needs of all credit worthy applicants. You may find that a small loan tailored exactly to your needs will solve your present financial problem. Call or visit the Consumer Loan Centers at our Main Office or at our Branches.

Josiah Quincy, for whom our Bank was named, founded co-operative banking to help people acquire homes. We know he would like what we are doing for people needing small loans.

Barbara DiNatale To Speak On Violence Against Women

Police Detective Barbara DiNatale will speak on violence against women in the first of a series of programs of interest to women Wednesday, Oct. 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room of the new City Hall.

The programs, which will be conducted monthly, are sponsored by the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women.

Miss DiNatale will explore the legal, medical and emotional aspects of street violence against women, focusing on how to handle such problems as mugging, rape and physical attacks.

She will give practical hints to women on what to do if they suspect they are being followed, how to handle a potential attacker and what to do if an attack actually occurs.

Resources available to women after they are attacked, dealing with the resulting trauma and feelings of isolation, confusion and embarrassment, also will be discussed.

"The increase in the number of rapes and muggings is of great concern to many women," said Elizabeth Van Twuyver, chairman of the task force that organized the program.

"Women do not know what preventive measures to take, how to respond to an assailant and, as a result, could possibly aggravate the situation.

"We feel that every woman should know how to handle this type of crisis, regardless of age. If women are better equipped to deal with the problem, they may also help to deter this type of crime."

The program, the first in a series of five monthly meetings on different subjects of interest to women, is open to the public.

In addition to Ms. Van Twuyver, members of the task force include Sarah Phillips, Toby Felton, Dorothy Poetrie, Carol Neitlich, Helen Sullivan and Adrienne Clarke.

SALT IS NO SOLUTION

While many home first-aid manuals recommend salt water as a way to induce vomiting when a child has swallowed a potential poison, today's pediatric specialists warn that the cure may be tragically worse than the disease.

Saturated salt solutions have been used for centuries in China to commit suicide. So it is not surprising that salt solutions can kill a small child if given in too big a dose.

Perhaps one of the most widely known salt-poisoning tragedies occurred in Binghamton, N.Y. A number of deaths resulted when salt was inadvertently substituted for sugar in the formulas used for infants in the hospital nursery.

Salt is perfectly safe when used in the normal manner at the dining table. But to bring on vomiting, syrup of ipecac works better and is much safer.

Gems have fascinated people for centuries. Not too long ago, some of them were held to have magical properties. For instance, sapphires represented honesty. Supposedly, these magic sapphires would lose their color and turn dark if their owner told a lie. Diamonds represented purity, so a diamond wearer was supposed to be pure. But I don't know what I would think of a person wearing a dark sapphire and a sparkling diamond. Actually, I probably would concern myself most with the beauty of the stones and settings. If you're concerned about the quality of the jewelry you wish to purchase be sure to go to a reputable jeweler, like us at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. We have a saying in our business - "If you don't know jewelry, know your jeweler." Hours: Mon. thru Sat. 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

No Rush For Pay Cuts

You'll be interested in knowing it's still perfectly safe to walk through City Hall — old and annex.

There's positively no danger of being run down by speeding upper-salaried city employees enroute to City Treasurer Robert Foy's office to volunteer a pay cut.

Mayor Arthur Tobin last week offered to take at least a five per cent slice off his $25,000 salary and suggested that each city worker "making a damn good salary" follow suit.

It failed to touch off anything resembling a stampede. In fact, only three department heads have stepped forward thus far:

Public Works Commr. James Ricciuti who earns $32,730. City Auditor Charles Shea ($30,434) and Rocco Rocuzzo, who was making $20,000 as purchasing agent this week begins his new job as assistant director of operations at Quincy City Hospital at about $25,000.

"They came to me and told me I could count on them," Tobin said. "They said they realized things are tough and were willing to take a five per cent cut or a maximum $1,000 if others would."

Tobin says he doesn't expect the rank and file city employee to take a cut because things are tough enough for them now.

"But I'd be happy to accept — with appreciation — any offer from anyone making as much as me or more to take the cut," he says.

Getting someone these days to take a pay reduction regardless of the size of their salary would seem to go far above and beyond the call of duty.

With the way things are going it may not be too long before we'll have to put a down payment on a loaf of bread and promise to pay the balance off (at 11 per cent interest) within six months.

DURING THE NEAR two years they worked together, Mayor Tobin and his executive secretary, George Riley, became close friends.

They no doubt had disagreements now and then but usually agreed, often thinking alike.

In fact, to give you an idea of the togetherness between the pair, on Riley's last day on the job he and His Honor both turned up at the office sporting a blue blazer, gray flannel slacks, black shoes, blue shirt and blue striped tie.

O'CONNELL

SUCCESS STORY: Peter O'Connell (O'Connell Brothers Construction Co.) and past president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association is now the 10th largest taxpayer in Quincy. And, he just celebrated his 35th birthday.

HERE'S ONE: A city employee went to Mayor Tobin's office before joining the boycott picket line last week. "It's nothing personal," she assured His Honor. Then she asked him if she could leave some personal belongings with him to watch for her while she picketed. "Sure," he said. And he kept an eye on them until she returned.

DID YOU KNOW that Ron Della Chiesa of WGBH, one of Boston radio's top music program personalities, is a Quincy boy and a member of one of its most illustrious political families. Ron's father, the late Aldo Della Chiesa, was a Ward 3 City Councillor and his uncle, the late Amelio Della Chiesa, was mayor for 12 years under both Plan E and Plan A — the longest served by any mayor. Ron, incidentally, is teaching a music course at Quincy Junior College.

CONGRESSMAN John Anderson (R-Ill.) will speak at a South Shore Chamber of Commerce breakfast Tuesday, Oct. 23, (7:44 a.m.) at the Lantana, Randolph. Anderson will be the third presidential candidate presented by the Chamber since May. The others: Ronald Reagan and Howard Baker. Anderson is the third ranking Republican in the U.S. House.

A WINE AND cheese reception fund-raiser for School Committee Vice Chairwoman Patricia Toland is set for Monday, Oct. 15 from 8 to 11 p.m. at the Presidents Golf Course, West Squantum St., North Quincy. Tickets ($5 per) may be obtained from Mary Carey, 95 Reservoir Rd. (472-5480).

AND A FUND-RAISER for Michael Kelly, Ward 6 City Council Candidate, will be held tomorrow (Friday) from 8 p.m. to midnight at Morrisette Legion Post. Tickets are available at the door or may be obtained by calling Kathy Minukas at 328-4489.

New Rules Crack Down On High School Truancy

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Two of the city's high schools are trying a new method of combating truancy and "cut" classes, which have been on the increase in recent years.

Students at Quincy High School and Quincy Vocational Technical School with seven unauthorized absences in a single course in a quarter will flunk that course. In addition, students who "cut" a class will, after an initial warning, receive a five-point grade reduction for each unauthorized absence.

The measures, instituted by Quincy High principal Lloyd Hill and Vo-Tech principal Lawrence Babin, went into effect at the beginning of the school year.

They were necessary, said Hill, because, "the traditional methods of dealing with truancy really haven't been able to make the point."

The old system involved warnings, leading to conferences with the student's parents, leading to a possible suspension. This system is still in effect at North Quincy High.

But the number of unauthorized absences have increased in recent years, while the average daily attendance has decreased, says Hill.

Average attendance has been declining for several years, he said, and is now under 90 percent of the school's enrollment.

"This is still better than most other systems, but not as good as it could be," Hill said.

The increased number of "cut" classes and school days isn't merely a Quincy problem though.

"It's a symptom of our society," Hill says. "It's a national problem."

It's still too early to tell if the system will actually cut into truancy and other attendance problems, he said, but September class attendance has been "very good."

Coordinators of the contests are H. Hobart Holly, historian and former president of the Quincy Historical Society and John Harrington, coordinator of social studies for Quincy public schools. School committee vice-chairwoman Patricia Toland and Miss Sheila McIntyre, representing the Constitution Bicentennial Committee, are co-chairwomen of the contest, which is being run in cooperation with the Constitution Bicentennial Committee and the Quincy public schools.

British Labor Leader At School Seminars

Robert Smith, an officer of the General and Municipal Workers' Union in England, will appear at seminars at Quincy High School and the Vo-Tech School tomorrow (Friday).

Smith, who is on a tour of the United States to meet union leaders, academicians and government officials, also will confer with School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon.

He has scheduled other stops in New York and in Grand Island and Omaha, Neb., but Quincy will be the only sch. of system visited.

Smith will be taken on a guided tour of the Vo-Tech School by Gerald Gherardi, counsellor, and the seminar will be arranged with social studies students of George Smith.

He is in Quincy under the auspices of the Center for International Visitors Program of Boston and Michael Hurley, director of Project LINC in Quincy.

Re: 'Quincy On The Move'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We all should endorse the fine work done by the Mayor, Planning Director and Planning Department on their success in negotiating for the new 10-story office building (with Campanella Industries and Stop and Shop). This development is identical to what was done at the Prudential Center in Boston which certainly brought that whole area back to life, which is so obvious.

It is a healthy, financially strong and reliable approach to preventing further decay in Quincy Center and is the keystone to bringing new life to our fine city.

It will create from 500 - 700 new jobs in downtown Quincy!

Call your City Councillor and let him know you support this development and ask him to do the same. (At once).

They Support Boycott

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Have you heard about Quincy, the city of Presidents? Did you know it is starting a terrible precedent? Our mayor creates appointments, programs and high raises for only those who give him votes and unwarranted praises.

For the North Quincy High School, Bicentennial, and street paving, there is plenty of money, but for city workers, the future outlook is far from sunny. Look at unfunded contracts - signed but not honored - isn't that curious, no wonder city workers with families to support are extremely furious. The mayor makes speeches to scare us, we know, but he doesn't have any answers for OUR financial woes.

So come picket and boycott, leave the TV on the shelf, come out and 'boycott and support' yourself.

Praises Sun For Coverage Of Pope's Visit

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I wish to commend you and your staff for the excellent coverage that your paper gave on the occasion of the visit of John Paul II. It was certainly a historic visit and your paper will be a source of reference material with regard to the Pope's visit to Boston.

Once again you have lived up to your reputation of keeping the citizens of Quincy informed of events going on in their community.

Best wishes for continued success and excellent reporting.

A Special 'Thank You'

Lincoln Hancock Third Graders Present Sun With Liberty House

Even though they weren't old enough to take part, a third-grade class at the Lincoln Hancock School still wanted to do their part in observing the Quincy Sun's Constitution Bicentennial Poster and Essay Contest.

So, the 18 students in Miss Diane Willard's class constructed a model of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace, where the state constitution was drafted in 1779. The class presented the "Liberty House" to Sun editor and publisher Henry Bosworth in appreciation of The Sun's sponsorship of the poster and essay contest for Quincy fourth, fifth and sixth graders, and for the Sun's coverage of school activities.

The three-foot high, two-foot wide, foot-and-a-half deep model is now on display in the front window of The Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Sq.

The members of Miss Willard's class are Steven Acorn, Michael Brown, Kenneth Caldwell, Donna Clements, Paul DellaBarba, George DiBona, Ennio Eleuteri, David Gardiner, Robert Grant, Julie Jankard, Mary Jenkins, Craig Keefe, Lisa Kelley, Todd Kimmel, John Little, Kristin Marshall, Robert Neal and Mary Vo.

Mrs. Joan Picard, member of the school committee, is student teacher of the class.

The students covered the Liberty House exterior with pictures and statements illustrating the importance of the state constitution.

These include drawings of important persons such as John Adams and Thomas Jefferson and events in American history and a "class constitution" listing students' rights and responsibilities.

Responsibilities included "no hitting, no running, being responsible for your own crayons and work, talk softly, sharing and cooperating, do what you're told and do not make fun of people."

The students' rights are "sharpening pencils, going to 'the basement' and talking softly."

The students spent parts of three days working on the project. Bosworth thanked them for their thoughtful gift and told them they all deserved an "A Plus". He presented them with copies of the Sun's Aug. 30 supplement on the state Constitution Bicentennial celebration.

Suit Proposed Over Dump Nuisance

City Food Inspector Clarence Edwards proposed that Quincy sue the city of Boston for maintaining garbage and refuse nuisances on Spectacle Island and in the Neponset dump.

"The city of Boston continually dumps rubbish at the Neponset dump and raw garbage at Spectacle Island," he told a meeting of the Squantum Community Association.

"When the dump is on fire, rats swim at ebb tide to North Quincy, causing much damage in that area. Rats from Spectacle Island also invade Squantum periodically and are a menace to health and property."

HOSPITAL BEEFS UP

Eight thousand pounds of prime 4-H beef, purchased by the city at 41 cents a pound on the hoof at an Omaha, Neb., auction to relieve the meat shortage at City Hospital, arrived in Boston en route to Quincy.

Meat supplies were so short in Quincy that Mayor Charles A. Ross established a system by which meat could be channeled to ailing residents through a doctor's prescription.

QUINCY EDGES BRAINTREE

Commissioners Defended On Court Space Issue

Norfolk County commissioners have taken exception to remarks attributed to Rep. Royall H. Switzer (R-Wellesley) that they inaccurately estimated the size of the Dedham courthouse space rented to the state.

As a result, it was said, the state had underfunded court costs so badly that Quincy could be assessed an additional $209,929 to cover the shortfall.

Switzer, an advocate of court takeover by the state, said the state set a low rental fee of $1.42 per square foot in the first year of court reform because commissioners inaccurately measured the space.

A more acceptable rate, it was said, would be between $8 and $9 per square foot.

"The real reason for the inadequate funding for rental of county space," said Commissioner George B. McDonald of Quincy, "was that the appropriation was cut from $13 million to $4 million."

"An extensive detailed report on actual square footage had been submitted by the commissioners earlier this year to Judge Arthur Mason, chief administrative justice of the state court system."

"In fact, in May, Judge Mason's legal counsel, Michael F. Edgerton, stated in a letter to the Norfolk County commissioners that the chief justice's office appreciated the time and effort spent developing that thorough and professional document."

Commissioner David C. Ahearn of Norwood charged that under the first year of state control the cost of the county court system ballooned from less than $80 million to more than $100 million.

He called it "an absolute fiscal disgrace."

"We have demonstrated know-how and experience in keeping costs down," said Commissioner Chairman James J. Collins of Milton. "The court system should be returned to the counties where it belongs and we support legislation to do just that."

Free Denture Clinics For Seniors Start Monday

The first of 11 free denture screening clinics for senior citizens of Quincy will be held Monday, Oct. 15, at 9 a.m. in the J. F. Kennedy Health Center, 1120 Hancock St.

The City Council recently appropriated $4,000 to operate the pilot program, which Mayor Tobin calls the first of its kind in the state.

Mrs. Marion Andrews, executive director of the Council on Aging, is working on the program in cooperation with Dr. James Will of the South Shore District Dental Society.

Other clinics will be held at Oceanview, Pagnano Towers, 1000 Southern Artery, Sawyer Towers, Lincoln Hancock School, Granite Place, Tobin Towers, the Atlantic Neighborhood Center and First Church of Squantum.

The Houghs Neck Congregational Church is under consideration as the site for an additional clinic.

Schedules will be announced later.

Senior citizens interested in making appointments to have their dentures screened should call Mrs. Lee Zibrowsky at the Council on Aging, 1 Cliveden St., 773-1380, extensions 243 or 244.

The Quincy Method Special Education Programs: Continuing Excellence

By DR. PATRICIA B. DEL-VAL, COORDINATOR

WHO IS THE SPECIAL EDUCATION STUDENT?

Special education students in the Quincy Public Schools are very different from each other. Although many may have similar needs, each is an individual and as such, has an individual program plan.

There are, however, three generalizations that can be made about all special needs students in Quincy:

- Each is certified under Massachusetts law as a student "in need of special education services."
- Each has an IEP (Individual Education Plan) written for him/her based upon his/her individual needs.
- Each will receive the precise services, instruction, materials, etc. as prescribed for him/her in the IEP.

WHAT ARE THE LEGAL MANDATES?

Massachusetts has a comprehensive special education law known as Chapter 766. It provides for the equal education of any student:

- Who is between 3 and 21 years of age,
- Who does not have a high school diploma or its equivalent, and
- Who is in need of special education services.

The Quincy Public Schools has provided excellent programs for special education youngsters for many years prior to the implementation of Chapter 766 in 1974. Since that time, it has continued to expand its services to comply with state and federal mandates, and to meet the needs of all students who qualify under the Regulations of Chapter 766.

WHAT IS A TEAM EVALUATION?

The TEAM evaluation process is the procedure by which special needs students are identified. A written request for a TEAM evaluation mailed to the principal of the child's school by a parent, teacher, court officer, guidance counselor or physician will initiate the process. Each Quincy school has a TEAM Chairperson whose responsibility it is to meet with the parents of a child referred for a TEAM evaluation in order to explain the process and to get parental consent for testing. No TEAM evaluation can proceed without parental consent.

The testing to be done by specialists for the TEAM evaluation must be completed within 30 school days.

A full TEAM evaluation will include the following assessments of the child:

- Educational history
- Medical Assessment
- Classroom teacher assessment
- Educational testing
- Social assessment
- Psychological assessment
- Other testing as necessary

An intermediate TEAM evaluation includes fewer assessments than listed above. An intermediate evaluation cannot be completed without a parental waiver of a full TEAM evaluation.

When the individual diagnostic testing has been completed, the TEAM evaluation meeting is scheduled. Parents are encouraged to attend this important meeting. A full TEAM evaluation meeting will include the TEAM Chairperson, school principal, classroom teacher, special needs teacher, guidance counselor, school nurse, psychologist, and the child's parents.

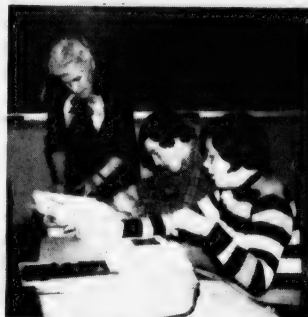

At the meeting, the participants:

- Share the results of the testing completed.
- Determine if the child is in need of special education services, and if so,
- Write an IEP (Individual Education Plan) to meet his/her individual needs.

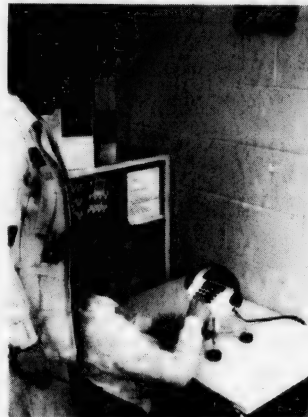

The IEP is sent to the parents and with their written approval, the prescribed program can be implemented.

WHAT PROGRAMS ARE AVAILABLE FOR STUDENTS?

The intent of Chapter 766 and the philosophy of the Quincy Public Schools with regard to special education students is "mainstreaming". To the greatest extent possible, each student should have his/her needs met in the regular education program. The following are examples of program options available to special needs students within the Quincy Public Schools.

THESE STUDENTS ARE Special Education students in the Quincy Public Schools. An evaluation TEAM has determined that they are "in need of special education services." Richard and Joe are working in a resource room on a language skills program. David is working with the special education teacher on a mathematics assignment in a way which best meets his learning style.

- Regular classroom program with monitoring
- Regular classroom program with support services outside of the classroom for up to 25% of the school day
- Regular classroom program with support services outside of the classroom for 25-60% of the school day
- Substantially Separate Classroom Program
- Home Program

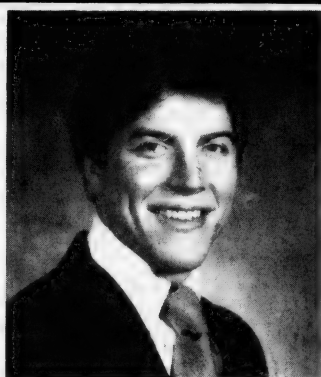

WHAT IS THE TOTAL PROGRAM?

The key to the success of the special education youngster's program is the communication between the special education personnel providing services, the regular education teachers working with the child, and the parents. A liaison person is assigned on the IEP for each student. That person shares written progress reports with parents and is the first person parents should call if they have questions regarding their child's program. The liaison person is responsible also for communication to all school staff regarding the needs of the special education child.

Students are integrated in regular education to the greatest extent possible in the Quincy Public Schools. Communication helps to ensure that the integration is successful. A special education youngster's program is not only the services he/she may receive from special education staff, but rather the total, consistent program (with continuing communication between all staff) that is developed for that youngster for all of his/her school day hours.

Teen-Ager Is Baptized By Immersion

Just under 50 teen-agers and adults gathered on the shore of Houghton's Pond in Milton recently to witness the baptism by immersion of 15-year-old Richard Williams, of Quincy.

Overcast skies and light rain did not dampen the ardor of the group made up of people from The Way Up and The First Church of Squantum.

The Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, director of The Way Up, and pastor of the Squantum church, led the service. The Way Up is a storefront ministry to youth sponsored by churches on the South Shore and throughout the state.

Richard, who made his decision to follow Christ while participating in programs at The Way Up, also chose the date and the location for the service. At the semi-secluded pond is surrounded by foliage which is just beginning to change colors.

A very large and colorful worship banner hung from the top of one of the life-guard chairs. It depicted a large white dove, the symbol of the Holy Spirit which came to Christ at the time of his baptism.

The service began with hymns which emphasized Christian faith and the cross and resurrection of Jesus Christ. Then, after a prayer, a Scripture reading and a short sermon, Dr. Langevin called Richard forward.

At the waters edge, Richard renounced the worship of self and the world and announced his intention to follow Jesus Christ. He removed his street clothing as a visible symbol of the renunciation of the world.

In the water, after Richard had further declared his Christian faith, Dr. Langevin baptized Richard by totally immersing him while the congregation on shore sang "Christ the Lord is Risen Today."

On shore, Richard was presented with a white baptismal robe and was congratulated by well-wishers.

The reception and the cookout scheduled to take place in the park was moved to the church building in Squantum because of the rain. There Richard received the right hand of fellowship from the Pastor and two deacons, Grace Holmes and David Milder.

Grace Holmes and Hazel Mayne were in charge of the reception.

Richard was formally welcomed into the First Church of Squantum Sunday when he received the right hand of fellowship at the Communion Table from a number of people representing the church.

They included Rev. Dr. Langevin, pastor of the church; Donald Frazier, Chairman, Board of Deacons; Stewart Scott, Chairman, Board of Trustees; Ellen Ogilvie, Board of Christian Education; Genevieve Todd, chairman, Board of Benevolences; Steven Williams and Bonnie Adams, representing the church youth group, Orange Crush, of which Richard has been president for a year.

The Lord's Supper was observed because of Worldwide Communion Sunday. Rev.

Langevin continued his series of sermons on the first three kings of Israel, preaching on "In Spite of Our Sin". The Senior Choir sang, "O Thou, From Whom All Blessings Come," by Tchaikovsky.

Mark Paul gave the call to worship, Janet Sumner led the opening prayer and Stewart Scott read the Scripture.

Also singing at the service for the first time was the newest choir, the Youth Choir, composed of Bonnie Adams, Holly Bumpus, Wayne Cosineau, Eric DiBona, Nancy Ellis, Susan Milder, Matthew Paul, Jo Ann Warren, Kathy Williams, Richard Williams, Steven Williams of Quincy, Steven Williams of Weymouth, and David Young. They sang, "The Lord's My Shepherd" to a melody by Jessie Irvine. Mary Ruth Scott accompanied with guitar.

After the service, there was a formal church reception for the Williams boy hosted by Janet Sumner, Ruth Danforth, Ida Von Reigers, Sandy Ahearn and Tommy Adams.

NEW OFFICERS were elected by St. Joseph's CYO recently. Seated are Michael Ford, president and Carol Ann Brillo, treasurer. Standing are Michael Shaughnessy, delegate and Joanne McBride, secretary. Not shown is Peggy Comer, vice president.

Hud's Atlantic Home Improvement Program Extended Into Wollaston

The Atlantic Target Area of HUD's Home Improvement Program has been expanded into Wollaston under the current Community Development Block Grant budget, according to City Councillor Stephen J. McGrath.

Homes in certain areas of Wollaston are now eligible for low interest loans and grants for home improvements, as well as exterior painting and insulation.

The sections are the Billings Rd.-Vassall St. area and the lower ends of Beach St., Davis St., Bromfield St., Franklin Ave., the Strand, and East and West Elm Aves.

McGrath pointed out that those sections have been designated part of the Atlantic Target Area and Wollaston does not have its own program so expansion of eligibility will move slowly.

"People should understand that we are dealing with a definite amount of funding and therefore only small areas can be added at a time," he said.

Residents of the Wollaston areas also will be receiving the monthly newsletter of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

Street Abandonment Opens Way For $4.5 Million Building

The city is planning to abandon a section of Spruce St. in Atlantic to clear the way for construction of a $4.5 million office building on Newport Ave. near the State Street South complex.

The plan, which has the approval of the Planning Board, was sent to the City Council's Land Conveyance Committee last week and probably will be heard before the next Council meeting Oct. 15.

Planning Director James Lydon said the dead end section of Spruce St., which he described as a "paper" street, is surrounded by land on which SCI Investment Co. of Genoa, Italy, plans its building.

The Planning Board recently approved a special flood plain permit for construction of the building and the Zoning Board of Appeals is due to give its final permission Oct. 16.

Actual construction is expected to begin Nov. 1.

News Execs To Discuss Politics At First Parish Church Panel

A panel of Quincy news executives will discuss "Quincy Politics: Issues or Personalities" Wednesday, Oct. 17, at 8 p.m. in United First Parish Church, sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Panel members include Henry Bosworth, publisher of the Quincy Sun; Herb Fontaine, news director of WJDA; and Edward Querzoli, managing editor of the Patriot Ledger.

They will be asked to address themselves to the following topics:

How has Quincy changed since they first began reporting? How has the change in religious and party affiliation and family makeup influenced its local government? What changes do they predict for Quincy in the next 10 years?

Do issues or personalities determine voting patterns? How do people choose to run for office or does pre-selection exist? Is it becoming more difficult to find committed people to stand for election and, if so, why? What have been and are the issues and what should they be?

Quick tips on how to save your energy dollars

• One dollar spent on the furnace can save $50 a year.

• Educated apartment dwellers can force landlords to eliminate excessive utility costs hidden in the rent.

• A hot water drip from the bathroom faucet can fill a cup in 10 minutes and waste 3,260 gallons of water per year.

To heat that water, it took 27 gallons of oil, 1,017 kilowatt hours of electricity or 3,484 cubic feet of natural gas.

All down the drain, and you paid for it and wasted it.

• An air conditioner placed in a sunny window decreases its efficiency, as do dirty filters which should be checked once a month.

• How often have you checked your utility bill against your meter? Computers do make mistakes.

• Ceramic cookware allows you to reduce oven settings by 25° because it retains heat especially well.

• A bath uses three times as much water as a shower.

• When leaving the house for an extended period, pull the plugs on all appliances that will use energy in your absence, such as TVs.

The idea of the "instant-on" in televisions is a misnomer. There is no instant on; the television is always on, wasting energy and money.

• Most tires are under inflated by four to six pounds. Increasing the pressure to the maximum listed on the side of the tire will save you up to $100 per year.

• All the cracks in an average house, taken together, would equal a hole in the wall the size of a basketball.

Proper corking and insulation can save you $200 per year in heating costs and more than $50 per year in air conditioning costs.

• A 75¢ device called a shower flow resistor can reduce the flow of unneeded water and save $75 per year.

• Buy wood for fires as early in the season as possible for the best deal (June or July).

From November on, demand increases and so does the price.

• If you buy a solar collector to supply hot water, you can get a federal tax credit and save several thousands of dollars over the next 20 years.

PROPER INSTALLATION of heating cables on the overhang, as shown here, prevents ice from forming which can trap excess water and cause it to leak into the home through the shingles.

Look up, down and all around for living space

Need more living space?

Look up, down, all around—and you may find it.

Here are some suggestions from the National Home Improvement Council on how to stretch your home to suit your needs.

Look up

Turn the attic into a guestroom, study or playroom. Provide both storage and living space by partitioning low-slope sections of the room with a knesswall framework of two-by-fours. Cover the framework with prefinished paneling.

Sliding panels or doors will allow access to the storage area behind the wall. For light and ventilation, install dormer windows.

Look down

Convert a dreary basement into a cheery family or recreation room. If there's a moisture problem, waterproof masonry walls, then install insulation-backed paneling or rigid insulation boards.

Some types of resilient flooring can be applied directly over concrete floors. Or, build a subfloor and carpet it. Box-in unsightly overhead pipes, or install a suspended ceiling with recessed lighting.

Look outdoors

Enclose the porch to make it usable year-round. The floor, ceiling and house wall already exist, but the three open walls must be stud-framed and enclosed.

If possible, extend the home's heating system into the new room. If not, use space or baseboard heaters.

Turn the carport into an extra room, or a two-car port into two rooms.

Walls and floors must be constructed, and planning must include window and door installation, insulation application, and provision for heat and electricity.

Remodel the garage into an efficiency apartment. It's great for week-end guests, for a mature teen-ager who wants a place of his or her own without leaving home, or as an income-earning rental.

Garages don't need major structural changes. Important considerations are light, air and easy access—one possibility is replacing the garage doors with sliding glass doors—and plumbing and heating extensions.

TODAY'S IDEAL KITCHEN should combine elements of both charm and convenience. This cheerful open kitchen area was designed for efficiency and carefree maintenance.

Charm and convenience: the key elements in good kitchen design

An efficient kitchen area must be more than attractive to look at... it must also be more than just a utilitarian area.

In fact, today's ideal kitchen combines the elements of both charm and convenience, resulting in an interesting social center for the entire family.

This kitchen does just that. Designed by Ving and Charlotte Smith, it provides a cheerful open area designed for efficiency, sociability and carefree maintenance.

The paneled walls and cabinets serve to lighten and brighten the entire area.

The sleek refrigerator, range and microwave oven accent this light look with black glass fronts, while the dishwasher and compactor blend in with the cabinetry.

The open area above the cabinets provides space to show off those decorative and large size items which add a personal and distinctive decorating touch.

Also notice the additional storage space underneath the island for those large items or appliances that would take so much space and be difficult to get at in a cupboard.

This kitchen even offers a bookcase for all your cookbooks... or use it to display your plants or a collection.

Adding the finishing touch is vinyl floor with an interesting and colorful inset which gives the effect of a kitchen rug highlighting the convenient work table island.

The country look of the cabinets, combined with the newest in appliances, plus colorful and easy-to-clean flooring blend together to provide lasting charm and convenience for both today's and tomorrow's lifestyles.

Make the kitchen a safer place

With the surging popularity of cooking—gourmet cooking in particular—the kitchen is being invaded by males and females, spanning a variety of ages and culinary abilities.

Likewise, with the decline in use of the separate, formal dining room, the kitchen has once again become the primary eating center.

For many families, the kitchen is also a living area or social center creating an atmosphere for family entertainment and gathering.

New responsibility

Along with the increased use of the kitchen and its changing function comes one added responsibility—being safety conscious.

It is estimated that over half of the 21 million home injuries that happened last year occurred in the kitchen.

Whether you're building, remodeling or just re-organizing you think about the features you should add to make it a safer place in which to live.

The proliferation of electrical appliances is one of the factors fostering new interest in the kitchen.

From coffee-makers to chicken crispers, labor-saving electrical appliances now make cooking quick, easy and even fun for people of all ages and all levels of cooking skill.

In older kitchens, more electrical appliances are probably being used than ever thought imaginable when the room was built. There may not be enough circuits to handle the extra demand.

Too many appliances plugged into one outlet results in dangerous circuit overloading. This cannot only damage appliances, but the appliance user as well.

Shocks and fires can result when outlets take on octopus-like appearances trying to do too many things at once.

Have the wiring in your kitchen checked by a qualified person. Circuits can be added and divided; so don't take chances!

Also, make sure that appliances are plugged into circuits that offer adequate power. Do not plug large electrical appliances such as ranges and refrigerators into outlets that have less capacity than required.

Another factor that can lead to kitchen accidents is disorganization, so organize kitchen appliances and equipment.

Keep electrical devices unplugged when not in use and out of the reach of children. Use them away from the sink area where extra cord lengths will not fall into a water-filled sink.

Store knives separately

Keep knives and other sharp equipment in storage areas separate from other utensils. Do not store them in a common utility drawer.

Likewise, organize manufacturers' use and care instructions and warranties. Many kitchens have either no defined location for these materials or have them strewn in a "catch-all" drawer.

For larger items, place them in a stiff folder or envelope. Label the folder and store it in a handy location.

Above all, read the materials provided by a manufacturer. Just because two items are made of the same basic material, such as heat-resistant glass and glass-ceramic cookware, does not mean they have the same uses.

Heat-resistant glass cookware cannot be used on top of the range; glass-ceramic cookware can. Also, the size and shape of an item may prohibit its use in a particular cooking situation.

Clean cookware properly

Using abrasive cleaners on glass or glass-ceramic items can cause scratching. Numerous scratches can eventually weaken the structure of the item and cause it to break.

Cleaners and household chemicals should be stored out of the reach of children. The all-too-common storage area, under the sink, is a "no-no."

It is too accessible for curious youngsters and poisoning may result. The ideal place to store these items is a special cabinet that can be locked.

Also, have a special place for a fire extinguisher. It may not be the most often-used item in your kitchen, but when it's needed, it's needed in a hurry.

Have it in a location commonly known by all family members and be sure it's in proper working order.

Repair slanting or warped floors and replace loose tiles. Cover scatter rugs with skid-proof backing. These are particularly hazardous for older people.

Cook Food In Batches

• Cook food in batches whenever possible. It's economical because you can do a lot at one time, freezing much of it for later use — another convenience.

Wallcoverings multiply decorating options

Walls account for the single largest space in a room—what you do to them can change the whole character of that room, says the Wallcovering Information Bureau.

Decorating solution

As a solution to decorating problems, wallcoverings offer many choices for every room in the house.

If you plan to redecorate this fall, here are 10 ideas—for changing space, creating color schemes and mixing patterns—that you can do with wallcoverings and a little imagination.

• Do-It-Yourself—The basic elements of hanging wallcoverings can be mastered in a very short time if directions are followed carefully.

• Change Space—Give the appearance of raising a ceiling by hanging striped wallcovering vertically. Conversely, ceilings will appear lower if a dark or patterned wallcovering is used.

Make a room appear to be twice its size by hanging a striped wallcovering in a horizontal position, called "railroading." The room will immediately appear longer or wider, and the wallcovering gives a pleasing continuity to it all. Small patterns and light colors give the illusion of greater size to a room.

• Architectural Effects—Turn architectural flaws into assets without carpentry by using wallcoverings—the trick is to distract the eye.

Use a wallcovering with an overall pattern or definite texture to hide wall irregularities, such as bumps or cracks, rather than replastering or replacing the wall. The pattern or texture will visually "smooth out" the wall and make it seem less irregular.

• Pattern Mixing—Rely on the expertise of the wallcovering manufacturer who has produced collections that feature groupings of coordinated patterns—some with companion fabrics.

Mix two or three wallcovering patterns in the same room for instant designer impact. Positive negative prints are popular, as are overall patterns, such as floral, stripe or a stripe/plaid combination in the same colorway.

• Color Schemes—Start with favorite mid-colored wallcovering as the basis of a room's color scheme. Colors in wallcoverings represent choices made by professional artists and designers who have put their talent into choosing colors that work together.

Related colors and patterns in adjoining rooms enhance the feeling of space and continuity. Color accents are meant to add a touch of excitement.

Rule of thumb

As a general rule of thumb: dark colors enclose space; light colors and neutrals expand space.

• Open Up A Small Room—If you feel enclosed by a room with only one small window, "create" more space by using wallcoverings that simulate treillage, shutters or fretwork. Create a garden or a gazebo indoors.

Or bring the beauty of nature inside by using a wall mural, featuring beaches, forests or even an outer space scene.

• Special Spaces—Bold, bright, dramatic or fun wallcoverings add spice to the less active areas of the home—a dreary wall at the end of a hallway, a laundry room or a single wall of a guest bedroom.

A bright pattern on the ceiling can give a dramatic effect. Likewise, the small bath or powder room can benefit from a large, bold design.

• Amplify Space—Add spaciousness to an otherwise small room by using metalized wallcoverings, from a bright mirror finish to the subtle glow of the new soft metallics, characterized more by shimmer than shine.

Check wall conditions

Walls should be smooth and in good condition. If walls are old or have imperfections, a solution is to apply a lining paper first to cover minor irregularities; then hang the metalized wallcovering.

• Dimension With Texture—Look to textured wallcoverings if patterns are not a first choice. Textures create the look of natural materials in a room at a lower cost than the real materials.

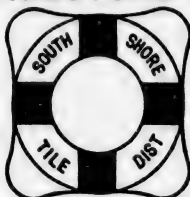

For an earthy effect, choose from burlap to linen, grasscloth to suede or stone; informal rooms benefit from burlap and brick; watered silk has a traditional flavor; and shiny mirror wallcoverings work well with contemporary tastes. Textured wallcoverings offer easy care and durability as a bonus.

• Little Tricks, Big Effects—Use wallcoverings in small ways to yield custom effects. For example, use wallcoverings to cover planters or Parson's tables, folding screen or unpainted chest of drawers, headboard for a bed or kitchen cabinet doors.

With leftover wallcoverings, cover accessory items, such as wastebaskets, frames and storage trunks to coordinate or contrast with other wallcovering in the room to add a special dimension.

If it's time for a 'facelift' . . .

Insulate when re-siding your home

If re-siding is in your old home's future, go a step further and consider insulated siding.

In addition to giving the house a facelift and reducing maintenance, it will help cut the amount of fuel you use.

Increasingly popular as energy supplies decrease and heating costs increase, insulated aluminum siding on a home with uninsulated walls can reduce fuel requirements. Insulation comes in a variety of types, each with its own degree of efficiency; and to secure the best value for the money, you should know what is available and what each will accomplish.

Pre-finished aluminum siding usually repays its initial cost by eliminating the need for periodic painting. However, insulated siding cuts the cost still further because of fuel savings.

"R" values

The effectiveness of insulation materials is measured in "R" values—numbers indicating how much resistance the insulation gives to heat flowing through it. The higher the number the better the insulation properties.

Aluminum siding, along with vinyl plastic, steel or hard-board, offers no real insulation on its own.

But a system composed of aluminum siding over a sandwich of insulation consisting of foam plastic board, two layers of reflector foil and an air space provided by 3/4-in. furring strips has a 5.6-6.0 value.

Using this type of insulation, the owner of a house with a wall area of 2000 square feet in Boston, Mass., using heating oil at 70¢ a gallon, could save as much as $280 a year.

In Denver, Colo., that figure could reach over $300 and, in Milwaukee, Wis., as much as $375. Savings would be more for the family heating with electricity and somewhat less with gas.

Another type is aluminum siding over an extruded polystyrene or polyisocyanurate insulation board, having a 4.7-5 R value.

A hollow-backed aluminum siding with a polystyrene backer provides a 2.5-3.0 R value, and aluminum siding with foil alone has an R value of 1.1.

Expert advice

How siding is installed can be as important as the material chosen. For the most effective results, the aluminum siding experts advise incorporating air spaces into the new wall system because dead air acts as an efficient insulator.

For instance, if the contractor adds furring strips to separate two layers of aluminum foil, along with an insulating backer board, to the original surface of your house, you'll have the maximum protection provided by three air spaces—one between the foil and the old siding, the second between the two layers of foil, and the third between the foil and the new siding.

Whatever insulated aluminum siding you choose, be sure the contractor does a good caulking job around windows and doors to ensure air tightness. This should be done before trim and accessories are added to the siding.

Be sure he shows you the wide variety of new colors and textures available in aluminum siding, along with the selection of matching or contrasting aluminum trim and the various panel styles.

Choose your contractor carefully, because it is his expertise that will give you the best job for the money you invest.

Recycle your creative energy at home to make dynamic new living space

There's a new energy afloat. With the car virtually grounded, except for work trips, the smart money is being invested in the home.

Remodel, insulate, expand, these are today's moving forces on the American scene.

One home is better than two, particularly if it has the recreational and casual facilities considered the hallmark of a second home.

Add an extra room by remodeling or expanding, and the family has a built-in second home without the stress and waste of highway hassles. At the same time, the new addition can provide insulation to help whip rising fuel cost.

Don't give in to a state of frenzy. Instead, take a good, long look at your home.

One family dug into the problem and came up with a basement to serve as a second home.

They used a Franklin stove for on-the-spot warmth, brick walls for insulation, louver doors, a wall hanging and easy care furniture that moves to patio with ease.

When the kids or dad want to get away, to the basement they go. The day of the joy-ride is a trip down memory lane.

FROM THE STURDY, NO-NONSENSE furniture to the built-in storage units, the room is a sanctuary of sanity and an ideal place to tune out the world.

Another family raised the roof in their quest for space. Again, good insulation helped the entire house. Cabinets were used to hold abundant storage.

Fishing rods, neatly organized, became decorative appointments ready for a walk to the nearest 'hole.' A comfy chair and ottoman were slipcovered to match the fabric stapled to the wall.

That same family felt it necessary to redecorate their front hall. With more in and out traffic, they wanted their best foot forward.

A home spun rug, a freshly painted bench, new prints from a flea market and the piece de resistance, a Ridgeway grandfather clock they wanted for years, a timeless investment, express the new focus on the importance of their home.

The energy crunch, like everything, has two sides. Recycling creative energy is choosing the brighter one.

How to redecorate on a budget

Trying to redecorate on a limited budget? There are a host of things you can do with a little imagination and inventiveness.

First, scour your closets, attic, basement and storage areas for old treasures, things you put away till 'the time was ripe.'

Those printed linen dish towels you could never bring yourself to soil may make lovely wall-hangings; a bright, hand-embroidered shawl will drape gracefully on the back of a sofa or plush chair.

If you're handy with the embroidery needle, consider getting to work on some throw pillows or chair cushions. You can pass your leisure time constructively and refurbish your home to boot.

If the den is beginning to look a bit gloomy, consider repainting. If the whole room seems like too much of a challenge, do just the window frames and molding in a color that will complement and vivify the rest of the room.

And, while the fall air is still crisp without being cold, head to flea markets and antique stores in your area, in search of hidden treasures. Happy hunting!

Learn to conserve water at home

Home water conservation can save a lot more than H.O. It can also be a profitable experience.

Changes in lifestyle can contribute greatly to a water conservation program. Coupled with home improvements and the use of new energy saving devices, savings can be measured in gallons as well as dollars and cents.

Helpful booklet

To establish or enhance home conservation efforts, the National Association of Plumbing, Heating, Cooling Contractors and Bradley Corporation have published a 12-page brochure of helpful suggestions for homeowners.

Entitled "Let's Make An Energy Check All Around the Home," the brochure is divided into sections with water and energy conservation tips for the plumbing, heating and air conditioning systems.

The brochure encourages homeowners to be conservation-conscious in their daily lives. Practical though often overlooked suggestions include:

- Lowered water heater settings—especially on days when hot water isn't needed often.

- Full loads only for the dishwasher and washing machines.

- A container of cold water stored in the refrigerator. This keeps a cold water supply on hand and avoids wastefully running the water while it gets cold.

- Soaking of dishes during the day in the kitchen sink, enabling the use of shorter washing cycles.

Water saving equipment currently available through plumbing contractors is also listed in the brochure.

This includes low capacity toilets which consume fewer gallons per flush; hot water dispensers which provide instant hot water and eliminate the need for running faucets to get the right temperature; faucet and showerhead devices to restrict water flow; water heater sizes to match family needs and insulation kits for water heaters.

Collectively these items can make a major difference in the average amount of water and energy consumed in the home.

Every little bit helps

Minor adjustments alone, such as the repair of a leaky faucet, also can make a major contribution. A faucet which loses only 1/4 of a gallon every 10 minutes can cost a homeowner over $20 annually.

Tips for more efficient operation from the heating and cooling systems, such as scheduled replacement of dirty filters and the installation of attic vent fans, are also included in the brochure.

In some cases, a thermostatically controlled attic vent fan removes heat build up and can save as much as one-third on air conditioning energy costs.

Earthtone Color Lifts Roof To New Heights Of Beauty

Modernizing the outside of your home can be a creative way to improve an indifferent, lackluster exterior. Sometimes, a fresh coat of paint is all that's required. At other times, new shutters, siding or a new roof are what's needed to give a home new vitality.

When remodeling, many homeowners prefer the rustic, natural look. They can get it with today's building products. In reroofing, for example, modern asphalt shingles are available in rustic earthtone colors.

Reflecting the subdued tones of nature, three-dimensional asphalt shingles in popular shades of browns and beiges serve to relate a home to its surroundings. At the same time, these shingles create a bold, dramatic roof texture with attractive shadow lines that set a roof apart from others in the neighborhood.

In addition to color and dimension, multi-ply asphalt shingles are designed to last up to 25 years or more with little maintenance. They also carry an Underwriters Laboratories label for fire resistance.

When reroofing, homeowners should be aware that asphalt shingles can, in many cases, be applied over the old roofing material, eliminating the cost in a tearoff.

Ease Cooling With Aluminum Awnings

The trend of increasing cost for energy makes every practical home improvement that saves energy, a project that deserves the attention of home owners. This is particularly true of easy do-it-yourself complete package projects. The direct rays of the hot summer sun coming into a room through unprotected windows can place an appreciable additional load on any air conditioning system.

Do-it-yourself heavy gauge aluminum awnings solve these direct sun ray problems and by shielding the air conditioning unit the cool air circulated into the room is produced at a lower energy load level.

The baked on white enamel finish goes with any color scheme and they are ideal for residences, summer cottages, mobile homes. The awnings have an adjustable pitch and are an attractive sun or rain screen, or shutter for privacy and protection against wind storms.

Saving Energy With Solid-State Dimmers

Using a dimmer on a light will save on electricity, unless you have a very old style dimmer. It's true that dimmers once saved little or no energy because they worked on a resistance principle, but the new solid-state dimmers commonly sold to homeowners are close to 100 percent efficient. Technically known as silicon control rectifiers, the solid-state dimmers work by knocking down the voltage so that little, if any, electricity is drawn beyond that needed for the fixture.

"One hundred per cent in neighborhoods like Houghs Neck and other lower assessed areas in the city could be devastating," he said. "Taxpayers have more to lose by allowing the city to be held in contempt."

Harrington told the Council last week that the city's response to Judge Wilkins order "seems to be the last step on the journey to full and fair cash value and also the first step to certified classification."

"Up until this time," he said, "there has been no order mandating the city of Quincy to enter into a contract. The matter has been pending for more than two years."

'Million Dollar' Prize At Flea Market Opening

They're drawing for a million dollars at the Boston Harbor Marina, Squantum, this weekend.

But, even if you're the lucky winner, you won't be able to spend it because the bills have been officially retired and shredded by the U.S. government and sealed in a glass dome.

It's the ideal conversation piece for the family that has everything.

The drawing is part of the grand opening of the Boston Harbor Marina Antique, Flea and Craft Show Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13 and 14, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Promotor Paul Feldman bills it as New England's largest indoor event with more than 15,000 persons expected to view 222 exhibits on 60,000 square feet of floor. There is free parking for 10,000 cars.

Patterned after a similar exhibit area in New York, there will be entertainment for the entire family.

Strolling musicians, jugglers, clowns making balloon animals and singers will create a lively atmosphere. Miss Massachusetts will greet visitors. Feldman has arranged free gifts for the first 100 visitors on the opening days.

The idea for a large indoor show has been a long time dream for Feldman, who operates two flea markets during the summer in Weymouth and Canton.

"In the past, all the shows stop when it gets cold," says Feldman. "This will give an opportunity for the largest number of exhibitors to display their items."

Feldman has scheduled shows on a weekly basis throughout the winter, with a floor plan carefully designed so that there will be three basic sections.

"We will have all the antique dealers in one area," he reports, "with separate sections for crafts and antiques."

Food concessions will also be grouped together and the marina's lounge will be open.

"We're even providing giant screen TV so that sports fans can enjoy themselves," adds Feldman.

Adult admission is $1, with children under 12 free, Feldman says, because "we want everyone to come and have a good time."

Feldman says he has reserved an additional 30,000 square feet in the same building for expansion.

"Once people see the possibilities, we're going to open the place up," he says. "I hope to see the show grow to about 300 exhibitors each weekend."

Let us contemplate the sad fate
Of the crisp, brisk, young cucumber,
Who lay in a leafy green field
In blissful oblivious slumber
All of a sunshiny summer.

Who rudely was yanked from his bed,
One of a great number,
And thrown in a great bath of brine,
(This happened in early September --
A terrible thing to remember!)

Slowly he felt himself change, it
Made him increasingly glummer;
His temper got sour and mean --
A pickle by early November!
A noosh for a butcher or plumber!

How like ourselves, when Fate's finger, fickle,
Turns a young kook to a sour old pickle!

Christmas Parade Expected To Be Biggest Ever

This year's Quincy Christmas Festival Parade will feature a record number of parades and floats, reports George Fay, chairman of the planning committee.

"We know this year's festivities will undoubtedly be the most formidable and varied in history," he said.

The three-day festival, Nov. 23 to 25, will also be highlighted by the ceremonial lighting of Christmas decorations on Constitution Common. Santa Claus' arrival by helicopter and the "Ronald MacDonald Show," which will follow the parade on Sunday, Nov. 25. That show will take place in the John Hancock Parking area or in the Strand Theater in case of inclement weather.

The lighting of the Constitution Common lights will take place Friday, Nov. 23 at 6:30 p.m., while Santa will touch down Saturday morning at 11:30.

An awards night Friday, Jan. 18 at the Sons of Italy Social Center in Quincy will conclude the festival committee's activities.

Fay said he is "very encouraged by the unusual response of organizations, the business community and the 33-member committee." The parade, viewed by about 250,000 last year, will attract an even larger crowd this year, he predicted.

The committee was scheduled to meet Wednesday at 7 p.m. at 55 Sea St.

Trailside Museum Bird Seed Sale

If you're planning to feed birds through the winter, now is a good time to purchase seed.

The Massachusetts Audubon Society's Blue Hills Trailside Museum in Milton is sponsoring a bird seed sale with the proceeds benefiting the museum.

To purchase the Audubon bird seed and feeders, orders must be placed and paid for by Oct. 13. Seed pick-up day will be Oct. 27 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the museum.

Many bird seed mixes are designed to appeal more to humans than to birds. The Audubon mixes are the highest quality seed available and have been prepared to attract a wide variety of birds and to give them a sound diet.

For people beginning a feeding program, there are helpful details in "Going to Seed" and "Simple Feeders You Can Make," free pamphlets on winter bird feeding. For the pamphlets of a seed feeder order form, contact the Blue Hills Trailside Museum, 1904 Canton Ave., Milton, 02186 or call 333-0690.

Muffler Shop Planned At Old Ashmont Discount Site

The Quincy License Board continued for two weeks a request from MRH Realty Corporation, Boston, for permits for a Speedy Muffler Shop at 474-490 Southern Artery.

The corporation asked for a permit to store 100 gallons of gasoline in tanks of cars, above ground, and a repair shop license.

Atty. Peter Eley, representing the corporation, told the board the proposed shop would be located at the site of the old Ashmont Discount Store.

He said the shop will deal with muffler systems and shock absorbers, and will have four bays and a waiting area for customers.

Eley showed the board a rendering of what the proposed building would look like. He also displayed pictures of the Ashmont building, which has deteriorated since it was vacated three or four years ago.

Cesar Chekijian, real estate district manager for the corporation, said the single story concrete building would be at the rear of the lot, behind a hill. He said the bays would be at the front and walls would be insulated to cut down on noise.

Chekijian also said two mechanics and an office manager will be employed the first year.

Building Inspector Allan MacDonald said he did not want the area to become "automobile alley" referring to the several gas stations, muffler shop and spring shop in the area.

He also noted neighborhood opposition to the shop, and voiced his concern that passing motorists would have an unattractive view of the bays in the summer when the doors are wide open.

Chekijian countered by saying motorists are usually looking straight ahead, and would get even more of a view of the bays if they were on the sides of the building, as MacDonald proposed.

City Clerk John Gillis said he thought anything would be an improvement over the present condition of the site, and that this would be a great improvement.

MacDonald asked that the matter be continued for two weeks when a full board will be in session so that matters of the view, traffic, a sign, and landscaping can be reviewed.

He also said that he would visit one of the Speedy Muffler Shops in another town to see "what kind of housekeeping they do."

North Quincy 20, Cambridge Rindge 6 Raiders Eye No. 2 At Weymouth North

By TOM SULLIVAN

North Quincy's football team turned in another outstanding two-way performance last Saturday and the Raiders were rewarded with their first win of the season.

"Watch us from now on, we are really coming along," warned defensive coach Ken MacPhee after another brilliant defensive effort combined with a continually improving offense.

North hopes to make it two in a row Saturday when it faces an improved Weymouth North team in a 1:30 p.m. game at Weymouth's Legion Field.

The Maroons last week defeated Boston Tech, 22-6. They also topped Braintree and Cambridge Rindge and Latin and lost a tough one to Waltham.

The Raiders were hitting harder than ever last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium and forced seven Cambridge Rindge and Latin fumbles, recovered five and went to a convincing 20-6 Suburban League victory.

The win was especially pleasing to Burke, as it was his 25th victory in his five years as coach at his alma mater.

The players awarded the game ball to Burke, who in turn, gave it to Capt. Leo Graham, who played another superb two-way game and was largely responsible for the win.

"Receiving this ball means an awful lot to me, but I want to give it to Leo, who did so much today to give me my 25th coaching win at North Quincy," Burke said.

Graham, playing another of his consistently outstanding defensive games, also had another banner day on offense. He ran for 68 yards and scored both of North's touchdowns.

"He is the best back I've seen this year," praised Cambridge coach George Greenidge.

Graham was far from a one-man team, however, as Pat Carroll, Bill Dailey, Bob McCormick and quarterback Jack Brown all ran well, Jack Leone kicked two field goals and the entire offensive line and defensive unit were at their best.

"Our offense is improving all the time," Burke said. "Brown ran the team well again and the line was opening good holes. I am hopeful our improvement will continue and that we will have a good season the rest of the way."

Defensive coaches MacPhee and Jack Raymer couldn't say enough for their players.

"We had a couple of key men out but boy, did the kids hit today," MacPhee said. "They forced all those Cambridge fumbles with hard hits and everyone was just super. What more can I say about Graham? He's just the best there is. He has more than 50 tackles in our four games and I don't think there can be a better two-way back in the state."

Receiving the coaches' plaudits were Chris Petrillo, who played hurt; Graham, Tony Camillo, who had a pass interception and a fumble recovery; Rick Anderson, Joe Cremin, Glen Segalla, Paul McDonough, John Corczyca, Glen Ross, Joe Feeney and Bill McCarthy, who was excellent on special teams.

Offensive coach George Lisset praised the line for another top performance.

"They were getting off the ball real well and the downfield blocking was outstanding and that made the big difference," he said.

He had good words for everyone but especially for Jim Dodd, Ed Miller, Lou DiPietro, John Buckley, John McNamara, Feeney, Leone and Joe Mullen.

North took the opening kickoff and drove steadily 72 yards for its first touchdown, despite a 15-yard holding penalty. Graham led the way and, after the penalty set the Raiders back to their 23. Brown hit Graham with a perfectly executed screen pass and the North captain went all the way. Leone kicked the point.

"Give the coach credit for that one, he called it," MacPhee said. "Dave did a great job all day of play calling."

Cambridge's first fumble came early in the second period following a tremendous hit by Ross. Cremin recovering on Cambridge's 33.

Brown, unable to pass, raced around right end for 18 yards and, with fourth and eight, Leone, who kicks barefooted and in previous games had barely missed on tries of 47 and 40 yards, kicked a 34-yard field goal despite a tricky wind.

A few plays later Petrillo recovered a Cambridge fumble on North's 51 following a terrific hit by Graham.

However, Cambridge's Mark Conrad intercepted a pass and the Raiders received a good break three plays later when Kevin Hill took a pithout and raced 62 yards to the North one where he was brought down by Graham. However, an illegal procedure penalty nullified the run.

Camillo intercepted a pass on Cambridge's 41 and the Raiders drove downfield. Carroll apparently scored but an illegal procedure penalty killed it and three plays later, following a nine-yard loss, Leone kicked his second field goal, this one a 29-yarder.

On the first play following the second half kickoff Petrillo again recovered a fumble on the Cambridge 33. Again the Raiders drove relentlessly and Graham scored from the three. Leone kicked the point, giving him eight points on the day.

Again, on the first play following the kickoff, North's defense smothered the ball carrier and Jim McGinnis recovered a fumble on the Cambridge 25, but this time Cambridge held.

With North's starters getting a well-earned rest, Cambridge averted a shutout. Gino Pillard intercepted a pass for North but it was voided by a penalty and Cambridge drove from the 50 with two passes eating up 33 yards and Mike Harshberger scored from the three on a quarterback sneak.

The Raiders netted 150 yards on the ground to 90 for Cambridge. The visitors' only edge came on passing with 123 yards on five for 10, but one for 30 yards was the result of pass interference. North had only the screen pass competition. North had 14 first downs and Cambridge nine.

North-Weymouth N. Game On WJDA

North Quincy's football game at Weymouth North Saturday at 1:30 p.m. will be the subject of WJDA's play-by-play broadcast.

The station also will bring in reports of Newton North at

Panthers Roll By Apaches Into First Place

By JIM NABSTEDT

The Panthers took undisputed possession of first place in the Quincy Youth Football League Sunday with an 8-0 victory over the Apaches.

It was the third straight win for the Panthers and the first loss in three games for the Apaches.

The Panthers scored their first two points on a safety when Bob Glidden and Bob Burns tackled the Apaches' ball carrier in the end zone. Later Kevin Cabeza passed to Burns for a six-yard touchdown.

Tom Travers, Kevin Cameron and Rich Pettinelli stood out on offense for the Panthers while Jim Kelly, Chuck Jaehning, Gerry Britt and Jon Beniers were defensive standouts. For the Apaches Rick Reardon, John McGrath, Dan Ceurvels and Mike Gill played well.

The Raiders improved their record to 2-1 by edging the winless Sailors, 8-6.

The Raiders got on the board first when Tom Collins picked off an errant Sailor pass and ran it back for a touchdown. Dave Norton added the two winning points.

The Sailors came back with a Colin McLeod touchdown but the try for the tying points failed.

Don Norton made a game-saving tackle at his 10 to preserve the win for the Raiders. Doug Murphy, Pat MacDonough and Jack Burke stood out for the Sailors in defeat.

The Elks also made their record 2-1 by romping over the winless Manets, 28-6.

Mike Ross scored for the Elks on a 32-yard run, Paul Kenney scored twice on interceptions, running them back 50 and 40 yards, and Billy Marsters scored on a 13-yard run. Jiff Jafferian passed to John Segalla twice for two-point conversions. For the Manets Scott Dooley scored the touchdown on a 40-yard pass from Bob Carty on a fake punt.

Greg Hanley, Billy Stanley, Mark Cohen, Shawn Glenn and Dooley played well for the Manets.

Next Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium it will be Elks vs. Apaches at noon, Sailors vs. Manets at 1:30 and Panthers vs. Raiders at 3.

Bulldogs After 4th Win

The first-year Quincy Bulldogs, the surprise team of the Boston Senior Park Football League, will seek their fourth straight win Friday night at 7:30 at East Boston Stadium where they face defending champion South Boston Chippewas, perennially a league powerhouse.

The Bulldogs surprised by shutting out the league's highest scoring team, the Charlestown T.T., 14-0, last Friday night at Charlestown to improve their record to 3-1. It was their third shutout in a row.

The Quincy team, hoping to enter the Eastern Football League next season, must play its home games at East Boston Stadium due to the unavailability of a field in Quincy.

The Bulldogs now have been unscored upon for 13 straight periods.

Quincy scored in the second period on a three-yard bootleg by quarterback Bob Scibilia. Paul Dube rushed for the two points behind 6-6, 280-pound Bill Newman, one of the top offensive linemen in the league.

In the fourth period Dube scored from the four but a pass from Scibilia intended for Frank T. Tananian, who played an outstanding game, was incomplete.

This touchdown was set up by a deflection of a Charlestown pass by Jim Rogers and the interception by Rene Marchanda.

The Bulldogs will end their regular season on Friday night, Oct. 19, against another of the league powerhouses, the Hanna Club.

North Gets First Win

North Quincy's boys' soccer team, which has been battling against tremendous odds, finally earned its first win last week, a 1-0 decision over Weymouth North.

Coach Paul Bregoli announced his young and injury-riddled Raiders for their continuing desire and hustle.

"We beat Weymouth in a game rescheduled after the terrific rains last week," Bregoli said. "Weymouth was leading us, 1-0, when the game was washed out and league rules dictate that the game be replayed in its entirety. It's probably the first break we've received all year and, who knows, maybe it will turn things around."

Bregoli was unable to make the game until the third period because of a school meeting and Jim McGinley handled the team until he arrived.

"Two of our standouts, Joey Flynn and Bob Biagini, were unable to play and I brought up three jayvee players, junior Billy Koch, sophomore John Keenan and Steve Sacchetti, all hallbacks," Bregoli said. They all played exceptionally well.

"I started three sophomores, Bill Bradley and Charlie Spiropoulos, at halfback and Rich Palma at wing. Spiropoulos went out with a leg injury early."

The young North team played a sluggish first half and only the excellent play of Paul Mallory in goal and Bradley and Paul Gill kept Weymouth off the scoreboard.

Steve Morrissey's hustle almost resulted in a goal early in the last period and Chris Dunn and Steve Kavanagh turned back several Weymouth threats. With a minute left Mallory made an outstanding save and Dunn got the ball to Ed Ahearn, who got it to Dave Lapsley, who was pushed 25 yards from the goal. On the direct kick, Ahearn's shot hit the post and on the rebound Ahearn again shot into a scramble in front of the net. The ball came to Bradley, who scored the goal with just 15 seconds left in the game.

Bregoli also praised junior wing Gary Donaghy, Dunn, Gill, Kavanagh, Jim Burke, Matt Keenan and Rich Farmer.

Injuries continued to plague North last Friday when it lost to Brookline, 4-2, with several players either out of action altogether or playing hurt.

Brookline took a 1-0 lead but Biagini tied it with his first goal of the year. The Raiders took a 2-1 lead when Biagini passed to Flynn and Flynn drilled a perfect shot to the lower left corner from 25 yards out.

Brookline tied it up, took a 3-2 lead in the third period and, after North had three fine scoring chances, it added the insurance goal in the final quarter.

North, which played Waltham, yesterday (Wednesday), will host league-leading Newton North Friday at 3:30 at the field behind Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Presidents Hope To Rebound Via Newton

The Quincy football team's defensive unit turned in its finest performance of the year last Saturday but the Presidents still suffered their first defeat at Waltham.

They hope to rebound Saturday when they host Newton North in a 1:30 p.m. Suburban League game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Newton, which defeated North Quincy, 13-7, also has a 13-6 win over Framingham North but lost to Medford, 24-21, and last week to unbeaten Brockton, 27-7.

"I've never seen a team play a better defensive game than we did at Waltham," Coach Tom Fitzgerald said following the 12-0 league loss. "A blocked punt and a fumble gave them their touchdowns and other than that I don't think they made two first downs. We did give them another chance with a fumble inside our 10 but otherwise we completely bottled them up."

"It was too bad such a superb defensive performance had to be for nothing. Our defensive coaches, Bill Mayer and Joe Goguen have done a remarkable job and they deserve an awful lot of credit."

"We'll bounce back, I'll promise that."

While the defense was doing its part, the offense, which had scored 71 points in its three previous wins, was pretty well shut off by Waltham, which threw a variety of defenses against the Presidents.

Co-Capt. Tommy Brennan did have another good day with 107 yards, giving him 548 yards in five games. He had one long run to the Waltham two just as the half ended, a tough break for the Presidents.

Quincy had another good opportunity in the third period when Charlie McCall ran back a punt 45 yards to the Waltham 10 but on second down Waltham came up with one of its four pass interceptions.

"It's hard to single out anyone on defense, as they all did a terrific job," Mayer said. "Mention them all. Steve Picot, starting his first game, was outstanding as were Ed Mackey, Mike Petrillo, Chris Chevalier, Lou Matthews, Walter Kilgallon, Jim McNeil (injured and probably out of this week's game), Bill Murray, who returned for the first time after an injury; McCall, Paul Martin, Brennan, Bill Flynn, who had an interception, and Todd Veale."

Asst. Coach Peter Chella who handles the offense with Mark Conroy, was a little disappointed in the offensive line, which had been so great in the first three games.

"They threw a lot of variations against us and the boys just couldn't seem to get going," he said. "Paul Bandera blocked well and Tom Rand and Howie Chadbourne also played well."

Fitzgerald praised the punting of Picot, who was forced into doing the kicking when Ron Pettinelli was sidelined due to an injury suffered in practice. "Outside of the one which was blocked, he did an excellent job," the Quincy coach said.

In the opening period Picot punted and it appeared Waltham would be pinned deep in its own territory but Rick Cacciatore blocked the kick, and the ball bounced into the hands of Dave Lelievre, who raced 45 yards for the touchdown.

In the second period John Kohler recovered a fumble on Quincy's 17 and Matt Corbett scored the second TD from the one. Quincy's line broke through and blocked both conversion kick attempts. In the last period another Quincy fumble gave Waltham the ball inside the Presidents' 10 but on the next play Matthews, a defensive standout in every game, hit the Waltham ball carrier with a bruising tackle and he fumbled the ball back to Quincy.

"If we had scored in the first half after Brennan's run, it could have made a big difference," Fitzgerald said.

It appeared Brennan, who has six touchdowns, was on his way to another only to be brought down at the two and time ran out.

Bantam A's Rack Up 3 Wins

The Quincy Bantam A hockey team rolled to three wins during the past week, the latest a 15-1 breeze over Neponset. Scott Messina sparked the offense with four goals, while Bob Lynch and Dennis Croke each had the hat trick. Other goals were scored by Danny Shea, Frankie Reynolds, Steve Denelsbeck, Dick Tapper and Frank McGrath.

Shea had five assists, Reynolds four, Tommy Benson, Croke and Denelsbeck three apiece. McGrath, Danny Kelly and Lynch two each and Tapper, Dean Phillips, Kevin White and Messina one each. Shawn Cunningham excelled in goal and Lynch and Tommy Schofield played well on defense.

The Bantam A's edged Milton,

2-0, with goalie Timmy O'Connell earning the shutout. White and Phillips scored the goals.

Earlier the team had squeezed by Randolph 3-2, with Reynolds scoring twice and Benson once. Cunningham had another good game in goal.

Oct. 18 At Vo-Tech Gym

Government Officials Invited To Air Noise Hearing

Two senators, a governor, a cabinet member and a congressman have been invited to hear expected protests from Quincy residents against the noise of airplanes departing from Logan Airport.

The hearing has been announced by Mayor Tobin and Bernice Mader, chairman of Citizens Against Airplane Noise (CAAN), for the Vo Tech School Gym Thursday, Oct. 18, at 7 p.m.

Involved in the hearing will be a draft environmental impact statement prepared by the FAA which recommends takeoffs at a bearing that impacts Quincy, Milton and southern sections of Boston.

Those invited include Sens. Edward M. Kennedy and Paul S. Tsongas, Gov. Edward J. King, Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt, Cong. Brian J. Donnelly, FAA Administrator Langhorne M. Bond.

Quentin Taylor, assistant FAA administrator; Robert E. Whittington, regional director for the FAA, John Mattson, chief of the Air Traffic Division; and Lawrence Sullivan, regional counsel.

Tobin and Miss Mader warned in a leaflet that "this is your only opportunity to make your complaints official and demand an over-the-ocean route."

"Remember, if we do not make them change their decision, the planes will fly over Quincy year after year after year. Pressure is the only thing that will make the FAA respond."

CAAN has been seeking an over-the-ocean pattern of takeoffs from Logan, which would bring noise relief to all communities.

An over-the-ocean pattern has recently been tested because of continual pressure on the FAA from citizens of the impacted communities and their elected officials," said Tobin and Ms. Mader.

Since the test has proven successful operationally, and no communities were disturbed by the noise, we want to make this the permanent route."

Federal Funding Eyed

$30 Million Needed To Upgrade Quincy's Ancient Water Mains

By TOM HENSHAW

It would take some $30 million over the next few years to bring Quincy ancient system of water mains up to snuff.

The estimate comes in the wake of charges made in Washington that the entire Northeast is being shortchanged by the federal government in the $4 billion it spends each year on water projects.

Two separate bills currently in Congress would up the Northeast's share from 6 to 13 percent and establish special funds to finance rehabilitation of water systems in depressed areas.

A study prepared by Nova Institute suggested that water mains should be replaced every 75 years and noted that the city of Boston is losing nearly half its water supply by way of leaky pipes.

Most of Quincy's 238 miles of water mains were put in prior to 1926 and some of Hancock St. date back to the later 1800s. Mains on School, Franklin and Scammel Sts. and Cleverly Court are vintage 1883.

"The city has spent a lot of bond money on water mains in the past few years," said Water Supt. Owen Eaton, "but we can't keep doing it. We have to find money somewhere else."

"We could spend about $30 million on water mains in the next few years."

Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti said Quincy does not appear to be losing water through leaks.

"I think we have taken care of all the problem areas through repairs," he said. "We know the locations of faulty mains and our replacement program seems to have negated leaks."

"Generally speaking, our system is pretty damn good even though we do have a lot of old mains."

"Replacement and repair work has to be done all the time," said Eaton. "I wish the federal government would realize the problems some of the older cities are having with water mains."

"They spend a lot of money for waste water rehabilitation but not much on the water systems themselves."

Pancake House Request For Later Closing Hours Continued

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The Quincy License Board continued for one week a request from the International House of Pancakes, 111 Washington St., for extension of its closing hours from 1 to 3 a.m. Fridays and Saturdays.

Paul and Tracy Morrison, of the Pancake House, had been granted a temporary extension of the closing time from 12 to 1 a.m. six months ago.

The extension was on a trial basis because of complaints from area residents of noise from the establishment late at night.

The Morrisons had said they needed the extra hours of business to keep the establishment going.

They reiterated that need and asked for additional hours at Tuesday's meeting.

Paul Morrison cited the high taxes they pay, among the top three or four highest of the 475 Pancake Houses across the country.

Area residents Tom McCabe and Maurice Hughes told the board there had been no improvement in the noise problems.

Hughes said that residents were not entirely in accord with the 1 a.m. closing, but it was certainly better than the proposed extension.

The matter was continued so that police records could be checked for complaints of noise from the Pancake House. Police Chief Francis X. Finn was absent from the meeting, as was Fire Chief Edward Barry.

The License Board also:

- Granted a request from South Shore Buick Co., 50 Adams St., for a permit to store 4,000 gallons of gasoline underground in addition to present storage. The installation must conform with Fire Department requirements.

- Robert Costello, of South Shore Buick, told the board that Buick is coming out with a diesel fueled car. The present 2,000 gallon storage will be used for diesel fuel, the additional 4,000 gallons, gasoline.

- Granted Our Lady of Good Counsel Rectory a one day all alcoholic license for a Christmas Bazaar Nov. 2, 6-10 p.m., in the church hall.

- Granted Channel Home Centers, 550 Adams St., a permit to store 550 gallons of Class A inflammables (paint, thinner, etc.) and 1,400 gallons of Class B inflammables, (oil based paints, etc.) in original containers.

The store, located at the site of the old Stop & Shop, will sell do-it-yourself home repair supplies.

- Granted a change of name from the Boston Harbor Marina Tennis Club to Boston Harbor Marina Room.

- Granted Robert Berry, of Berry's Coffee Shop, 499 Washington St., an extension of hours from 5 a.m. to 2 p.m., to 5 a.m. to 6 p.m., weekdays.

- Granted a request from the Sacred Heart Rectory to run a one-day flea market Oct. 13, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the school hall, pending approval of the health department with regard to selling food.

- Granted the Quincy Fathers Club permission to conduct a "Tag Day" Oct. 18 and 19.

- Granted a one-day all alcoholic license to Leo Cardarelli, of the Marine Corps League, for the annual installation of officers Oct. 13, 6:30 p.m. to midnight at the Fore River Club House.

- Granted a one-day all alcoholic license to Laborers International Union for a Christmas Dinner Dance Dec. 7, 7 p.m. to midnight, at the Fore River Club House.

The Ward 2 Civic Association will hold its annual "Candidates Night" Tuesday Oct. 16 at 8 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, Nevada Rd., Quincy Point.

Candidates for the offices of mayor, Ward 2 councillor, councillor-at-large and school committee will present their qualifications and their views on the issues facing Quincy during this 1979 election year. A brief question and answer period will follow each presentation.

Election of association officers for the year 1980 will take place after the "Candidates Night." Refreshments will be served at the end of the evening's formal activities.

$2,500 Average Package Over 3-Years

One Union Settles, Others May Follow

By TOM HENSHAW

The 450-member city employees union that deals for Public Works laborers and non-professional hospital workers has agreed to a three-year contract with wage reopeners based upon the city's ability to pay.

The first breakthrough in the long stalemated negotiations with unions representing 4,200 city employees was announced at City Hall Tuesday by Mayor Tobin and representatives of Local 1139.

Tobin indicated that other unions may follow the lead.

The money package in the agreement will mean about $2,500 per person, depending on length of service, under the contract which will run from July 1, 1979, to June 30, 1982.

The first wage increases will be Jan. 1, 1980 and are not retroactive.

Atty. James Shannon, the negotiator for the union, said the key to the settlement was in several visits he made to City Auditor Charles L. Shea and Treasurer Robert E. Foy III to examine the city's books.

"We negotiated in good faith and I satisfied myself that the city was negotiating in good faith," said Shannon.

"After analyzing the tax problems, the city has I could explain to the union that the financial bind the city is in was a true one, a realistic one. We approached the problem with that in mind.

"The union is delighted with the mutual reopener in our contract which says that when the city does better the mayor will entertain a reopener to improve our contract.

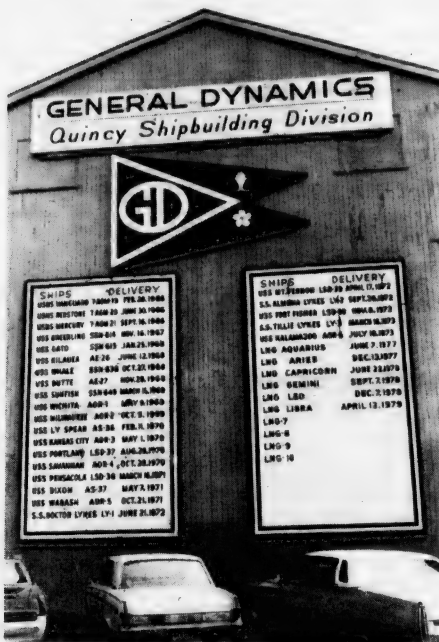

"It makes us feel as though we are a member of the family."

Tobin said he has a feeling that "we could be close to a settlement with one other union but I wouldn't want to say the wrong thing.

"The fire, police and teachers unions all have been down to the auditors office checking the books and none have disputed what we have been saying right along on the city's ability to pay."

The ratification vote by the union's membership, taken Monday night, was close, 117-96, with less than half the membership voting, and Shannon conceded

Tobin, Aides Seek Tax Help From State

Mayor Tobin and his top financial aides journeyed to the State House Tuesday to discuss financial problems and, said Tobin, "frankly to look for help from the state in fixing the tax rate."

Tobin's companions on the discussions were City Auditor Charles L. Shea and City Treasurer Robert E. Foy III.

They had meetings with Edward T. Hanley, secretary of Administration and Finance, and L. Joyce Hampers, commissioner of the Department of Revenue. Tobin described the visit as "very important."

Hanley and Hampers are key figures in giving state blessing to the city tax rate, which has yet to be announced, and Tobin said the Quincy folks had some "technical questions" to ask about certification.

Indications were that the technical questions revolved around what the city could or could not claim as estimated receipts.

Tobin said the meeting was arranged through the office of Gov. Edward J. King.

'Working To Rule'

QEA Asks Teachers To Boycott PTO Meetings, Other Activities

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Quincy school teachers are being asked by their union to boycott any evening and weekend school functions until contract negotiations are settled.

The policy was approved last Wednesday by the Quincy Education Association's Representative Council, according to QEA president Robert Garner. The council, which has about 70 members, sets policy for the union's 1,000 members.

PTO meetings, back-to-school nights, weekend field days, and special field trips which extend beyond the regular school day will be cancelled because of the boycott, Garner said.

The action taken by the teachers is known as "working to rule"—doing only that work which is required in the contract, and nothing more.

Garner, in letters to school principals, and PTO presidents said:

"The Quincy Education Association has voted that until a contract settlement has been reached, members will not participate in voluntary school-related activities on weekends, evenings or at any time that will be taken from our families.

"We will still be performing our usual tasks of providing students with extra help before and after school, correcting papers and preparing lessons.

"Fair-minded parents of Quincy would not expect teachers to surrender evenings and weekends while they have no contract and no raise."

QEA and School Committee negotiators have been unable to agree on a contract for the current school year. Teachers have been working on monthly extensions of last year's contract.

The contract talks are scheduled to go into the fact-finding phase soon, after having been certified as an impasse by the state-appointed mediator.

Disagreements in the negotiation center around a pay raise for school teachers, the method of conducting "RIF" (reduction in force) layoffs of teachers and a school committee proposal that teachers be required to work 45 extra minutes each day.

Better Mileage Claimed

Now You Can Tank Up With Gasohol

Quincy drivers have gotten their first "taste" of gasohol, and seem ready to order another round.

"Things have been working out very well," said Hugh Beagan, owner of Parkway Texaco, 500 Adams St. Beagan's station is the first in the city, and one of 10 in Greater Boston, to sell the gasohol on a trial basis.

Oil companies claim gasohol provides increased miles per gallon and better engine performance, as well as helping to spread out the nation's oil supply. The mixture consists of 90 per cent unleaded gasoline and 10 per cent alcohol, although you don't have to be 20 years old to pump it.

It's selling for one dollar, 98 cents per gallon at Beagan's station.

Early reports seem to bear out the oil companies' claims, Beagan said.

"People are telling me they're getting one or two miles per gallon better than they usually do," he said. In addition, because the octane is higher than in normal unleaded gas, many customers report their cars are running better, he added.

"A lot of people have been coming in to try it," Beagan said, "and a lot are coming back for seconds." Business has been up "significantly" since gasohol sales started last Tuesday he said.

Parkway Texaco was asked by Texaco to join the trial marketing of gasohol in the Boston area, which is expected to last about six months. Sales may be expanded after that trial period, he said.

Interest in the gasohol began to build even before the sales began. Some drivers, apparently, won't settle for anything less.

"One fellow drove up about two weeks ago and asked if we were selling the gasohol yet," Beagan reports. "When I said no, he just drove away."

License Board Grants Pancake House 2 A.M. Closing

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The Quincy License Board has granted the International House of Pancakes, 111 Hancock St., an extension of closing hours from 1 to 2 a.m. Fridays and Saturdays during the winter.

Paul and Tracy Morrison, owners of the Pancake House, had asked the board for a 3 a.m. closing hour at last week's meeting. They cited the high taxes they pay, among the highest of the Pancake Houses across the country.

Residents of the abutting apartment building had been against the extension of hours because of noise problems from the establishment late at night. The request had been continued so that police records could be checked for complaints against the Pancake House.

City Clerk John Gillis told the board Tuesday that there had been two noise complaints against the business in the past three months.

Paul Morrison told the board that he needed the extension of hours to keep the business going, and said as it is, he is working just to pay taxes. He also said he would be glad to cut back the Pancake House's hours to midnight if something could be done about the taxes.

Area residents Maurice Hughes and Charles Ross reiterated their opposition to the late hours because of the resulting noise.

Gillis told Morrison that City Assessor John Comer had spoken in his behalf, and Gillis said that something should be done to help Morrison.

Building Inspector Allan MacDonald said there are always problems when there are business establishments in residential areas. He said that Morrison's gripe should be more with the assessor's office than the license board.

Gillis said every business can't go to the assessor's office for tax abatements the city would go broke. He said the board should encourage, not discourage, business and suggested a compromise of 2 a.m. rather than 3 a.m. closing for the winter.

Hughes conceded that the noise problems are more prevalent in the summer than winter months. The two parties will meet April 1 with the license board to discuss summer closing hours.

A request from Sheila M. Trifone of Milton, for a beer and wine license for A Litre and Wedge, Wine and Cheese Shoppe at 30 Chestnut St., Quincy Sq., was continued for one week.

Atty. Richard Barry, representing Mrs. Trifone, said that the proposed business, along the lines of a Quincy Market type shop, has been discussed with Rev. Charles Stevens, pastor of neighboring Central Baptist Church.

A state law specifies that an establishment within 500 feet of a church, hospital or playground must have the approval of the church, hospital, etc. The board of trustees of the church will discuss the matter this week and inform the board of their opinion.

Austin Wickins, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, told the board he thought Quincy could use a facility of this type. Richard D. Chase, who has an insurance company on Chestnut St., sent a letter to the board opposing the shop.

In other matters, the board:

- Placed on file complaints against the Donna Marie Rooming House, 110 Billings Rd., run by Robert R. McManus, the Building Department inspected the premises and specified requirements have been complied with.

- Granted one day alcoholic licenses to the Local Order of Moose for a testimonial banquet, Oct. 20, 7 p.m. to midnight, and a capping Oct. 21, 3-7 p.m. at Fore River Clubhouse.

- Granted the Quincy Jewish War Veterans a permit to conduct a poppy drive Oct. 25, 26 and 27. Proceeds will go towards the organization's hospital program.

- Granted a one-day alcoholic license to the Committee to Elect Candidate for Councilor at Large Joseph J. LaRosa for Oct. 28, 4-8 p.m. at the Fore River Club House.

- Granted a one-day alcoholic license to the Merrymount Association for a "50's Record Hop" Oct. 19, 8 p.m. to midnight at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church Hall.

- Granted a one-day alcoholic license to Comeau's Softball Team for a Halloween Party Oct. 26, 7 p.m.-midnight at the Fore River Clubhouse.

School Committee May Face $1M Budget Deficit

The School Committee will meet Friday at 5:30 p.m. to discuss how to deal with a possible $1 million deficit in its 1979-80 budget.

Fuel, electricity, telephone and other increased expenses may lead to a $750,000 to $1 million overrun, according to School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon. Raises granted to school employees will add to that total, he added.

A hastily called Tuesday night meeting fell through because of the absence of Mayor Arthur Tobin, chairman of the committee. According to the state's open meeting law, a meeting may be held without 48-hour public notice only if all members of the board attend and sign a waiver.

Six of the committee's seven members attended Tuesday night's gathering. A representative of Tobin's office reportedly told the committee that the mayor could not attend because of business elsewhere. Thus, no business could be considered.

Tobin was in Boston Tuesday afternoon to confer with state officials on the setting of the tax rate.

Creedon told the committee last week that, although there had never been a budget deficit in his memory, "we're looking at $1 million now."

When asked by committee member John Sullivan how such an overrun would be dealt with, Creedon replied "I don't know, but we're going to find out, because we're certainly headed that way."

One of the possibilities to be discussed at Tuesday's meeting was a single supplemental budget request to Mayor Arthur Tobin to cover all of the unexpected expenditures, according to Vice-Chairwoman Patricia Toland.

The committee has already been rebuffed by Tobin on a previous supplemental request for $315,000 to fund increases negotiated with custodians, secretaries and teacher aides, after the department's budget was approved this spring.

The committee voted last week to pursue "all legal avenues" to seek funding for these three contracts, after the original request, submitted to Tobin in mid-September, was returned without approval.

Tobin warned the committee at its Sept. 27 meeting that any second request for the funding would be returned "twice as fast." The committee must either renegotiate those raises or fund the contracts out of the existing $33 million budget, Tobin said.

Committee members noted

Sheets To Meet With Residents On Traffic Problems

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets will meet with Southwest Quincy residents to discuss area noise and traffic problems Oct. 25, at 7:30 p.m. in the City Council Chamber.

The discussion will center around problems that occurred during the summer and into the fall.

The possibility of increasing police activity, and making Arthur Street One Way from West to East will also be discussed.

The committee also asked Creedon to find out if any money controlled by the committee is being held in bonds that could be used to fund the contracts.

Ex-POW Stratton Wins Meritorious Service Medal

Navy Capt. Richard A. Stratton of Quincy, who spent six years as a POW in Vietnam, has been awarded the Presidential Meritorious Service Medal for his work as commander of a nine-state recruiting district in the Midwest.

Stratton, who is now deputy for operations at the U.S. Naval Academy, was cited for "the professional knowledge, managerial ability, leadership skill and human understanding exhibited in the notable achievements of Navy Recruiting Area 5."

A 23-year Navy veteran, Stratton was assigned to the aircraft carrier USS Ticonderoga in 1967 when he was shot down over North Vietnam and held prisoner for six years until his release in 1973. He is married to the former Alice Robertson and they have three sons.

Life Might Be Beautiful If You Never Had To Borrow Money

Yes, if you had enough money to meet all your needs at all times, life could be much simpler for you. But most of us do not enjoy this financial freedom. For instance, the biggest purchase most of us make in our lifetime—the buying of a home—usually requires bank help with a mortgage.

There are, of course, other financial needs you may face from time to time, whether buying a car, remodeling your home, acquiring a yacht or just consolidating a lot of bills.

The Quincy Co-operative Bank would like to help you with your small loan problems. We hope you never have to borrow but when you do, don't borrow more than you need. And if you have a savings account with us, remember that you can get a passbook loan for only two percent interest above the passbook rate. That's the lowest interest you will ever pay on a loan unless your wealthy aunt gives you an interest free loan.

If a passbook loan is not possible, try our small loan services where we do our best to meet the needs of all credit worthy applicants. You may find that a small loan tailored exactly to your needs will solve your present financial problem. Call or visit the Consumer Loan Centers at our Main Office or at our Branches.

Josiah Quincy, for whom our Bank was named, founded co-operative banking to help people acquire homes. We know he would like what we are doing for people needing small loans.

Rehabilitation Center Staff Members Paper Featured At Conference

"Getting the Job Done—The Effect of Reinforcing Task Completion in a Sheltered Workshop," written by staff members of South Shore Rehabilitation Center, was a featured presentation at the Regional Conference of the recent American Association on Mental Deficiency.

Patricia Odjaghian, co-author of the paper, and a behavioral psychologist at the Rehabilitation Center, said sheltered workshops require clients to produce a minimum of 25 per cent of the production rate of an average piece-rate worker.

"We studied our clients at the Rehabilitation Center to determine the kinds of reinforcements necessary to help our workers to be more productive. We determined that praise for finishing a task rather than praise for merely attending to a task is an extremely effective method to increase productivity."

"This technique, simple as it may seem," she said, "has not been implemented on a practical basis with any other group of sheltered workers. Our study results are important because information shared with other professionals provides effective employment training for clients in all sheltered workshop environments."

The paper, co-authored by Ann Mahoney, was the culmination of one and a half years of training and research conducted in the vocational and pre-vocational programs of the Center.

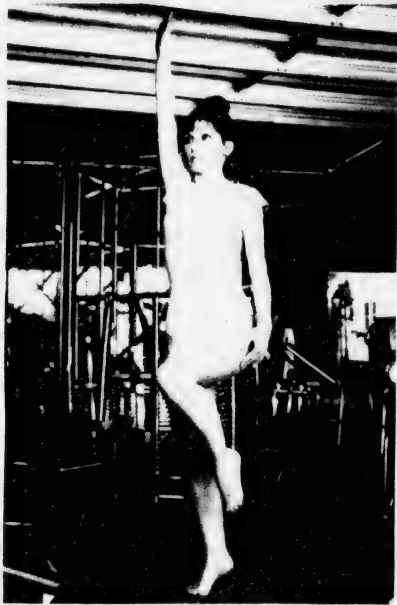

Another aspect of training the retarded to become productive workers was the subject of a presentation by Nancy Hollingsworth, coordinator of pre-vocational services at South Shore Rehabilitation Center. Her research findings were also presented at the conference. Her presentation reviewed methods of staff training to improve accuracy from clients in a pre-vocational training program.

Miss Hollingsworth explained, "Whatever the job a person does, that person must be accurate if he or she expects to be a good employee. We train staff to teach clients in the Rehabilitation Center that they are only allowed two errors for every 100 steps. This is the industrial norm and they can and should work to that expectation."

The conference was held at Waterville Valley, N.H.

SEDENTARY — OBESITY

Are you overweight? Have you tried every conceivable diet with little success? Then, perhaps, you are looking in the wrong direction. It is not the refrigerator that holds the answer, but rather your way of life.

Most obese persons live a sedentary life. If they're not sitting, they're driving. This sedentary lifestyle has been found to be more responsible for the vast obesity problem in this country than our eating habits. On top of that, studies show that inactive persons have a tendency to eat more than physically active persons — compounding the dilemma.

There's a simple way to illustrate this point. The National Research Council has set standard caloric intake charts in which 2300 calories per day is considered ideal for the sedentary man. But the very active man can get by with 4500 — almost twice as much. The only difference is activity or exercise.

There were times when children were adorned with jewelry because of the magic qualities of the stones. Romans thought that gold brought fertility and so designed gold rings for their baby boys. Victorians, on the other hand, wanted to keep something away from their children with their gems. They put coral or amber beads around the necks of their babies in order to ward off evil. For those of us who are not babies anymore, there is a stone that might be of special interest. It is the amethyst. It supposedly wards off drunkenness.

Your Dental Health

by Daniel P. Sweeney D.D.S.

The problem with refined sugar, making it a natural enemy of teeth, is that it is a favorite of the sticky coating of germs, called plaque, that often covers teeth. Plaque germs turn the sugar into acid which eats away at the teeth and gums. The acid dissolves the hard enamel coating of the teeth first, and, if not arrested, proceeds to attack the dentin [the layer beneath the enamel], and finally the pulp [the inside, soft tissue], ultimately causing great pain and loss of teeth. So avoid, as much as possible, foods with refined sugar, especially those that are sticky or take a long time to dissolve.

Good oral hygiene habits and the care of your teeth between visits to your family dentist are stressed at the office of Dr. Daniel P. Sweeney, D.D.S., 539 Adams St., East Milton Square. As a family dentist, Dr. Sweeney emphasizes the value of preventive dentistry. When you have regular dental checkups, small problems can be located and corrected before they become serious. Call Dr. Sweeney at 698-3636 for an appointment at your convenience.

Safety Suggestions For Halloween

Chairman John J. Lydon Jr. of the City Council's Public Safety Committee passes along the following suggestions to parents to make Halloween safe for their children.

The use of light-colored material for costumes, since dark fabric cannot be readily seen.

The use of reflective materials, tape or liquid, on the child's clothing and bags.

Clothes that are too loose could cause a child to fall. Tight-fitting garments are recommended.

Sharp instruments should not be carried. Cardboard replacements can be made easily.

Lighted candles should be avoided. A battery-powered flashlight is suggested.

Beware of face masks that are too large for a small child. These can block the child's vision or cause suffocation.

Warn children of obstacles such as lawn furniture, steps and the like.

Keep your front light on to aid all the children.

When the child returns make certain you go through the goodies, and make sure they consume only prepackaged items.

Caution children against overeating and make certain they brush their teeth after consuming the goodies.

Always have an adult accompany a small child.

United Nations Day To Be Observed Oct. 24

Robert C. Amerson, president of the International Visitors Center in Boston, will be honored Wednesday, Oct. 24, for his outstanding contribution to the children of Quincy.

Amerson will receive a citation from Mayor Lobin during United Nations Day ceremonies to be held at 12 noon on Constitution Common in front of the new City Hall Annex.

Fifteen foreign students from Eastern Nazarene College will be recognized with honorary citizens certificates from the Mayor during the day-long program.

The North Quincy High School Band will play for the festivities on the Common, the City Hall balcony will be decorated with flags of UN members and the UN flag itself will fly from the flagstaff.

The Rev. Keith Munson is chairman of city ceremonies marking United Nations Day, which has been so proclaimed throughout the city by Mayor Lobin.

The UN has designated 1979 to be the International Year of the Child.

Amerson, as head of the International Visitors Center, has directed many young visitors to Quincy schools, thus exposing the city's youngsters to the people and cultures of the world.

Also on tap for UN Day in Quincy:

A coffee reception at 9 a.m. will be held in the library with Director Warren Watson hosting Mr. and Mrs. Amerson and the students from Eastern Nazarene.

Rev. Banks To Retire After Record 25 Years At Bethany

The Rev. John D. Banks is retiring as minister of the Bethany Congregational Church, effective June 30, after 40 years in the ministry, the last 25 at the Quincy church.

He and his wife, Marie, who retired last June after 20 years as a teacher in Quincy schools, plan to move to Chapel Hill, N.C., the home of a married daughter, Mrs. E. Leland Webb.

Mrs. Jean Smart, the church moderator, said members of the church will hold a special meeting Nov. 4 to act on the resignation of Rev. Banks, who served the church longer than any other minister.

"I believe there was one old timer back in the 1800s who was here for 21½ years," said Rev. Banks. "I passed him about 3½ years ago."

A native of Hartford, Conn., Rev. Banks came to Bethany

REV. JOHN D. BANKS

Church in 1954 from the Hope Congregational Church in Springfield.

Prior to that, he spent 11 years in pastorates in Omaha and Fremont, Neb., where he also served a one year term as moderator of the Nebraska Congregational Conference.

He began his ministry at the Union Congregational Church in Richmond Hill, Queens, New York.

Rev. and Mrs. Banks have three children, Mrs. Webb, whose husband is a professor of dentistry at the University of North Carolina; Heather Banks, a writer for the National Heart, Blood and Lung Institute, Rockville, Md.; and Dr. Peter Banks at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.

Rev. Banks said he has no plans for his retirement, except that "I expect to be active in the community."

One of the attractions of Chapel Hill, he said, is that "residents have the privilege of using the University, the library and things like that. I'm looking forward to it."

Junior Choir Begins Season At First Church Of Squantum

The Junior Choir of the First Church of Squantum sang for the first time this fall during the Sunday morning worship service at the church.

The choir, which consists of 17 girls, from kindergarten through the sixth grade, sang the spiritual "Rock-a-My Soul."

The choir meets to rehearse at the church Thursdays afternoons from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Boys of the same age meet the same day at the church 3:15 to 4 p.m. Their group is the Boys' Choir; the church now has six different choirs.

The sermon preached by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, was the fifth in a series of Old Testament sermons on the first three kings of Israel. Others who took part in the service were Donald Frazier who gave the call to worship, Steven Williams who led the opening prayer, and Diane Linblad who read the Scripture for the morning.

Mary and Paul Gifford were the greeters. The coffee hour after the service was hosted by Lorraine Josselyn, Renee Johnson, Adelaide Nelson, Marsha Anderson and David Stohlberg.

The church will sponsor its second annual Christian Art Festival Sunday morning, Oct. 21. Those with art to be displayed should contact Hazel Mayne at 328-4367. The art may be viewed in the sanctuary immediately after the service which begins at 10:15 a.m.

Services Held For Laurence J. Curtin, 78, Political And Civic Leader

A funeral Mass was celebrated Monday at St. Joseph's Church, Quincy Point, for Laurence J. Curtin Sr., 78, who died last Friday after a long illness.

An insurance agent by trade, Mr. Curtin was a long-time political leader in the city, as city council president and mayoral candidate.

He is known by some as 'the father of Plan A,' the form under which the city is now governed. When Plan E, which featured a city manager and seven councillors elected at large, went into effect in 1949, Mr. Curtin led the fight to return to the traditional Plan A. Mr. Curtin left the present plan, which features a strong mayor and ward councillors, was more responsive to the people.

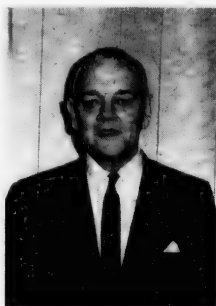

Mr. Curtin ran for mayor in 1957, the year that Plan A came back into effect, and lost to Amelio Della Chiesa by 3,300 votes.

He was first elected to the city council in 1931 and spent more than 10 years as councillor, several as president.

Mayor Arthur Tobin ordered city flags to be lowered to half mast in honor of Mr. Curtin and commented that he 'was a distinguished public servant of the city. He was quite an orator and always spoke out for what he believed.'

State Senator Paul Harold made the following remarks on the floor of the Senate Monday, which were entered into the official records of the Senate:

"When Laurence J. Curtin, Sr.

LAURENCE J. CURTIN

graduated from Boston College, his Jesuit instructor told him to 'go out in the world and be a part of it.'

"That's exactly what he did, and for Laurence Curtin, his world was Quincy. For more than half a century, he was vitally involved in the public affairs of his city, and the name Curtin became synonymous with integrity, dedication, and civic pride.

"He was one of the most articulate municipal officers in recent history, and used this talent (whether in office or out) to insure that the voice of the people was heard on important issues.

"One of those issues was the very form of government under which Quincy should operate. With dogged determination, he worked to return the Plan A (Mayor-Council) form of government to Quincy -- because 'it was more responsive to the average citizen.' His ultimate legacy is the very form of government under which the 90,000 people of Quincy are governed today.

"Those of us who knew Laurence Curtin will long remember him as someone who served as a model in encouraging young people to become involved in government, and run for elected office. He has set a standard of excellence that will be the measure of men for many, many years to come."

Mr. Curtin received bachelor's and master's degrees from Boston College, and taught for many years in Boston schools. He worked as an insurance agent for 51 years for Connecticut General.

He was founder and former president of the Quincy Citizens Association, past grand knight of the Quincy Knights of Columbus, former president of the St. John's Holy Name Society and office holder in the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters.

He is survived by his wife, Margaret L. (Brown) Curtin; two sons, Laurence J. Curtin, Jr. of Braintree and Peter A. Curtin of Napperville, Ill. and seven grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Brothers Home For Funerals, One Independence Ave. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

At Massachusetts Hospital School 'Christmas In November' Project Needs Local Help

The Massachusetts Association For Handicapped Children is looking for Quincy businesses, individuals and civic groups to help in a unique Christmas party for the handicapped children of the Massachusetts Hospital School called "Christmas In November".

The event is the second annual "Christmas In November," sponsored by the association, the Transportation Management Corporation and the Boston Fire Department.

The party for the 100 or so children at the Hospital School in Canton will be held Nov. 29 at Florian Hall in Dorchester. At the party the children will enjoy pizza, tonic, ice cream and cake and will be entertained by clowns and a band. They will also be presented with gifts to help their life at the school and make it a little easier or more enjoyable.

Last year six Quincy organizations contributed over $1,500 in gifts to the school's youngsters. They are the Koch Club, Quincy City Club, Morrisette Post, Probis Club of Quincy, North Quincy Knights of Columbus and Sabina's Beauty Salon.

Also assisting in the party are the Transportation Management Corporation, which helps arrange the 30 vans, buses and station wagons to take the children from Canton to Dorchester and the Boston Fire Department, which donates Florian Hall for the night.

The Massachusetts Association for Handicapped Children was formed in Quincy in 1970 to help raise funds for a Quincy Point youth. It has grown since then and has adopted the Massachusetts Hospital School as its special project.

Paul Clasby of 20 Alvin Ave., Wollaston is president of the association. Former City Councillor Edward Graham, assistant superintendent of the Hospital School, is also a member.

Dukakis Presented Award At ENC

Former Governor Michael Dukakis was presented a Distinguished Service Award by Donald Irwin, president of Eastern Nazarene College, at the school's annual Heritage Day Chapel held recently.

The award was presented as part of a service commemorating the school's 60 years in the Quincy community.

Present for the service, along with the college board of trustees, faculty and administrators, were State Senator Paul Harold, City Councillors Francis McCauley, Steve McGrath and James Sheets, and Arthur Woodward, of the Quincy Public Schools.

The Heritage Day address was given by Dr. James Cameron, chairman of the Division of Social Sciences, professor of history, and member of the Quincy Historical Society's board of directors.

Dr. Cameron's address, "Eastern Nazarene College: The Decade of the 70's", noted the changes the college has undergone in the past 10 years while still remaining vital.

"This year... is the threshold for major advances in the life of the institution," he said.

City Solicitor Asked To Frame Motel Ordinance

The problem of two motels in North Quincy has been handed to the City Solicitor to see if he can come up with a valid ordinance to give the city more control over them.

The City Council's Ordinance Committee brought out such a proposal Monday night, took a brief look at it and put it back into committee so the Solicitor could work on it.

The proposed ordinance, introduced by Councillor Joanne Condon, would give the Licensing Board the power to license hotels and motels and lay down rules for their operation.

But Asst. City Solicitor Lawrence Cowley told the committee that he believed such licensing power would be "superfluous" and that it would be better to draw up an ordinance dealing with "peace and good order."

Mrs. Condon said the ordinance was aimed at two motels in her Ward 6 which have been the subject of a number of violations discovered but not remedied by state inspectors.

"I have petitions going back to 1978 against them," she said. "But we don't do anything about it. We must seek a way in which we can deal with them more firmly."

Lt. David Rowell of the Quincy Police said that "as head of the unit that handles problems like that, such an ordinance would be very helpful to us."

One Union Settles, Others May Follow

that there was opposition to the settlement within the union.

"It wasn't clearly voiced," said Shannon, "and I think there were some misconceptions. Actually, the raise did not come up to the rise in the cost of living and that was the reason for the close vote."

"Everyone in the union was notified of Monday night's meeting," said Richard Carnali, president of Local 1139. "We couldn't go to their houses and drag them out."

"We got a majority of those people who came down to vote. They bought the contract. What else can I tell you?"

John said the city is now at the negotiating table with Local 880, the hospital technicians, 150 strong.

"I understand that all the nitty gritty parts of the contract have been negotiated," said John. "Now they're starting to talk money."

Local 1139 was one of those unions that earlier agreed to a contract, subject to the eventual passage of a state tax cap on local spending.

"We have been at the negotiating table continuously ever since," said John. "It was only in the last week or 10 days that negotiations came to fruition. Some details were ironed out Tuesday morning."

"As the picture gets brighter down the line," he said, "and additional moneys come in we will be very willing to go back to the table with these people and see if we can make better offers."

"We are grateful they are viewing the picture as our ability to pay."

Members of Local 1139, said the Mayor, "happen to be at the lower echelons of the unions. They are the ones who are particularly caught up in this economic spiral."

William Girard Completed Navy Course

Navy Electronics Technician 3rd Class William R. Girard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice A. Girard of 954 Sea St., has completed the Naval Aids (NAVAIDS) technical Course.

The five-week course was conducted at the Naval Guided Missiles School, Dam Neck, Va. The course was designed to provide electronic technicians a review of the principles and theory of the Long Range Aids to Navigation (LORAN) system. The LORAN system is a worldwide network of radio transmitters that emit constant, fixed signals which enable navigators of ships and aircraft to pinpoint their exact location.

A 1967 graduate of Quincy High School, he joined the Navy in May, 1978.

2 Streets Optional For Pollard, Adams Schools

The School Committee made a minor change in its Quincy Point school boundaries after hearing a complaint from Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond and two area residents.

Two small streets off Quincy Ave., Quincy Terrace and Richard St., were made "optional streets". Residents of those streets may now attend either the Pollard or Adams schools.

Those two had been the only two in the neighborhood placed in the Adams School district and not in the Pollard district, Raymond said.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shea of Richard St. told the committee that their child was being denied the opportunity to take part in federally funded Title I programs offered at the Pollard School but not the Adams.

"I don't see why certain persons I represent should be denied an opportunity because they live on two small streets," Raymond said.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon said that "socio-economic" factors - like median family income - were taken into account when setting the district boundaries for the federally funded programs. He added that he would not recommend a change just for the purpose of allowing one family to take part.

"The federal government would not look kindly upon that," Creedon said.

In other business:
- The committee voted to accept the 1980-81 budget from Creedon at its first meeting in January. The traditional November date for submitting the budget is "unreasonable," Creedon said. The budget, prepared so far in advance, is frequently out of date by the time it takes effect, Creedon claimed.

The budget is traditionally approved by the school committee by March and the city council by May.

The committee voted to name the Pollard School library in memory of the late Mrs. Mary Grogan, former principal of the school. The request was made by members of the Pollard School community. Creedon called the move "a very appropriate decision."

'Draft Kennedy' Move Here Oct. 25

It isn't exactly a catchy handle: "The Committee For A Democratic Alternative."

But the bottom line is: "Draft Kennedy."

The committee will meet Thursday, Oct. 25 at 8 p.m. at Morrisette Legion Post, West Quincy to discuss how to get Senator Edward Kennedy onto the ballot in next March's Massachusetts Presidential primary.

All interested Democrats are invited says State Senator Paul Harold, who will co-host the get-together. Co-host with him will be Frank Every, president of the International Brotherhood of Machinists Union local.

The Machinists have been in the forefront of the nation-wide "Draft Kennedy" movement.

Under federal election fund-raising regulations, the committee had to take its prosaic name because Kennedy isn't an announced candidate although he is acting like one.

No one is making any effort to disguise the committee's aim.

On the front of the committee's brochure is a photo of Kennedy with the caption: "Kennedy: The Democratic Alternative in 1980." Kennedy bumper stickers will be sold at the meeting to help pay the hall rental.

Topics to be hashed out at the meeting, according to Harold, will be petitions urging Kennedy into the race, lining up Kennedy workers for the coming months, fund-raising and delegate selection.

The organization is set up along the lines of the Congressional districts because that's how the delegates are chosen.

"The idea is to get the thing set up now," Harold said.

ARTHUR DROHAN, the "Mayor of West Quincy" sends along a news clipping reporting the intended wedding of Quincy's Ruth Gordon and movie director Garson Kanin. The clipping, written by Drohan for the then Quincy Patriot Ledger is dated Nov. 30, 1942. Kanin was then an Army private and, of course, World War II was on. Kanin noted he had known Miss Gordon for a long time but apparently, because of the war and her career, the pair had trouble getting together for the wedding. The article also notes Miss Gordon's movie roles as Mary Todd in "Abe Lincoln In Illinois" and as Mrs. Ehrlich in "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet." (And you're a young oldtimer if you remember seeing those movies first time around.)

Drohan, of course, has long owned Drohan's News Agency. But did you know he served in the City Council in the 1930's?

PRESIDENTIAL THEFT: Lawrence Yerdon, director of the Quincy Historical Society, sends along a placemat from the Hanover House-Motor Lodge and Restaurant in Hanover County, Virginia. It proudly claims Virginia as the birthplace of nine presidents—Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, Wilson and John Quincy Adams.

"I was relieved," says Yerdon, "to find both the John Adams and John Quincy Adams birthplaces still on Franklin St., in Quincy."

DON McHUGH of Quincy reports an unusual sight in the wilds of Vermont—a bull chasing two Lions.

It happened like this, he says:

The Quincy School Department's Fred Nolan, a member of the Quincy Lions, and his wife Joanne invited two couples to their Newfane, Vt., chalet for a weekend of viewing of the foliage.

The couples were McHugh and his wife Gerry and Frank and Ann Evans. Evans is president of the Quincy Lions Club.

At one point, McHugh says, Nolan "decided to show Frank what a friendly Ferdinand-like bull they had on the farm next door to us."

"As they got closer, the bull became kind of unfriendly and they were forced to make a mad dash for the barbed-wire fence."

McHugh saved the day by hurling some apples at the angry bull (from the safety of the other side of the fence). The steer was sufficiently discouraged to give up the chase.

And, for the rest of the weekend, you couldn't have gotten them within 50 feet of Elsie the cow.

Chandler's Goal To Keep 'The W

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Owning a theater hasn't made Arthur Chandler rich yet, but it's rapidly turning him into a jack-of-all-trades.

Besides his normal work day as a civil engineer, Chandler puts in several hours each night at his Wollaston Theatre, learning the finer points of the movie business.

"I handle all the advertising," says Chandler, ticking off his duties. "I handle the payroll." He deals with the film brokers who line up movies for the theater, wielded a brush while repainting part of the "Wollie," has repaired some of the theater's chandeliers by hand and can usually be seen taking tickets in the lobby and sizing up the crowd.

"Plus," he adds, "I know how to pop corn now."

How did Chandler, who is 48 and employed by the Boston firm of Fay, Spofford and Thorndike, suddenly get into the movie business?

"I really don't know," he says. "When my wife and I first heard it was available, we said to each other, 'Gee, I wonder how much we could get it for?' Well, one question led to another."

"We felt that Quincy and Wollaston really should have a theater," he adds. While there was talk of making the site into a parking lot, or a mercantile mall, the Chandlers intended from the start to keep the Wollaston open.

"That's one of the reasons that Mrs. Harriet Sears, whose husband Edward built the theater in 1927, was willing to sell it to the Chandlers, he says.

Noting the theater's decora-

VACANT FOR 18 MONTHS, the Wollaston Theatre seemed forlorn in photo taken this summer. But... since Arthur Chandler reopened the Bea-tions and fixtures and its tradition which includes many great names in vaudeville performing here. Chandler says, "There's a lot of atmosphere here. It would be a shame to lose it."

Business has been "slow," Chandler says, since he and his wife Yvonne reopened the Wollaston this August. The theater had been closed for almost two years.

Crowds in the 1000-seat theater have been averaging between 300 and 400 on Friday and Saturday and much less on other nights. But, Chandler says, this reflects a nationwide trend in the movie industry, probably related to the economy.

"I call the figures into the distributor, and he says 'You're doing fine'. But I'm not satisfied."

Chandler hopes that as people become more conscious of gasoline conservation, Wollaston residents will get back into the habit of walking to the neighborhood theater, rather than driving to others.

Furthermore, he says, "I'd like to keep it a family theater, where

Decision On Custodians' Residency Requirement Delayed

The School Committee has put off a decision on whether or not to institute a residency requirement for the system's custodians.

No vacancies in the custodial ranks can be filled until the committee makes a decision on this point, warned Dr. Lawrence Creedon, superintendent of schools. Four vacancies now waiting to be filled are costing the department $1,500 each week in overtime, he added.

Two members spoke in favor of such a residency requirement.

"People who are hired for city jobs that we are paying, really ought to live in the city," said Joan Picard.

John Sullivan said that while it would be difficult to enforce a residency requirement for teachers and other professional specialists, the department's "blue collar" employees should be Quincy residents.

The committee's legal counsel, the firm of Murphy, Lamere and Murphy, has advised the board to proceed "very, very cautiously" on approving a residency requirement, Creedon noted.

Roemer Says Taxpayers Association Is Not Faltering

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Re: Page 2, The Quincy Sun, Thursday, October 4, 1979 article written by Tom Henshaw, "Faltering OTA Starts Drive For New Members."

Our membership as I stated is certainly below the figure of 25 or 30 years ago. However, I would like to take issue with the statement that we are faltering. We certainly are just as active in our duties and in our dedication as we were in yesteryear. Our Board of Directors and the membership are still comprised of all city functions, department by department, if they are interested.

We have the budgets of every department; the wage scales of all departments; we visit the city departments, we ask questions, we attend City Council meetings, we attend all public hearings, our membership is represented at School Committee meetings, we have the budgets of each department explained to us. Our meeting notices are given to the news media and we invite them to attend, we hold open meetings and invite interested citizens to attend. We were founded in 1932 the first taxpayers association in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and we helped to organize the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers, now known as The Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation.

We have been instrumental in the organization of many of community taxpayers organizations throughout The Commonwealth. In the past 12 years we have organized 11 in communities near to the city of Quincy. We have membership in the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation; the Boston Research Bureau; the National Homeowners Association; Tax Angles Inc.; We cooperate with civic groups throughout the Commonwealth that have the homeowners interest. We are presently cooperating with Citizens for Limited Taxation: an initiative petition; limit property taxes to 2 1/2% of fair market value, called proposition 2 1/2; petitions will be available within the next week.

We state now we are non-profit, non-political and non-partisan. The main object of this association is to secure and to insure an intelligent, economical and efficient expenditure of public funds and administration of the municipal affairs of the City of Quincy, with the fundamental principle being that the best possible use of the tax dollar be made.

a family can go out as a family for a night and afford it."

Chandler's policy is to change the features at the Wollaston twice weekly. This means older films, including some classics, are shown Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, while more current films are shown Wednesday through Saturday.

These older films include "Casablanca", which was shown recently and "The Last Hurrah", to be shown election week. Chandler hopes to screen "Oklahoma", "Finian's Rainbow" and "Hello, Dolly", among others.

More recent features include the likes of "Escape From Alcatraz", "Moonraker" and "The Main Event".

After passing papers for the theater in late spring, the Chandlers and a host of friends went to work cleaning and painting the long-vacant landmark.

The renovations aren't over yet, Chandler says. Improvements are still needed for many seats, the marquee and the sound system, among other areas. Chandler would also like to fix up the eight dressing rooms, for the occasional live productions he plans.

Now on the drawing board are performances by the Quincy Community Theatre, a series of weekly amateur talent nights (still in the talking stages) and other special events.

But, the improvements to make these things possible are part of a long process, he says. "All of these things take time and money," he says.

Most Local Tourist Sites Weathered Gas Crisis Well

Extensive advertising and the region's proximity to Boston helped many local tourist sites weather the summer's gas crisis, reports the Norfolk County Development and Tourist Council.

The council, in its survey of the county's $72 million tourist industry, found that, while attendance at the Adams National Historic Site was down, other attractions report business was up over last year.

The Adams Mansion reported a 33 percent drop in visitors in July and a 21 percent decline in August, the survey found. Overall, the historic site says attendance was down nine percent between April 19 and

Aug. 31.

On the other hand, historic First Parish Church had 3,463 visitors as of Labor Day, almost 200 more than last year.

Officials at both First Parish Church and the Quincy Historical Society at Adams Academy both credit their closeness to the MBTA Red Line with keeping up the flow of tourists throughout the summer.

Motels, which depend more on the leisure traveler, seem to have been affected more by the gasoline tightness.

Mrs. Lena Strout, owner of the President City Motel and the Winfield House, said business at both were "way off," this summer.

Commenting on the survey, John Nourse, executive director of the Norfolk County Development and Tourist Council, said the county's ability to weather a gas crunch attests to the strength of the tourism industry here.

"Tourism both helps and is helped by the large business and college sectors. This mix creates a very strong economic base for us in the development business," says Nourse.

Norfolk County now ranks fifth among state counties in both travelers' expenditures and number of visitor-days, according to recent figures compiled by the University of Massachusetts.

Incumbent Is Incumbent

Judge Reuben Lurie decided that City Clerk Donald P. Crane acted correctly when he ordered the names of incumbents printed first on the ballot along with the notation "candidate for re-election."

Judge Lurie ruled that a petition brought by Joseph P. McDonough, a candidate for the City Council, was without merit.

McDonough alleged that, since the form of government in Quincy was changing from Plan E to Plan A at the end of the year, the Plan E councillors could not claim to be incumbents under Plan A.

$53,000 SCHOOL ERROR

City Manager Edward T. Lewis and city officials were seeking to rectify an error in addition that resulted in a $53,000 underestimate of the cost of pilings for Atlantic Junior High School.

The contract was placed for 12,500 linear feet of piling at a cost of $49,200 when the actual amount was 25,200 linear feet, which came to a price of $102,112.

A spokesman for the engineering firm conceded that the mistake was one of simple addition.

BALDUCCI SHINES IN DEFEAT

Noel Balducci ran 75 yards for a touchdown and also recorded gains of 26, 16, 15 and 13 yards but his Quincy High School football team lost to Malden, 23-14, its second defeat in four games.

CITY SEEKS LABORERS

The city of Quincy was faced with a shortage of laborers that was underscored when three garbage trucks were immobilized because there were not enough men to man them.

When the call went out to 239 men on the Civil Service list only 20 responded and all were hired.

The shortage of workers was blamed on the fact that Quincy paid such low wages for laborers, who received $57.20 a week to start and worked up to $68.75 a week after five years service.

WORK STARTS ON NUCLEAR SHIP

Production work was underway at Bethlehem Steel Co. Fore River Shipyard on the first nuclear-powered surface vessel, a guided missile cruiser. The keel was scheduled to be laid in the spring.

$14,000 Revitalization Study Sasaki Report To Be Presented At Oct 30 Meeting

The long-awaited $14,000 report by Sasaki Associates on the revitalization of downtown Wollaston will be presented to the community Tuesday, Oct. 30, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wollaston Methodist Church.

On hand to explain the report will be Alan Ward and Ken Bassett, who have worked on the project for Sasaki, as well as Planning Director James Lydon and Richard Mead of the Planning Department.

City Councillor Stephen J. McGrath said some 50 or 60 people from the Wollaston community are expected to attend the meeting to hear the report and add their own comments and suggestions.

Finishing touches are right now being put on the final report, said McGrath, but a preliminary view showed "several things that can happen if a number of other things come together."

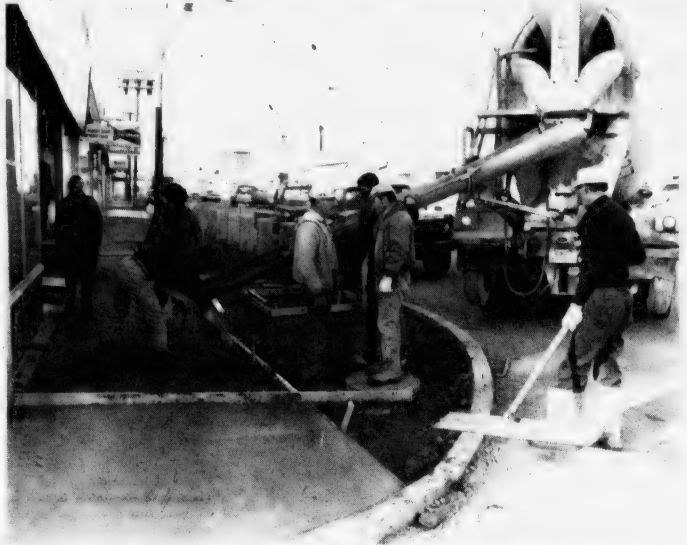

"It really depends on a lot of people working together, the community, the businessmen and the city," he said.

"Some of the things would take a significant sum of money and it will depend upon how much the businessmen want to contribute on their own stores for rehabilitation as well as how much the city can contribute."

"Right now, Wollaston as such is not a target area (for federal developments grants) although we have been working to have it designated as such."

"But there is also money around, not in outright grants but sources of funding that businessmen can take advantage of or the city can take advantage of."

The $14,000 cost of the report was divided equally between a Community Development Block Grant and the Norfolk County Development and Tourist Council.

Condon Seeks To Ease Condominium Objections

City Councillor Joanne Condon has scheduled a meeting Monday, Oct. 22, with Building Inspector Allan F. McDonald and Fire Chief Edward F. Barry in an effort to iron out their objections to a 176-unit condominium project proposed on Quincy Shore Drive in Atlantic.

The objections by the Building Inspector and the Fire Department surfaced at a joint hearing by the Planning Board and the City Council Oct. 9 at which 23 persons were recorded in favor and none against, although two nearby residents voiced concern about flooding and traffic problems.

Mrs. Condon, who has negotiated a number of changes in the plans for the condominiums since the project was first proposed a year ago, said the appearance of McDonald and Deputy Fire Chief Carl V. Valenti in opposition was "kind of a curve I didn't expect."

Valenti said Chief Barry was opposed to the plans because he did not feel that the means of escape from the third floors of the buildings were adequate in case of fire. The two doors required by state law for egress were too close together, he said.

McDonald voiced a similar complaint, noting that residents would have to leave by way of another apartment in case of fire. He said he would not issue a building permit unless better egress were planned. He recommended stairways that could be used by two apartments.

The 12.7 acres at 124-168 Quincy Shore Drive, on which the buildings, known as townhouses, are planned is zoned for Planned Unit Development (PUD), which means that approval from the City Council and the Planning Board must be obtained for the project.

Mrs. Condon said the next step in preparation for the project is to work out amendments to the PUD, "such as being assured that all taxes have been paid and any water problems can be mutually worked out."

"I'm sure we can also work out amendments to deal with Allen McDonald and Chief Barry so that the plans will be acceptable to them," she said.

"It would appear that everyone else is in agreement and it will go through. I would say that it's in good shape, better shape than it has been in the initial stages."

Atty. Richard W. Barry, counsel for Quincy Shore Nominee Trust, the owners of the property, told the hearing that when the property was originally purchased it was zoned Business B and Industrial and it was planned to build 376-unit high rise on the site.

There was so much adverse reaction to the proposal, said Barry, that the owners willingly sat down with Councillor Condon and worked out a zoning change to PUD, even though they could have built the high-rise without going through the Planning Board or the Council.

As a result of negotiations, the project became one of 173 units in 16 buildings with the exterior walls of steel and brick and the interior walls of cement blocks capable of two-hour fire retardation.

The third floor units were designed by architect Moritz Bergmeyer with a walkway between units consisting of sliding doors with a porch as a means of reaching the ground level in case of fire.

Barry said the state building code requires only one-hour fire retardation. He said it is planned to place the buildings 40 to 50 feet apart instead of the 30 feet originally planned. He added that state building code adopted by the city does not require a second egress from the third floor.

Also speaking in opposition to the plans were Ray McKay of 220

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION of the 176-condominium development proposed for Quincy Shore Boulevard in North Quincy.

Quincy Shore Drive, who was concerned with its effect on the water table, and Edward Roberts of 59 Atlantic St., who urged the Council to address possible flooding and traffic problems.

John A. Sullivan and Ralph

Bruno are trustees for Quincy Shore Nominee Trust and O'Connell Brothers Construction Co. of Quincy are the developers.

It is part of the bylaws of the Montclair Men's Club to endorse members in good standing for public office.

An Italian Night will be held at the Clubhouse Saturday, Oct. 27 with spaghetti dinner at 7:15 p.m. followed by dancing to the music of the Melodic Moods Orchestra.

Tickets may be reserved by calling William Beresiewicz at 472-6694, or Leo Doyle at 328-8030, or Bob Rice at 773-9376. Deadline for reservations is Sunday, Oct. 21.

Presidential Candidate Anderson To Speak At Chamber Breakfast

Cong. John B. Anderson (R-Ill.), the third-ranking Republican in the House and a candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, will be the speaker Tuesday, Oct. 23, at 7:44 a.m. at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce breakfast at the Lantana in Randolph.

Anderson, who is chairman of the House Republican Conference and a senior member of the Rules Committee, is the third presidential candidate to appear at a recent chamber function, following ex-Gov. Ronald Reagan of California and Sen. Howard Baker (R-Ienn).

The breakfast meeting at the Lantana is open to Chamber of Commerce members only.

Raymondi Seeks Reflectors To Improve Highway Safety

City Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi has asked Police Chief Francis X. Finn to see about installing white reflectors in some of the roads in Quincy as a safety measure.

Raymondi noted that a new program for the installation of such reflectors has been started by the state and is part of a state and federally funded highway safety program.

The reflectors are set into the pavement to enable drivers to see the traffic lanes at night and during inclement weather.

Many areas of his ward would benefit from the reflectors, Raymondi said, and so would other sections of the city.

Setting Goals For Schools Top Priority, Says Toland

Patricia Toland, a candidate for re-election to the School Committee, says she considers the setting of goals for Quincy schools to be the most important accomplishment of her four years on the board.

"Goal-setting is an important function of the School Committee if we are to do more than just react to materials, ideas and recommendations placed before us," she told a coffee hour at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Noble, 14 Myopia Rd., Wollaston. "Goal-setting makes sense, no matter what we do in life, whether we run a home or a multi-million dollar business. It means that one identifies needs and issues and sets priorities and goals for addressing those needs.

"In this way, the School Committee can make long-range plans and invest time and careful thought in seeking the objectives agreed upon.

"To be opposed to the concept of goal-setting would seem to me to be saying that we do not value identifying long-range needs and then working towards their solutions."

She said the School Committee, at her recommendation, has held several goal-setting meetings which have identified such aims as improvement in the reading program at the secondary level, developing a basic skills program.

Also considering staff evaluations; considering the concept of grade level expectations at which children should have mastered certain basic skills; and expanding vocational opportunities in terms of the general job market.

Taxpayers Cannot Afford Pay Raises For Teachers, Says McDuff

Quincy's homeowners can't afford the tax increase necessary to fund a pay raise for school teachers, says John H. McDuff, Jr., candidate for the School Committee.

McDuff said that, although he sympathized with school teachers' desire for a pay increase, he would, if elected, "vote against anything, that would increase the tax rate."

McDuff added, in a recent statement:

"In an election year it is customary for professional politicians to use lots of double-talk to avoid alienating persons on either side of an issue. This is why voters end up angry and frustrated when they see elected officials supporting measures they had seemingly opposed during the campaign. This is why faith in our leadership is steadily diminishing. I don't believe in double-talk, and I don't believe in hedging on the issues.

"Philosophically, as a conservative, I am opposed to the sky-rocketing cost of government. Pragmatically, as a taxpayer, I'm in the mood to slash taxes, not to increase them. I can understand the feelings of the teachers, but they, as workers and homeowners themselves, must understand the mood of the taxpayers. We have had it. A dry cow can't give any more milk.

"With school enrollment declining, we will need fewer teachers in the years ahead. As teachers leave or retire from the system, the money saved can be used to raise the salaries of the remaining teachers without a tax increase. During the next two to four years, however, I would resist any attempt to raise salaries, since such raises could only be accomplished by adding to an already unbearable tax burden. I call upon the other candidates to speak out as clearly on this issue as I have, avoiding political double-talk, and telling the voters exactly where they stand. If they will not do so, the voters should reject them soundly in November."

Conroy Would Make Testing Corporations More Accountable

Patrick J. Conroy, a candidate for School Committee, proposes legislation to make large testing corporations, like the Educational Testing Service (ETS), more accountable to test takers.

Conroy said Rep. Michael Morrissey will introduce the bill for him in the upcoming legislative session. Conroy said he intends to ask the other members of the Quincy delegation to co-sponsor the measure.

The proposed legislation is modeled after the Truth-in-Testing bill, developed by the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPiRG), that was enacted in New York earlier this year.

The bill requires the marketers of college admissions tests to:

1. Disclose the questions and answers to their tests 30 days after the test scores are reported.
2. File with the state, for public review, results of all internal studies analyzing test data for such factors as reliability, validity, and cultural bias.

3. Supply test-takers with information concerning the purpose of each test, the relationship of test scores to admissions or acceptance standards; policies covering scoring errors, length of time that test scores are kept on file, and the relationship between test scores and predicted performance.

Conroy hopes this legislation will bring about public awareness of standardized testing and its limitations.

Conroy said: "It's important to remember in this era of increasing reliance on standardized and multiple choice tests, that the goals we set for kids in school - reading, writing, calculating, and thinking - can't be measured accurately by a 'multiple guess' test."

Displays, exhibits and information will be included in the fair which is free of charge.

Quincy was one of the first municipalities in Massachusetts to establish an Energy Conservation Office.

It was also one of the few communities to take action on Governor Edward King's edict during the summer gasoline crisis.

Bike Ride For Diabetes Raises $560 In Pledges

Richard J. Koch, Jr., general chairman for the 1979 Quincy Bike Ride for Diabetes, announces that a total of $560.50 was realized in pledges for the race conducted Sunday.

Michael Wilson of Braintree was the top money collector with $278.50 collected and pledged. Wilson cycled to the West Coast last year.

Janet Blair was second with $75. Marilyn Nestor third with $60.

In a three way tie for fourth spot, Mrs. Linda Bowes, Robert Woods and Debra Ewing each had $50 pledged by sponsors.

Koch said the cold weather deterred some possible participants in the race which began at Pageant Field.

Merry Mount Park, and continued for 10 miles throughout the city.

Assisting Koch with the event were Gary Cuniff, Joseph Koch and Anthony T. Delmonico.

Proceeds from the bike ride, which was one of 15 conducted that day throughout the state, go to the American Diabetes Association for research, education, detection and a campership program.

Those unable to participate in the bike ride that would like to assist the various programs may send checks, payable to the American Diabetes Association, to the American Diabetes Association New England Affiliate, 377 Elliot St., Newton Upper Falls.

Energy Conservation Fair Saturday

The Quincy Energy Conservation Office will sponsor an Energy Conservation Fair Saturday, Oct. 20, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. at the Quincy Vocational Technical School gymnasium Woodward Ave. and Russell Park.

Richard J. Koch, Quincy Energy Conservation director said the Energy Conservation Commission and its committees have decided that a program combining education and entertainment is one of the most effective ways of informing the people as to the importance of energy to all and the absolute need for its conservation whenever possible.

In conjunction with the Energy Fair, a week of extensive activities including seminars, assemblies and meeting will be conducted starting Oct. 14 and will be completed with the Fair on Oct. 20.

Purpose of the energy Conservation Fair is to provide Quincy residents with an opportunity to learn about various energy conservation technologies and their current applications. The program will feature outdoor exhibits, film and slide programs and the distribution of literature pertaining to energy conservation at no cost to the public.

The booths and displays at the exhibit will be staffed by persons trained in a variety of occupations pertaining specifically to energy in a number of areas including electricity, gas, solar energy, home insulation, wood burning stoves and information on practical methods of energy conservation.

The Federal Office of Energy, Massachusetts Office of Energy and Quincy Energy Office will each provide personnel at the fair to answer questions or provide information.

Lt. Governor Thomas O'Neil's Office is working closely with the Quincy Energy Office in the program. The Quincy Energy Office will provide an information booth at the fair while the Quincy Fire Department will have a Fire Prevention Display.

Robert Trankis, Office Manager and Field Representative of the Quincy Energy Office is coordinating the energy conservation program. Committee members include Robert Woodman, Joseph E. Burke and Richard Meade assisted by Vincent P. Sullivan and Frank Terranova.

The Quincy Energy Office located at the Park and Recreation Complex, 100 Southern Artery, Merrymount Park, was established by Mayor Arthur Tobin and the City Council in an effort to assist the public during the energy crisis.

Good Foliage Viewing Right Here In Quincy

You don't have to take a long drive to observe spectacular foliage, says Richard Koch, executive secretary of the Quincy Park-Recreation Board.

Quincy offers several fine locations for viewing the foliage, which is expected to peak this coming weekend, he said. Persons unable to drive long distances because of physical problems, the energy crunch or other reasons can observe the changing of the colors within a few minutes of Quincy Center, Koch says.

Koch offers the following suggestions:

- Pageant Field in Merrymount Park offers an excellent view not only of the trees within the park, but also of Quincy Bay. The park is located off Route 3-A, the Southern Artery. Faxon Park in South Quincy is set in a heavily wooded area which overlooks the Town River section of Quincy, including Faxon Commons, 1000 Southern Artery and the General Dynamics shipyard.

- Squaw Rock in Quantum features clusters of white birch, used by Indians in the area centuries ago, as well as a variety of other trees. A fine view of the Boston skyline, including U-Mass Boston and the Kennedy Memorial Library, and the harbor islands, is also available.

- Faxon Park and Pageant Field both feature picnic and restroom facilities, Koch noted.

- The MDC's Blue Hills Reservation, with its hundreds of acres, is also convenient to Quincy drivers, Koch said.

Thayer Alumni Homecoming Saturday

The Thayer Academy Alumni Association will hold its first homecoming celebration Saturday, Oct. 20 on campus, highlighted by a field hockey game pitting the alumnae against the varsity.

Helen Hixon, retired director of girls' athletics, will coach the alumnae team.

There will also be a soccer game against Tabor Academy, a cross country meet with Milton Academy at 1 p.m. and the annual Milton-Thayer football game at 2 p.m.

Those attending will also have an opportunity to view an exhibit of oil paintings in the Thayer Academy Gallery by John Arapoff, class of '55, a nationally known artist.

The Thayer Academy Parents' Club will sponsor a "treasure trade" sale and there will be a wine and cheese reception in the tent following the football game, featuring the barbershop quartet "The Ship and Shore Four."

Holiday Bazaar At St. Coletta's

A Holiday Bazaar featuring low cost Christmas gifts, baked goods and special children's attractions will be held Nov. 2, from 4 to 9:30 p.m. and Nov. 3, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Braintree St. Coletta Day School.

The bazaar, sponsored by the Braintree St. Coletta's Guild, will also include hourly drawings, jewelry displays and a giant eight foot Christmas stocking filled with children's toys.

A country kitchen will serve food throughout the two days. For more information, call 848-6250.

Presidents Hope To Harpoon Whalers

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy's football team played another bruising running game last Saturday and ground out more than 250 yards but, despite that and another outstanding defensive performance, the Presidents were pressed to defeat Newton North, 13-7, in a Suburban League game at Veterans Memorial Stadium and improve their record to 4-1.

"We can never seem to win an easy one," Coach Tom Fitzgerald said as he looked forward to Saturday's 1:30 p.m. non-league game with New Bedford at the stadium. "We always seem to make it hard for ourselves. We handed them a touchdown today and had to hold them off at the end."

Despite New Bedford's 1-4 record, Fitzgerald expects trouble this week.

"We saw them lose to Dartmouth, 21-14, but they had a lot of bad luck," he said. "They look like a pretty good football team." The Whalers have defeated only Catholic Memorial, 16-0, while losing to Dartmouth, Scituate, 12-0; Chicopee, 22-6, and Taunton, 20-0.

Quincy's biggest problem this fall has been snapping the ball back to the punter. It has cost the Presidents in nearly every game and last week gave Newton North its only touchdown. With Mark Picot back to punt, the ball sailed far over his head and Newton had the ball on Quincy's five from where it scored two plays later to tie the game at 7-7.

Co-Capt. Tommy Brennan had another banner day as he ran for 147 yards on 28 carries and in five games has amassed an amazing 695 yards.

However, he received plenty of help last week as Ed Iodice ran for 60 yards and Danny Goldrick, who continues to block well, added 44. Quincy once again stuck to the ground with Dave Austin throwing only three passes and completing one for seven yards.

Waltham, playing without ace runner Gary Frechette, the school's all-time top ground gainer, out with a bruised hip, was unable to mount a consistent attack as it was held to 83 yards on the ground and Quincy's secondary held Waltham's Dennis Berube to four for 14 for 27 yards. One of these came on pass interference, which put Waltham on Quincy's two.

"We have a good solid, hard hitting club," Fitzgerald said. "We should be winning some of these games more easily, but we have put ourselves in trouble. Newton is always tough. All the backs ran well and Austin did a good job at quarterback. We were able to control the ball and that made a difference and our defense was just outstanding again. They did a tremendous job of holding them when they had a first down on our two as a result of pass interference. And the offensive line did another super job."

This was the first time Quincy has beaten Newton since the teams have been in the Suburban League. The last Quincy win was in 1948.

Defensively Charlie McCall and Lou Matthews were particularly outstanding. McCall intercepted two passes, returning the first one 58 yards to set up the first TD. As usual, Matthews made numerous tackles.

"Matthews has to be just about the best defensive player around," said defensive coach Bill Maver, who was given the game ball by the players.

"McCall also did a fine job and also playing great defensive games were Bill Murray, who made a game saving tackle; Mike Petrillo, Chris Chevalier, Bill Flynn, Jim McNeil, Walter Kilgallon, Paul Martin, Ed Quinlan, Ed Mackey and Picot."

Asst. Coach Peter Chella was pleased with the offensive line and had good words for Fran Duggan in particular. He also singled out Howie Chadbourne, Tom Rand, Paul Bandera, who, according to Chella, played his best game; Geoff Cafilisch and Jeff Heath.

Quincy was unable to move after taking the opening kickoff and Picot, who continued to punt well, kicked to Newton's 40, the ball being returned to the Presidents' 39. After a Newton first down, McCall grabbed off a pass on his 10 and went all the way to Newton's 32.

Brennan, Goldrick and Iodice carried to the one and Austin scored on a keeper around right end. Ron Pettinelli kicked the point.

Newton recovered a Quincy fumble on the Presidents' 43 on the first play of the second period but Quincy held on its 23.

It appeared Quincy would hold its 7-0 lead to halftime but Newton got its big break on the bad pass from center with time running out.

After getting the ball on the five, Newton was set back five yards on a penalty but on the next play Berube swept left end for the touchdown and Noel Foley kicked the tying point.

Newton chose to kick off to start the second half and Quincy relentlessly drove down field with Brennan doing most of the ball carrying. The Presidents marched 63 yards and clicked off five first downs with Iodice going through the right side for 11 yards and the touchdown. A pass for two points was good but Quincy was penalized 15 yards and another pass failed.

Newton staged its one good drive of the game and picked up four first downs to reach Quincy's 11. McCall knocked down a pass but on the next aerial pass interference was called on the two. Newton scored but was penalized and then had two straight illegal procedure penalties. A great tackle by Murray saved the day and two passes went incomplete as Quincy took over on its nine.

Sports

The Presidents put on another good drive, going all the way to the Newton two but time ran out before Quincy could score an insurance touchdown.

Panthers Roll To 4th Straight, Apaches Move Up To 2nd

By JIM NABSTEDT

The Panthers rolled to their fourth straight Quincy Youth Football League victory Sunday with a 32-16 romp over the Raiders at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Kevin Cabez scored on runs of 30 and six yards for the Panthers and also had a two-point conversion. Bob Burns raced 66 yards for a touchdown and Bob Glidden and Mark Lamie scored on 20-yard passes from Cabez.

Pat Glidden, Billy Chaison and Chris Shaughnessy played excellent offense and Kevin Cameron, Gerry Britt and Tom Travers were strong defensively.

For the Raiders, Pete Andrew scored both touchdowns on passes from Dave Norton, one for 63 yards and the other for 45.

The Apaches took over second place by defeating the Elks, 22-14. Jim McNamara scored twice on Mike Ross galloped 92 yards, the longest run in the league this season, for an Elks touchdown and Jeff Jaffarian passed 55 yards to John Cacciatore for the other score.

The entire Apache line played well and dominated the game. Mike Gill led the runners with 60 yards, while John McGrath and Rick Reardon stood on defense. Mark Callahan played strong defense for the Elks.

The winless Sailors and Manets played to a scoreless tie and remained tied for last place.

Colin MacLeod, Pat MacDonough, Doug Murphy, Scott Coyne, Bill Donnelly, John Panaro, Mike Barry and Gary Curley were outstanding for the Sailors and MacLeod ran back a pass interception 40 yards. For the Manets Bill Stanley, Greg Hanley, Scott Dooley, Bob Campbell and Mark Cohen played well on offense and Joe Conti, Bob Carly and Stanley shone on defense. Shawn Glynn completed a pass to Doug Concannon for 50 yards.

Blocked Punt Downs Bulldogs

The Quincy Bulldogs' three-game Boston Park Football League win streak came to a disappointing end last Friday when the defending champion South Boston Chippewas took advantage of a blocked punt to squeeze out a 7-6 victory at East Boston Stadium.

The Bulldogs [3-2] meet the unbeaten Hanna Club [3-0-1]

Friday night at 7:30 at Casey Town Field in Dorchester.

The game with the Chippewas was played in a steady downpour which resulted in many fumbles.

The Bulldogs took the lead in the second period on a four-yard run by quarterback Bob Scibilia but Paul Dube was stopped on the try for the two extra points.

In the third quarter a Quincy punt was blocked and a Chippewa ran it back 12 yards to tie the score. The champions then kicked the winning point.

Quincy blocked a Chippewa's punt to put it on the South Boston four but the Bulldogs fumbled the ball back. With 44 seconds to go Quincy was on the Southie 12 but was stopped.

Graham-Less Raiders Face Tough Waltham

North Quincy's football team, showing steady improvement, won its second straight game last week but it was a costly victory as the Raiders lost their brilliant two-way captain, Leo Graham, for Saturday's big Suburban League game at Waltham.

Graham, one of the outstanding two-way backs in the league, injured his knee in the third period of last week's 14-6 league win over Weymouth North at Weymouth. The injury is not regarded as serious but it will keep him on the sidelines this week. He is expected back for next week's game with Brookline.

Waltham, which topped Quincy, 12-1 two weeks ago, breezed over Arlington, 40-18, last week, and has also defeated Brookline, 26-8, and Weymouth North, 22-12, while losing only a non-league game to Burlington, 20-16.

"It is rough losing such an outstanding player as Leo for one of our toughest games of the year," Coach Dave Burke admitted. "He has been doing a superb job both on offense and defense and he will be greatly missed. But, we'll just have to regroup and make some adjustments."

Graham, the team's defensive leader a year ago and again this fall, has also been the Raiders' leading runner and Burke said he will be working with Rick Anderson, who ran well last week; Dean Zoia and Joe Crifo, back off the injured list, to fill in on offense to team with Pat Carroll and Bob McCormick, both of whom ran well at Weymouth.

It will mean defensive coaches Ken McPhee and Jack Raymer will have to make adjustments on defense, where Graham has been the key man.

Last week's win was a big one

● Cross Country

North Boys, Girls In Twin Victories

This has been a lean year for the undermanned North Quincy boys and girls' cross country teams, but last Friday the hard work of both teams paid off with identical 22-33 wins over their Milton counterparts.

"It was great to see both teams finally win, as the boys and girls have been working very hard and shown great desire," Coach Lou Iozzi said. "We have been handicapped by a lack of people on both teams, but several more girls turned out recently plus a few more boys, which helped us against Milton."

John Barrett set a course record of 14:50 to spark the boys. He was followed by teammates Gary Morin (15:04) and Mike Ricciuti (15:05). Bill Timmons finished seventh and Jim Alban ninth.

The girls, led by a pair of freshmen, Linda Kennedy and Sheila Barrett, handed Milton its first loss of the season. The two freshmen finished hand in hand at 18:57 over the 2.9-mile course. Deirdre Donovan was fourth, Nancy MacDonald seventh, Kara Crehan eighth and Anita Perkins 10th.

"Bob Donahue, the Milton coach, and I agreed to let freshmen run, as it was a non-league meet," Iozzi said. "We are not allowed to use freshmen in league meets."

Iozzi was forced to make some roster changes due to disciplinary action. Recently joining the squad were Robert Flaherty, Paul Dindy, Chris Higgins and Dave Chapin.

Despite the girls' losing record, Iozzi has received some outstanding performances from Kennedy, Donovan and Crehan. The team received a serious blow when the only veteran, Mary Crehan, was sidelined due to an injury.

Joining the team recently were Sue Ann Sterin, Julia Slater, Joanna Poole, Anita Perkins, Michelle Millane, Nancy McDonald, Linda Demarkles and Deirdre Corrigan.

Today (Thursday) both North teams will be home to Abp. Williams in non-league meets. Tuesday they will run at Newton.

as Weymouth had a 3-1 record going into the game. McCormick, Anderson and Carroll all did a fine job running as did Graham until his injury, and Jack Brown played another good game at quarterback.

Offensive coach George Liset, who played at Weymouth North and also was assistant to Weymouth coach Dick MacPherson for two years, was presented the game ball by the players. It was planned to give him the ball last year but Weymouth won the game.

"This means a lot to me and I really appreciate it," said Liset. "I had the Weymouth seniors two years ago as sophomores and it was nice to beat them. I coached under Dick MacPherson for two years and I have a lot of respect for him."

Liset had good words for all the offensive linemen and praised Jim Dodd, Lou DiPietro, John McNamara, Joe Feeney, Ed Miller, John Buckley, Jack Leone and Joe Mullen.

"Chris Petrillo was absolutely brilliant on defense today and was the outstanding player of the game," lauded Raymer. "He made 12 unassisted tackles and assisted on five and made a game-saving tackle when Weymouth had a fourth down and a yard to go. Dave Howley was also great with six tackles and two assists. Glen Segalla had seven tackles and John Gorczyha had six and they put pressure on their quarterback. Glen Ross and Steve Mastorilli were also standouts."

line stands and several times we stopped them on fourth down plays which made the difference.

"The kids could have given up when Graham was hurt but they just refused to quit and proved we are really a team and they played as a team."

North scored first in the second period. With the ball on the Weymouth three following a 40-yard run by McCormick, the Raiders lined up for a Leone field goal. But the holder, quarterback Brown, passed to Bill Dailey for a touchdown and Leone kicked the point.

Weymouth came back to score in the third period on a quarterback sneak but a pass for the go-ahead points failed.

"It is hard to describe our second touchdown," Burke said. "It was a broken play and resulted on a one-yard touchdown pass to Mullen."

North got its signals mixed and Brown found himself with the ball and nowhere to go. But he spotted Mullen all alone and flipped a pass to him for the score. Leone again kicked the point.

"You have to give Brown a lot of credit for keeping his cool on that play and not folding under pressure," Liset said.

North completed three out of four passes for just 11 yards, but two were for the touchdowns. The only other completion was to Leone for seven yards.

Bradley Scores 3

Raiders Blank Quincy, 4-0

Bill Bradley, sophomore tri-captain, scored three goals Monday as the North Quincy soccer team blanked Quincy, 4-0, for its second win of the season. Quincy is still winless.

Bradley's three goals tied him with Joey Flynn for the Raider scoring lead, each having five goals.

North, with the wind in its favor, dominated the first period and Bradley scored his first goal, knocking in a rebound. Sophomore Charlie Spiropoulos just missed on a head shot.

The Raiders exploded for three goals in the third period with Bradley scoring the first with an assist for Flynn, who passed to Bradley and he kicked through a wall of Quincy defenders. The goalie had no chance.

Bob Biagini scored on a perfect shot into the upper right corner after a pass from Spiropoulos, and Bradley completed his hat trick after taking a pass from sophomore Richie Palma, the ball glancing off a Quincy player.

"Tim Burke, a junior, played an unbelievable game for us," North Coach Paul Bregoli said. "He filled in for Steve Kavanagh, who was injured. Our fullbacks, Paul Gill and Chris Dunn were outstanding as were Steve Dodd and Bill Bourikas. Paul Mallory played an excellent game in goal."

Newton North, second in the Suburban League, was too much for the Raiders last Friday and won easily, 7-0.

"Their skill was just too much," Bregoli said. "Down, 5-0, at the half, we held them scoreless in the third period. Dave Lapsley and Rich Farmer had our best chances to score. Ed Ahearn was outstanding in goal with 25 saves, while Bradley, Burke, Dodd, Palma and Bourikas played well. Our injury situation worsened when fullback Kavanagh collided with a Newton player and was taken to the hospital and held over night."

Earlier in the week North bowed to third place Waltham, 4-1, the Hawks scoring three goals in the second quarter after being held scoreless in the first. Palma scored the Raiders' goal from 12 yards out with tri-captain Lapsley getting an assist.

Bregoli singled out Bradley, Flynn, Kavanagh, Gill, Dunn and Burke for their play and had good words in particular for Ahearn, who was pressed into service two minutes before the game was to start when goalie Mallory pulled a back muscle in warmups.

Q, N Girl Swimmers Win

Things are looking up for the Quincy and North Quincy girls' swim teams.

Last week the North girls, under Coach Bill Walker, won their third straight meet and the fourth of the season, breezing past Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 122-38, in a Suburban League meet to even their record at 4-4.

The improving Quincy girls, coached by Judy Appleby, defeated Weymouth South, 90-81, in a league meet for their second win.

Kit Harrow won the 50 and 100-meter freestyles and anchored the winning 400-meter freestyle relay team to spark the Raiderettes to their easy win.

Joining her on the relay team were Jacqui Pike, who won the 100 butterfly and took second in the 200 individual medley; Jill Sweeney, who won the 200 freestyle and took second in the 500 freestyle, and Eileen McKenna, who took seconds in the 50 and 100-meter freestyles.

Diana Dawson, who teamed with Mary Tenney, Susan Quintiliani and Chris Flynn to win the 200 medley relay, also was a winner in the backstroke.

Carolyn O'Toole won the one-meter diving, followed by Tenney, and other second places were taken by O'Toole, Marjorie Bortolotti and Maureen Clasby.

Quincy's First Ladies won seven events and took four seconds in their most impressive showing of the season.

Donna Marcin won the 100 and 200-meter freestyles and Cindy Pitts won the 50 and 500-meter freestyles. Pitts' time of 6:57 in the 500 was her best.

Janet Simes won the 200-meter individual medley and the 100-meter backstroke and the relay team of Simes, Marcin, Pitts and Patty Howe won the 400-meter freestyle race.

Jane Righini, Carol Muber and Mae Marshall all picked up seconds and the 200-medley relay team of Marshall, Righini, Diane Hackins and Robin Lotti also finished second.

Quincy's other win was over Stoughton, 92-79, and the First Ladies had given Newton North, Canton, Brockton and Weymouth North good competition in losing.

Coach Appleby is pleased with the improvement shown and her Quincy girls were defeated by much more experienced teams by closer scores than a year ago.

The co-captains are Sines and Marshall, two of seven seniors on the squad, which also includes seven juniors and five sophomores.

In an 88-77 loss to Weymouth North just before the win over Weymouth South, many Quincy swimmers turned in their best times.

One reason for the team's improvement is the diving. Three of the girls, Righini, Lotti and Sharon Lynn, attended diving camp at the University of Maine during the summer.

FAHERTY

Councillor-At-Large

"LET'S FACE THE ISSUES: That's a novel idea, since most of the candidates running in this election seem to think there aren't ANY ... or so their campaigns would indicate. Silence on the issues seems to be the order of the day.

Well, when a city ... any city or company or any other entity ... can't afford to keep its commitment to its employees, or worse, even bargain with them over the terms of their employment ... then that's an issue. I'm not talking about across the board raises for everyone with a city payroll number. I'm talking about the collective bargaining process which has been denied our civil servants because the mayor says there's no money in the till. And that's the real issue. Why not?

Was it poor planning? Did we pay too many contractors for too much hot-top or bricks, laid down in the pursuit of valueless projects?

Was it the poor judgment or unprofessionalism of the Assessing Department that inflated our hopes for lower taxes with the announcement of million dollar tax revenues from large corporations in the community? Money that will have to be returned now ... or will never be forthcoming because these assessments were illegal.

Was it the gambler's dream of the administration and council alike, that the "cherry sheets" would bail us out?

Was it the false economy of a 7.2 million dollar bond issue, for which we'll pay dearly in the years to come, that kept us in the dark? Whatever, it appears the cupboard is bare. And that being history ... the overriding issue is that we can't let it happen again.

But as long as the city council plays hand maiden to the mayor ... it will.

That's why I'm running. That's why I ask for your vote ... for the opportunity of questioning, not only the direct impact ... but the far reaching implications ... of every proposal presented to our city council."

Donovan Making Pitch For Conway Country Now

Dick Donovan, the Quincy boy who used to throw baseballs for the Braves, the Tigers, the White Sox, the Senators and the Indians, is now making his pitch from a desk in the Wollaston office of Jack Conway, Realtor.

Donovan, who turns 52 in December, pitched in the major leagues for 15 years, winning 122 games and losing 99; he won 20 games for Cleveland and pitched for Chicago in the 1959 World Series, losing one game to the Dodgers' Don Drysdale and saving another in relief. He retired in 1965.

"I was 37 then and just about ready for a new line of work," he SAID. "I have no regrets about those wonderful years in competition which I loved every minute. Baseball players are a great bunch and they helped fill life with variety."

"But I think it was more

enjoyable in the early years with the old Boston Braves when we traveled by railroad. There was fine camaraderie on the long trips. There was less chatter and it was more tiring later on when plane travel became common."

Donovan left baseball to sell stocks and bonds until he moved to Conway Country earlier this year.

"Real Estate always fascinated me," he said, "and I'm happy to settle down in this profession. I'm putting in long hours but I don't mind that at all, and the results have started to show in recent sales."

Right now he confines his athletic activity to a few games of tennis which helps to maintain his playing weight of 210. Occasionally he takes the kids into Boston to watch the Red Sox play but other than that his baseball is confined to television.

"I think I could still outsmart some of the hitters today," he says. "When they grip the end of the bat and swing for the fences it would be great fooling them with a slider or something. Sluggers are so vulnerable."

Donovan makes his home in Cohasset with his wife, Patricia, and their two children, Peter, 15, and Amy, 12.

'Citizens For Decent Government' Draws Bead On LaRaia Candidacy

Papers were filed at City Hall Tuesday for a Quincy Citizens Committee for Decent Government, formed specifically to oppose the candidacy of former Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia for an at large seat on the City Council.

The purpose of the committee, said Atty. Paul C. Kelly, "is to remind Quincy voters of the type of government this city suffered through when Joseph LaRaia was mayor."

Organizational papers filed with City Clerk John Gillis listed Kelly, who lives at 93 Ames St., West Quincy, as chairman and Michael P. Gaudiano of 76 Miller St., West Quincy, as treasurer. He said the committee had "quite a few" members.

Kelly said in a statement issued at the time of filing that the committee is not endorsing any of the other candidates in the at-large race.

"We hope that if people remember the scandal, embarrassment and corruption of the LaRaia Administration that they vote for any of the other candidates for councillor at large except LaRaia," he said.

"It is quite unusual for a citizens committee to oppose a candidate for public office. But this is an unusual situation because we believe public office is a public trust."

Kelly said he is "appalled by his (LaRaia's) candidacy, appalled that he would once again seek to serve Quincy.

"Our objective is to remind Quincy's citizens of just what happened" when Joseph LaRaia was mayor.

"Two of his top assistants, the public works commissioner and the assistant director of the senior citizens program, were found guilty of and served federal prison terms for extortion."

"His retail stores coordinator pleaded guilty to larceny in the Quincy District Court for shaking down a local businessman."

"His superintendent of cemeteries was indicted for embezzlement in Suffolk County."

Kelly said that during the LaRaia Administration "scandal brought government to a standstill and made our community the subject of media exposes. It was a period of embarrassment for anyone who loves Quincy."

"As a longtime citizen of Quincy, I am proud of the city of Presidents and I want to continue to be proud of the people we elect to public office. Hopefully, our committee will help Quincy foster and promote decent government."

Revaluation Report To Council Postponed

The City Council will have to wait another two weeks to hear Assessor Chairman John Comer and Asst. City Solicitor Dennis E. Harrington explain what progress the city has made in revaluation.

They were scheduled to appear before the Council Tuesday night at the request of Councillor Francis X. McCauley but the visit had to be postponed when it turned out Comer had another appointment in Pittsfield.

Mayor Tobin was expected to present to the Council his plan to transfer $500,000 from various accounts within the budget to hire commercial firms to revalue the city.

Bids for the job will not be opened until Oct. 30, Tobin noted, which would give the Council time to make the appropriation at the Nov. 5 meeting or soon thereafter.

Sheets Proposes Ordinance On Restaurant Managers

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets will introduce an ordinance into the City Council making it law that owners of restaurants and fast food businesses notify city officials of new managers.

Specifically, the owners would have to notify the License Board and Health Department.

The ordinance would enable the Health Department and License Board, as well as local councillors, to maintain a continuity of policy.

The ordinance, if passed, would be especially helpful in the areas where fast food service businesses have been having difficulty because of negative impact on the residential area.

Sheets said he hopes the ordinance can be passed about the first of the year.

Traffic Islands Meeting Oct. 24

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel G. Raymond announces there will be another meeting regarding the temporary traffic islands at Quincy Ave. and Water St., Oct. 24, at 7:30 p.m. at St. John's School.

Raymond is urging all area residents to attend and voice their views on whether or not the islands should be permanent.

Recommendations and suggestions on changes to ensure the safety of the community will also be welcome.

Raymond said this intersection had been one of the most dangerous in the City of Quincy. He has been working with the Quincy Traffic Commission and other city and state officials to resolve the problem.

3 New Teachers

The School Committee recently made the following personnel

- Named three teachers to posts in the school system. They are Judith Colin of Allston, "English as a Second Language" teacher; Claire Murphy of Newton, special education and Betty Valtos of Cambridge, Quincy High English department.

effective Sept. 21 and Anne Scofield of Learning Development, effective Nov. 9.

- Appointed two teacher aides. They are Annie O'Leary of 109 Sonoma Rd., Squantum and Edward F. Lawlor, Jr. of 29 Payne Street, South Quincy.

City Becoming 'Office Mecca'

Plans Unveiled For $11 Million Office Building In N. Quincy

By TOM HENSHAW

"Quincy," said the Rev. Bedros Baharian, the citywide development coordinator, "is becoming an office mecca. The demand for office space in our city is increasing by leaps and bounds. We are getting inquiries that we're unable to fulfill."

Rev. Baharian spoke in the wake of an announcement that a new $11 million, five-story building with 172,000 square feet of office space will be built by the O'Connell Brothers on land adjacent to the State Street South complex in North Quincy.

"With this building," he said, "we have brought into the city of Quincy 650,000 square feet of office space."

"When this administration took over two years ago, I think I made a statement that, with luck, we would have a million square feet of office space in five years."

"I think I could revise that and say in six or seven years we're probably going to have close to two million square feet, creating jobs and income that will be spent in the mercantile center."

The new building in North Quincy, which will be known as the Monarch Office Building, is to be a joint venture of the O'Connell Brothers of Quincy and the Monarch Life Insurance Co. of Springfield.

William O'Connell said ground will be broken Monday, Oct. 29, site preparation will begin the same day, pile driving will start Wednesday and the building is expected to be on the market in a year.

"We hope a year from now we'll be back with the announcement of another project," said O'Connell.

The Monarch Office Building is being built on speculation. There are no major tenants yet but office space will rent for $13 a square foot, some $3 less than similar buildings in Boston where space is at a premium.

The building will be located on the Montclair marsh on the other side of State Street South from the $4.5 million, 120,000-square foot office building planned by SCI Investments of Genoa, Italy.

"To think that two office buildings with 300,000 square feet are going to be built in the city on speculation in this very tight financial market is a plus for the future of the city," said Baharian.

"We have about $100 million worth of projects either under construction or on the drawing boards."

O'Connell said the joint ownership of the building, which is to be called Forge-O'Connell Properties, has a federal release from flood plain zoning as long as they stick to the plans as submitted.

The building will be constructed in the shape of two five-story towers, connected on each floor by a common lobby, which will enable the owners to rent whole floors of either 17,000 or 35,000 square feet.

Five hundred parking spaces will be added in the area and vehicular access to the site will be from Newport Ave. by way of Heritage Drive. Residential neighborhoods will not be impacted, O'Connell said.

Teachers Vote To Further Cut Services

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Several hundred public school teachers voted Tuesday to further cut back their services if no contract agreement is reached by Nov. 1.

The 11 motions approved by the Quincy Education Association included such actions as:

- "No additional field trips will be scheduled,
- "All QEA members shall insist on full duty-free lunch period,
- "No member shall supervise detention."

A strike vote was taken, as was one to authorize the QEA leadership to call a strike, according to Bruce Burgess of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, who is working with the QEA during negotiations.

But Robert Garner, QEA president, said he could not discuss the outcome or the wording of the strike motions.

"We're keeping that as sort of internal information," he said.

All 11 motions cutting back teacher services were "approved almost unanimously," although some were the subject of debate, Garner said.

Mary Curtin, chairwoman of the QEA negotiating committee, described the actions as "Phase II" of the teachers' protests against the School Committee. In "Phase I," the QEA's representative council decided Oct. 10 to ask teachers not to take part in any evening or weekend school-related activities.

Cutbacks of many other duties that teachers perform will be considered if an agreement is not reached, said Mrs. Curtin. Neither she nor Garner would speculate what actions might be taken in "Phase III."

"These are not pleasant actions for us to take, as teachers," she added. But, she added, the actions will have "no harmful educational impact."

"They would not have passed if they were," she said.

QEA members were also asked

Many 'Really Petrified'

Snug Harbor Seniors Cite Youth Harassment

Several city officials were scheduled to meet Wednesday night to discuss complaints of vandalism and harassment of senior citizens at the Snug Harbor Court housing project.

The meeting was scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Quincy Housing Authority's 9 Bicknell St. offices.

Mrs. Roberta Cohen, representing the Harborview Residents Committee, told the authority recently of alleged vandalism, name-calling, sliced clotheslines, mischievous doorbell-ringing and other offenses against the senior citizens.

"I check with them every night," said Mrs. Cohen. "A lot of them are really petrified."

The 45-unit project is located off Shed St. in Germantown.

Mrs. Cohen invited the members of the authority to attend the Wednesday night meeting. Also invited, she said, were Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, State Senator Paul Harold, Police Chief Francis Finn and Clement O'Brien, administrator of the OHA.

The OHA has already taken steps to help remedy the situation, said O'Brien. CETA funding is being sought for a security guard to patrol the neighborhood.

The harassment is apparently being carried out by both neighborhood youths and outsiders, said Mrs. Cohen.

Tow Trucks In Future Of Illegal MBTA Parkers

The City Council has moved on the problem of illegal parking around the Quincy Center MBTA Station by making both sides of Burgin Parkway from Granite St. to Saville Ave. a tow zone.

In other actions, the Council and the Traffic Commission made the following changes in traffic regulations:

The area of Washington St., Quincy Point, in front of the Municipal Credit Union is a 30-minute parking zone.

No parking signs will be removed from between 80 and 90 Sagamore St., Atlantic.

Shaw St., Quincy Point, is a no parking, tow zone.

A stop sign will be placed at the intersection of Holbrook Rd. and Fayette St., Wollaston.

A tow zone has been established on the southerly side of Larry Place, West Quincy, for a distance of 140 feet west from Furnace Brook Parkway.

Houghs Neck Arson Causes $1,000 Damage

An arson attempt at a vacant cottage on 1232 Sea St. Monday night caused an estimated loss of $1,000 to the property.

According to Deputy Carl Valenti, of the Quincy Fire Department, the fire was reported at 9:12 p.m. by a

Council Asks 'Vigilant' Eye On New Parkingway Disco

The City Council wants the Licensing Board and Police Chief Francis X. Finn to keep a close eye on the new disco, California, that opened recently in the Parkingway.

The Council resolved that the board and the chief "be vigilant in assessing any adverse impact this disco might have on the downtown area or any residential area in Quincy."

Chief Finn said that he has had no reports of any problems at California.

The resolution was sponsored by Councilors James A. Sheets, John J. Lydon Jr. and Daniel G. Raymond.

Cottage Ave. Loading Zone Proposed

The Traffic Commission has been asked to study the possibility of making the northwest side of Cottage Ave. between Nos. 6 and 12 a permanent loading zone area.

City Councilor Daniel G. Raymond said the section is a loading zone now on a temporary basis for the convenience of Tag's Sleep Shop, which is moving into the old bank building on the corner of Hancock St.

McCauley Seeks Aid In Merrymount Flooding

City Councilor Francis X. McCauley has asked the Public Works Department for action to alleviate a serious flooding problem in the Chickatabot and Narragansett Rds. section of Merrymount.

"Homeowners in this area have been subjected to flooding during periods of high tide and severe rain storms," said McCauley in a letter to Commissioner James J. Ricciuti.

The Councilor said he has ascertained that the problem is due to the old tide gates on Chickatabot Rd. that, he said, are badly in need of repair.

Licenses Issued

Speedy Muffler King Set For Old Ashmont Discount Site

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The Quincy License Board has granted Speedy Muffler King, 474-490 Southern Artery, a repair shop license and a permit to store 100 gallons of gasoline in tanks of cars, above ground.

Representatives from the company had been before the board two weeks ago with plans to tear down the Old Ashmont Discount building and construct a new, single story concrete building to the rear of the lot.

Cesar Chekijian, real estate district manager for the company, had said that two mechanics and an office manager will be employed the first year. He said the building will be insulated for noise.

Building Inspector Allan MacDonald said he didn't want to see the area become "automobile alley" referring to the several gas stations, muffler and spring shops in the vicinity.

MacDonald said he would like to see the building constructed with the doors to the side rather than the front so that in the warm months when the doors are open passersby won't have to look right into the bays.

He said he would look at other Speedy Muffler shops to "see what kind of housekeeping they do".

MacDonald was not present at this week's meeting.

Police Chief Francis Finn said that no matter what is done with the lot, it will be an improvement over the old building, vacant for three or four years.

Finn said he would like the company to work with the building inspector, and the motion was made to grant the licenses.

In other matters before the board:

• A request from Mrs. Sheila M. Trifone, of Milton, for a retail package store-beer and wine license for 30 Chestnut St., was granted.

The Litre and Wedge, Wine and Cheese Shoppe will be a Quincy Market type shop with take out only.

Richard D. Chase, who has an insurance company on Chestnut St., sent a letter to the board opposing the shop.

No notice of opposition was sent to the board by the neighboring Central Baptist Church.

• The board denied a request from Goodyear Service Store, 1132-1138 Hancock St., for a permit to increase present storage of motor fuel from 75-105 gallons, above ground, and to increase service bays from four to six.

The request was denied because no signed receipts from abutters showing they had been notified of the requests was presented to the board. Goodyear can reapply the request.

Petitions signed by 15-20 Whitney Rd. residents opposed to the requests were presented to the board.

The board also:

• Granted a request from Pizza Hut, 619-627 Washington St. for approval of transfer of corporation stock making C. Howard Wilkins the sole owner of the outstanding stock.

• Granted a request from John H. McDuff, Jr., Candidate for School Committee, for permission to use a mobile sound unit Nov. 6, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. to advertise his candidacy.

• Granted a request from the North Quincy High School Football Boosters Club for a tag day permit for Nov. 17, (rain date Nov. 24).

• Granted the committee to re-elect Daniel G. Raymond a one day alcoholic license for Nov. 3, 7:30 p.m. - midnight at the Fore River Clubhouse.

• Granted the Committee to elect Joanne Condon a one day alcoholic license for Nov. 6, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall.

• Granted a one day wine and malt license to the David Messina Scholarship Fund for Nov. 9, at the Fore River Clubhouse. Proceeds will benefit the fund set up in the name of the late son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Messina, of Appleton St., North Quincy, who was killed in auto-pedestrian accident Labor Day.

• Voted to require Boston Harbor Marina Antique, Craft and Flea Show to have a health inspector on hand at all times because of the sale of second hand clothes and food. The Marina must assume the costs.

• Granted the Ward II Civic Association a one day alcoholic license for its annual installation of officers dinner dance Nov. 10, 7:30 p.m. to midnight, at the Fore River Clubhouse.

A request from Vasilios Giansmidis, of Friendly Pizza, 1622 Hancock St., for a video machine and juke box license was cancelled.

Petition Drives For 'Proposition 2 1/2' an amendment to the state constitution.

Proposition 2 1/2 is so-called because it would limit property taxes to 2 1/2 per cent of fair market value as opposed to the current statewide average of 4.7 per cent for all classes of property.

CLT is seeking at least 58,000 valid signatures statewide by Wednesday, Nov. 21, to get the proposed law on the 1980 ballot and the proposed amendment on the ballot for the 1982 state election.

In addition to limiting taxation, the proposed law would prohibit the state to mandate programs on the localities without agreeing to assume the added cost.

It was also repeated the laws for compulsory binding arbitration for local police and fire departments and abolish fiscal autonomy for city and town school committees.

Among the first 10 signers of the petition for the state law is John S. Isaac of 22 Shaw St., Quincy Point, who is heading the petition drive in Quincy.

Speaker At Chamber Breakfast

Anderson Criticizes Carter For Shipyard Contract Failure

By TOM HENSHAW

Cong. John B. Anderson (R-Ill.), who passed this way Tuesday in his campaign for President, says he doesn't understand why the Carter Administration hasn't helped the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard in its efforts to obtain Navy contracts.

Anderson, who spoke at a South Shore Chamber of Commerce breakfast at the Lantana in Randolph, told a news conference following the breakfast:

"I would certainly be interested in trying to apportion any contracts for building new naval vessels in such a way that we could keep together that skilled work force in the shipyards at Quincy and at other locations on the East Coast.

To allow these yards to simply die on the vine and disband a skilled work force of men and women who have a capacity to build these ships would be to deal a damaging blow to the defense capabilities of this country."

Anderson told the breakfast that if he were President he would like to see a 3 per cent increase in the defense budget go toward building up the Navy to protect American supply lines, particularly those that extend to the Middle East.

"We have declined in ships as far as ships of the line are concerned from something like 978 to less than 500," he said, expanding on that subject at the news conference.

"I regard our present very tenuous supply lines from the Middle East as being a rationale in itself for a need to build up the Navy to protect those shipping lanes.

Anderson said he is reluctant to pin the label of discrimination on the Carter Administration's treatment of the Quincy shipyard, New England and the Northeast.

"I think there has been neglect," he said. "The administration has not been sufficiently concerned about trying to see a more equitable distribution of contracts."

"Whether that amounts to conscious prejudice against the Northeast or whether it's just carelessness, I leave to others to interpret. But I don't think enough awareness has been shown."

Anderson said he is a member of the Midwest-East Coast Coalition of congressmen.

"We have been very active in promoting the idea that in the letting of government contracts there has been a tendency in recent years for them to flow in increasing volume to the so-called Sunbelt," he said.

"This works to the detriment of the older and heavily industrialized sections like the upper Middle West and the Northeast.

"It's a legitimate concern to me that the government, in awarding contracts, take into consideration the need to prevent the out-migration of population and try to stabilize employment conditions in the Northeast.

"I saw figures published in the past week that indicated in the event of a recession, which now seems likely, the unemployment impact could be two full percentage points higher in New England than elsewhere in the country."

"I think the burdens of unemployment should be distributed. We shouldn't build up some areas of the country at the expense of others."

"That should be sufficient rationale for examining the letting of contracts so we could hope to see an improvement in levels of employment in New England."

Anderson told the breakfast that too many of his opponents for the Republican nomination for President are concerned with national defense and not with the economy.

"The first line of this country's defense is the American economy," he said, "and that economy has deteriorated in recent years. The policies of this administration are uncoordinated and make no attempt to pursue long term goals."

"I'm more oriented to make the rebuilding of the economy the No. 1 priority than are some of the other candidates."

Fire Slightly Damages FFC

Traffic through Quincy Center was disrupted for about 25 minutes Monday night as Quincy fire fighters investigated a suspected fire at FFC, 1453 Hancock St.

Six fire engines were on the scene around 6 p.m. to investigate white smoke that was spotted in the store by passersby.

According to Deputy Carl

Valenti, the small fire was caused by careless disposal of smoking materials in a rubbish barrel.

A smoking battery case, a wooden display rack were taken out of the store by firemen and hosed down. Valenti said estimated damage was $50.

By 6:20 p.m., traffic was flowing down Hancock St. again.

Life Might Be Beautiful If You Never Had To Borrow Money

Yes, if you had enough money to meet all your needs at all times, life could be much simpler for you. But most of us do not enjoy this financial freedom. For instance, the biggest purchase most of us make in our lifetime—the buying of a home—usually requires bank help with a mortgage.

There are, of course, other financial needs you may face from time to time, whether buying a car, remodeling your home, acquiring a yacht or just consolidating a lot of bills.

The Quincy Co-operative Bank would like to help you with your small loan problems. We hope you never have to borrow but when you do, don't borrow more than you need. And if you have a savings account with us, remember that you can get a passbook loan for only two percent interest above the passbook rate. That's the lowest interest you will ever pay on a loan unless your wealthy aunt gives you an interest free loan.

If a passbook loan is not possible, try our small loan services where we do our best to meet the needs of all credit worthy applicants. You may find that a small loan tailored exactly to your needs will solve your present financial problem. Call or visit the Consumer Loan Centers at our Main Office or at our Branches.

Josiah Quincy, for whom our Bank was named, founded co-operative banking to help people acquire homes. We know he would like what we are doing for people needing small loans.

Police Detective Says:

Wits, Common Sense Better Rape Defense Than Struggle

By SARAH PHILLIPS

A victim's wits and common sense, and not physical violence, are the best defense against rape, warns a Quincy police detective, at a program on rape prevention last week.

Lt. Barbara DiNatale told about 50 persons at a rape prevention program at City Hall that a woman needs six to eight years of training in the martial arts in order to successfully defend herself. Ineffectual physical resistance may just incite the rapist to further violence, she said.

Furthermore, weapons like Mace or a hatpin may be taken away from the woman and used against her, if she is not skilled in their use, Lt. DiNatale said.

Screams may help scare away a would-be rapist before the attack actually takes place, but may also provoke further violence once the attacker has control of his victim, she added.

The best defense, she argued, is for the victim to pull herself together, stall for time and try to think of some way to dissuade the attacker. For example, she may suggest that they go somewhere else, where she could seek help.

No pat statement, such as the over-publicized "I'm pregnant" will work with every rapist, she said. Some rapists are motivated by insecurity, others by hatred of women or sadism. The victim must try to judge the type of attacker she is facing and judge her approach accordingly.

Lt. DiNatale advised women to use physical resistance only as a last resort, as when the victim's life is threatened, and only when they know they are able of disabling the attacker.

In such an instance, she said, the woman should wait for the most opportune moment, then disable the attacker completely. The only two sure ways of doing this are striking the groin and gouging at the assailant's eyes.

If a woman cannot prevent a rape, she may be able to help capture the rapist by memorizing the exact words he uses, how he looks and any other information. After a rape, the victim should call 479-RAPE, the Quincy rape line, or 911, the emergency police number.

The victim should not shower or change clothes before meeting with police, she added. A woman must have a medical examination in order to have a reasonable chance of convicting the rapist.

Police departments have become more sensitive and supportive towards rape victims, she said. Women officers are sent to aid the woman and a counselor may advise her through the trial, if she desires. Prosecution itself may be waived if it may be psychologically damaging to the victim.

Fear of the rape trial itself, as dramatized by Elizabeth Montgomery in the television presentation "A Case Of Rape", prevents many rapes from being reported or prosecuted, Lt. DiNatale said.

However, the primary purpose of prosecution is seen as preventing the rapist from molesting more victims, she said. It is now illegal in Massachusetts for the defense to question the victim's past sexual experiences.

Rape is a crime of violence, not of sex, emphasized Lt. DiNatale. The rapist's primary motive is to gain a sense of power by degrading and intimidating the victim. This explains why Quincy rape victims have ranged in age from two months to 90 years, she said.

Still, public opinion can make the victim feel guilty and ashamed, she said. This is especially true in the most common, and least reported type of rape, in which the victim has had at least a casual prior acquaintance with the rapist.

Because the individual's physical and emotional privacy are violated, psychological scars can last far longer than physical injuries, which occur in about 10 percent of all rapes, she said.

Lt. DiNatale offered the following suggestions on how to avoid dangerous situations:

- Don't list your first name, or even a giveaway initial, in the phone book. Pick a male name and tell your friends how to look you up.

- Never let a stranger inside to use your phone. Offer to make the call yourself.

- Before you let a service person into your house, ask for identification and examine it carefully.

- Install a deadbolt in your front door and ask the police station for a security check of your home.

- If you think your car is being followed, drive to the police station or an open business district, not to your home.

- If your car breaks down, stay inside, with doors locked, and ask other drivers to call the police, or get out of the car and hide by the roadside, waiting for a trustworthy-looking car to stop.

- If a car follows you while you're walking by the street, turn and run or walk the other way.

- In an elevator, stand near the control panel and stop at the nearest floor if you feel uneasy.

Further information on rape prevention is available in booklet form at the Quincy police station, Lt. DeNatale said.

The program was sponsored by the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women. It was the first in a series of monthly evening meetings on such topics as consumer rights, women and the law, going back to school and dealing with stress.

SUBTLE CAUSES OF OBESITY

If you are starting to gain weight, take a close look at your eating and working habits for any slight change. The scale can start to climb from even the most subtle change in routine.

For example, here are some examples presented to the American Academy of General Practice by a medical expert who specializes in such problems. A person for some reason may begin to eat just one pad of butter with each meal. With no increase in activity, the extra butter - 4500 calories a month - would mean a weight gain of more than one pound.

Equally subtle are small decreases in caloric expenditure. For example a typist, five feet three inches and 120 pounds, is provided an electric typewriter after years of using a manual machine. On the manual, she expended 88 calories an hour, on the electric only 73. If she does nothing to compensate for the decreased expenditure, and eats as before, in only eight weeks she'll gain a pound.

Dedication Saturday

Community Health Center Already A Hit In Houghs Neck

The Houghs Neck Multiservice Center won't be formally dedicated until Saturday, Oct. 27, but already its Manet Community Health Center has become a big hit in the area.

"We've had more patients than we know what to do with," said Dianne Luby, director of the Health Center, which opened to the public on Monday.

"They were walking in off the street to make appointments. Some people wanted to be seen right away. As soon as we took the plywood off the windows they started streaming in."

City Councillor Leo J. Kelly said the demand for the Health Center probably is great because there is only one dentist and no doctors' offices in the area from the Police Station to Nut Island.

That includes Merrymount, Adams Shore, Germantown and Houghs Neck, the sections that will be served by the Health Center.

It will have two medical people, Dr. Rolf Knight, a family practitioner, and Dr. Brenda Ross, a pediatrician, and eventually there will be a dentist.

The formal dedication of the Multiservice Center will take place Saturday at 3 p.m. with Cong. Brian J. Donnelly, Councillor Kelly and John Hacunda, president of the Health Center's board, as main speakers.

The Center is located at 1193 Sea St., which used to be the site of Almost Joey's bar and the Dickman Novelty Shop, both of which were taken by eminent domain at the insistence of Kelly.

In addition to the Health Center, there will be space for a satellite clinic of the South Shore Mental Health Center and a branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

There will also be a community function room to serve the Houghs Neck area and, as time goes on, it is expected that an arthritis clinic will be added.

The Health Center will have senior citizen health screening, a well-child clinic, family services, nutrition services, laboratory services and health education facilities.

"It represents an effort to bring affordable health care to the community," said Mrs. Luby, who will also be acting director of the Multiservice Center.

A graduate of the University of New Hampshire, she studied at Boston University and the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and taught occupational therapy in Scotland.

Before coming to Quincy she was executive director of the Massachusetts Association of Occupational Therapists.

Guests at the dedication Saturday will include Mayor Tobin, Rep. Thomas F. Brownell, Hospital Director Anthony DeFalco, Planning Director James Lydon and Library Director Warren Watson.

Architect for the project was Joseph Donahue and it was built by Eastern Construction Co. with federal urban development block grant funds.

License Board To Be Presented Ward 2 'Unity Award' that the award was being presented for "improving the quality of life for residents in Ward II."

License Board members are City Clerk John Gillis, Police Chief Francis X. Finn, Health Commissioner Dr. Robert P. McKeogh, Fire Chief Edward Barry, and Building Inspector Allan MacDonald.

$3.79 Parking Garage

Zoning Change Clears Way For Della Chiesa Development

Almost unnoticed last week the city moved to legitimize the parking garage that is to be built over the MBTA tracks at Granite St. to serve the planned office building in the Della Chiesa Parking Area.

The City Council entertained and passed on to its Ordinance Committee two zoning changes, one of which would permit parking areas and the buildings they serve to be under separate ownership.

The garage, which is to be built with a $3.79 million federal grant, will be owned by the city with spaces leased to Campanelli Enterprises of Braintree, the office building's developer.

One proposed zoning amendment says that offstreet parking facilities may be under separate ownership if there is contractual agreements to provide parking for at least 20 years.

The second change proposes that "the required parking facilities may be provided on lots any part of which are 500 feet away from the building to be served.

In related actions, the Council:

• Sent to the Downtown Development Committee an eminent domain order taking the buildings on the edge of the Della Chiesa Parking Area, which contains two banks, a bookstore, a coffee shop and a camera store.

• Sent to the Finance Committee a proposal for a $600,000 bond issue to pay for the landtaking, which will be repaid by Campanelli Enterprises over a period of 25 years.

• Sent to the Downtown Development Committee a proposal condemning the parking lot as "a substandard, decadent and blighted open area" to make it eligible for a Chapter 121B tax incentive.

United Way Agency

Impresses 'Loaned Exec'

Paul J. Barry of Wollaston, a New England Telephone Co. executive, says he has found it to be "an enlightening experience" working with the United Way and observing its agencies in action.

"No amount of money can buy the dedication of those working with these handicapped people," he said after visiting the Charles River Association for Retarded Citizens in Needham.

Barry is one of 90 executives loaned by their companies to the United Way to work full time as consultants in the campaign to raise funds. He's assigned to United Way's south region.

Barry said he was particularly impressed with the housing provided at the Needham location where retarded persons are assisted in working to their capacity in the workshop.

He called it "most rewarding... an experience I'll never forget" watching them perform a day's work in the sheltered workshop and live in one of the two community residences.

Guests At Reception

St. John's Parish Greets 200 New Members

St. John's Church, Quincy Center, recently greeted about 200 new parishioners at a reception at the church hall.

Representatives of various parish groups and activities discussed their functions with the new members at the reception.

"We are honored and pleased to have you as members to join our other fine parishioners," said Rev. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's.

Rev. McCarthy also made the following remarks:

"We would have you understand that this parish is for the people. You are the important components of St. John's; without you there would be no parish.

"Your parish is the local headquarters for your common faith and worship. It is a place where you can grow together in your preparation for eternal life. Because of its important task the parish needs to be alive and well.

The parish has the task of affirming the reality of the religious belief and the presence of the supernatural. It is no easy job. Our society today denies the supernatural from every angle and direction. The average Christian is bombarded in a world which tries to smother people with pagan philosophy that the 'Here and Now' is all that counts. Eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we die. Take, steal, destroy, and fulfill your own pleasures, and forget about anything that has to do with the soul.

Believers need other believers. We need to be associated with other Catholics so that the onslaught of the secular and material can be offset by other Christians. You believe and have proven that man and woman have a supernatural destiny. The parish has the great task of reaffirming the fact of belief and of reaffirming the supernatural through literature, its liturgy, its clergy, parish activities and the entire framework of community. The parish is contrast to the world in which the believer works and lives -- a world of secularism and naturalism devoid of Christian affirmation.

"Your parish of St. John's is a place to affirm that life is eternal - and also your parish cannot be indifferent to social problems, such as racism and poverty, which is a means for all of us to grow in grace and to help the less fortunate than ourselves to attain eternal life.

"People today are hurting; especially within the American family, which is under ferocious pressures. They need somewhere to turn to find a solution for their fears and troubles; so we hope and pray that the parish can fill that need.

"You can see by our parish profile that this parish has many programs and activities. Every one is most welcome to take part in these activities, no matter what your talents may be.

"We sum up our remarks this evening by saying that we are here to serve you, so that your road to eternal life might be less winding and rocky. Please give us the opportunity to serve you, so that your course to heaven may be well directed."

Tobin Asks Solution On Safford St. Home For Retarded

Mayor Arthur Tobin has asked the city solicitor and building inspector to work out a solution on stalled plans for a home for mentally retarded adults on Safford St., Wollaston.

The home, proposed by the Quincy Housing Authority, is being held up by Building Inspector Allan MacDonald's refusal to grant a building permit. MacDonald insists a 1977 zoning board of appeals decision, which subdivided the lot, permitted the building at 216 Safford St. to be used only as a two-family home.

The QHA claims no such restriction exists and is suing MacDonald to force granting of the permit.

The QHA also voted last Wednesday to ask Tobin's aid in settling the dispute.

"Upon receipt of the QHA's letter, I asked the city solicitor and the city building inspector to get together to try to work out their differences on this," Tobin said Tuesday.

If MacDonald's objections could not be reconciled, Tobin said, he hoped a speedy solution of the matter in court could be arranged.

The QHA also voted last week to rescind the contract awarded to Ecology Systems, Inc. of Boston for renovations to the Safford St. home. QHA administrator Clement O'Brien told the board that, because of the long delay in granting of the permit, Ecology Systems could not guarantee that prices quoted in its original bid would still be in effect.

The contract, awarded in June, called for payment of $94,000 to Ecology Systems.

If the QHA were to receive a building permit for the home, the contract would now have to be revised.

Wollaston-Ashmont MBTA Bus Service Cut

There will be less frequent service on the MBTA's Bus Route 217 from Wollaston Beach to Ashmont via Beale St. and East Milton Square starting Saturday, Nov. 10, it has been announced. But Bus Route 12 from North Quincy Station to Ashmont via Hallett Square, which was originally scheduled to be terminated, has been salvaged, said MBTA Chairman Robert L. Foster.

Foster said the changes in service were made necessary by the MBTA Advisory Board's failure to approve an additional $15.7 million supplementary budget for 1979.

The MBTA was able to save Route 12, he said, "upon the reinspection of available equipment serving the immediate area and the reallocation of available manpower."

New schedules for Route 217 will be available on the buses or at the Park St. Information Booth or at the Customer Service Center, 50 High St., Boston.

'Let's Do It!'

Quincy Chips In To Aid Mini-Bike Program

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

Police Chief Francis Finn was so excited by the idea he reportedly said "Let's do it; let this thing start."

The Planning Department has done design work for it, the Park and Recreation Department has contributed workers and the school department has also offered its support.

Quincy District Court, the police department and the Quincy Youth Commission have all allowed staff members to take part.

Seldom have such a wide variety of city departments and agencies gotten so squarely behind a youth program as in the case of NYPUM (National Youth Program Using Mini-Bikes).

The program, sponsored by the Quincy YMCA seeks to help youths 11 to 15 with a variety of problems by involving them in a mini-bike riding and safety program.

The nationwide project worked with almost 17,000 youths in over 350 Y-sponsored units in 1978. The National Board of YMCAs claims participants in NYPUM programs showed improved school performances and attendance and relationships with others, while arrests and other related problems were cut.

Quincy's NYPUM will probably become a national model for others, because of the great spirit of cooperation among the many city departments involved, says Robert Wilson, regional director for the YMCA.

"It's rare to see this many departments get involved," said Wilson, in town last week to oversee the training of local NYPUM staffers.

"In a lot of towns, the courts want it, but the school department can't be bothered, or the schools want it, and somebody else isn't interested," he said.

The mini-bikes used in the program are just a tool to give the youth something to work at, Wilson says. The point is to teach them responsibility and teamwork, he says.

Each youth who takes part in the program signs a "contract," says Christina REVVING UP for the start of NYPUM (National Youth Program Using Mini-bikes) are John Mahoney, chairman of the Quincy Youth Commission; Paul Harvey, senior program director of the Quincy YMCA; Dennis Mannix of Quincy Police and Gene Koylion of Quincy District Court. Duan of Quincy District Court. For example, a student having academic problems will pledge to do his every night. If he doesn't, he won't ride his mini-bike that week with the other members of his group.

His NYPUM counselor is responsible for seeing that the contract is carried out - for example, checking with the youth's teachers to see if homework is being done.

"The program is really strict on that," Wilson said.

About 75 percent of the youths taking part will be referred from courts. Others, referred from schools or other agencies will have a variety of problems.

Christina Dean, who first dealt with a NYPUM program while at Cambridge District Court, told of a 12-year-old who had been referred to the mini-bike program by his school. Overweight and teased by his fellow students, he was "acting up" in class to gain the approval of his classmates.

His contract specified that he would visit a dietitian, get on a diet and stick to it.

"He lost 40 pounds. He's a great athlete at Cambridge High now," she said.

When she came to Quincy District Court this year, she asked "Why can't we have one here?"

"It's one of the best tools I've ever seen for working with kids," she adds.

The Honda Company donated 24 bikes for use in the program, which cost the NYPUM program only the $76 shipping charge. The $25 to $30 helmets were donated for the $8 shipping charge.

Boston Edison donated the land for the Squantum Point mini-bike track, which was designed by the Planning Department and constructed by Park Department laborers.

The program is expected to begin in earnest on Nov. 1.

1,000 Support Over-The-Water Route

Airport Battle Not Over Yet, Says Mader

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

"Alternative Six" isn't a sure thing yet, but it seems to be the only alternative Quincy residents are willing to get behind.

The over-the-water takeoff route, long sought by Quincy and other South Shore residents for Logan Airport turbojets, was tentatively approved by the Federal Aviation Administration last week as one of six possible routes.

That means the over-the-water might, but might not gain final approval when the FAA issues the final version of its environmental impact statement on the Logan takeoffs early next year.

FAA spokesman Stan McDonough said last week that even if the route favored by CAAN (Committee Against Airport Noise) is accepted by the FAA, the quieter takeoffs won't go into effect until late next spring.

North Quincy, Wollaston and Squantum residents who claim they've been getting an earful from the overland takeoffs, gathered at the Vo-Tech gym last Thursday to sound off at FAA and MassPort representatives.

The meeting, planned as a public hearing for comment on the FAA's draft environmental impact report, produced almost unanimous support for the over-the-water takeoffs and almost unanimous criticism for the present arrangement.

Bernie Mader, chairwoman of CAAN, warned that the long battle against airport noise was not yet won. The over-the-water route was still only one of six possible alternatives for the FAA, she said.

"We hope that this is not just one more empty public relations promise," she said.

Let's hope this is not just another confusing tactic by the FAA," she added.

The turnout at Thursday's hearing—about 1,000 persons, might have been larger except that many persons thought the FAA announcement had settled the controversy, she said.

Harold Sponsors Bill To Protect Independent Oil Dealers

Sen Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) is co-sponsoring legislation designed to protect independent oil dealers when heating oil allocations are made this winter.

The bill, filed by Rep. David Cohen (D-Newton), will help insure Massachusetts consumers of adequate home heating oil supplies at a price they can afford, Harold said.

"This legislation basically requires that independent oil dealers receive the same treatment as big oil companies when allocations of oil supplies are made," he said.

"That means they must receive the same consideration, have the same charge for supplies, and be given the same credit terms."

The independent dealers would have to be supplied with proportionately as much oil as oil company affiliates, and be given equally favorable terms on payment periods, interest rates, and credit ceilings under the legislation.

Harold said the bill is intended to help maintain a competitive oil market, and to avoid the concentration of oil supplies and power in the hands of a few major companies by putting local independent dealers on the same footing as company-associated dealers.

The bill requires the oil producers to file reports showing that they have complied with the new regulations and provides a penalty for those who fail to do so.

Part of Quincy's Past—A Hope for its Future

'Fiscal Autonomy' Issue

School Budget Dispute May Go To Court

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

The question, it has been said over and over, is one of fiscal autonomy.

The School Committee says it has it. Mayor Arthur Tobin says it doesn't. And the courts may be called upon to decide.

Labor negotiations and increased utilities costs have combined to cause a probable $1 million deficit in the school department's $33 million budget. While the committee is asking Tobin to approve extra appropriations for the overrun, the mayor says they'll have to tighten their belts and make do with what they already have.

Bethany Players To Present Show

The Bethany Players will present a variety show, "Let's Do It Again with Bethany on Broadway" Friday, Oct. 26, and Saturday, Oct. 27, at 8 p.m. in the Bethany Congregational Church social hall.

Ed Bohlken is directing the show. Tickets will be available at the door.

Tobin has already rejected a request from the committee for $315,000 to fund contracts for teachers aides, custodians and secretaries. But last Friday, the committee voted to return that request to him, along with one for $600,000 for oil and electricity increases.

"Every city department is going to come up short on fuel this winter," Tobin said Tuesday. "I can't approve supplemental budget requests for just the school department."

"If I approve extra money for the school unions, every other union will be looking for one, too," he added.

Patricia Toland, vice-chairwoman said Tuesday she expected the committee to add to that $915,000 supplemental request Tuesday night. A contract with the school system's maintenance workers was "just about settled," she said, and funding for it would probably be tacked on to the previous total.

Mrs. Toland added that she didn't expect any funding for teachers' raises would be included in that total.

"We don't have any sign of good faith from them," she claimed. Negotiations, scheduled to go into the fact-finding stage, are still at a standstill, she said.

Robert Garner, president of the teachers' union, confirmed Tuesday that no progress was achieved in a Monday night meeting between teachers' negotiations and the school committee.

According to Mrs. Toland, mayors have traditionally accepted supplementary budgets for collective bargaining after the original budget has been approved.

"It's always been a routine procedure," she said. Previous mayors have accepted the position that the school budget, including budget supplemental requests, are protected by the committee's fiscal autonomy.

"What we will probably end up doing is to go to court and settle it once and for all," she said.

"If they have fiscal autonomy, let them bail themselves out," Tobin said. "They are making it look as if I'm the one who's holding it (pay raises) up. If they are sincere, they have the power to fund it themselves."

McCauley Urges Passage Of Assessor Info Bills

City Councillor Francis X. McCauley is supporting legislation that would require city assessors to notify within 30 days the owners of residential property when a new valuation is placed on the property.

McCauley has written to Reps. Thomas F. Brownell, Robert A. Cerasoli and Michael W. Morrissey urging their support for the bill, that is now in the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Councillor said that under current practice, when the valuation is increased, the homeowner is unaware of the change until the tax bill is received later in the year.

The homeowner is then faced with unforeseen additional taxes which usually have to be paid within 30 days of receipt of the tax bill.

McCauley also urged passage of a bill that would require assessors, treasurer and auditor to appear before the City Council prior to the setting of the tax rate to explain how it will be determined.

He said the bills, Senate 1863 and 1864, which have been approved by the Senate through the efforts of Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy), are the result of home rule petitions he submitted to the City Council.

They were approved by the Council and signed by Mayor Tobin, but, said McCauley, the Mayor reversed his position and opposed passage at a public hearing in the State House last spring.

In urging approval, McCauley said both bills will give the people of Quincy greater information about assessing practices and tax-setting procedures.

Survival Planning Crisis-Line Training

The Survival Crisis-Line, entering its 10th year of service to Quincy and the South Shore, will begin a new training session for volunteers in November.

Volunteer openings are for the 5-8:30 p.m. and 8:30-midnight shifts.

Prospective counselors will go through an initial screening process to determine eligibility.

Upon acceptance, 12 hours of introductory training is given which includes drug and suicide workshops, active listening, problem solving and crisis intervention.

Two months of on the job training with regular crisis line counselors follow before volunteers are ready to answer their own calls.

Anyone interested in volunteering, should call Debbie at 471-7102.

The Crisis-Line (471-7100) is staffed by volunteers who answer the phones 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Initially a drug hot-line, it has expanded to include all problems from personal matters to suicide.

Over 700 calls a month are made to the crisis line, compared to 100 a month nine years ago. The organization's offices are at 1354 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Donnelly Bill Pushes Study Of Oil Industry

The Congress had adopted a suggestion by Cong. Brian J. Donnelly (D-Boston) that the Secretary of Energy study the sales and credit policies of the fuel oil industry.

"As we enter the heating season, I am very concerned about the price and supply of heating oil," said Donnelly, who offered his suggestion as an amendment to the Department of Energy Authorization Act.

"Both heating oil dealers and homeowners have brought to my attention the very difficult credit policies which they are being forced to accept. My amendment is aimed at alleviating this credit crunch.

"There is no justification for oil companies making unreasonable credit terms while they are enjoying high profits and while some companies are at the same time liberalizing credit.

"My amendment is intended to loosen credit terms as quickly as possible so that the independent small businessman and the consumer can have a less difficult winter with energy costs."

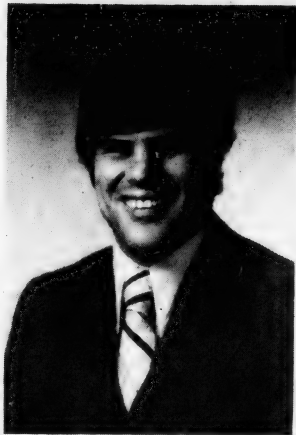

Donnelly's amendment, passed overwhelmingly by voice vote, authorizes a study of the credit practices and conditions of sale between refiners and their wholesale or retail fuel oil dealers.

Quincy Companies Contributing To United Way Campaign

Employees of two local companies are doing their part to help raise the $21 million that is the goal of the 1979 United Way of Massachusetts Bay campaign.

Lucy Mercurio, campaign chairman for Raytheon's Microwave and Power Tube Division in Quincy, reports that employee giving has exceeded the company goal by $8,000 and is still going on.

Ronald Gates, of Boston Mutual Life Insurance Company, Quincy, reports a 64% increase in giving with 100% employee participation.

So far, the United Way's South region, comprised of 21 communities south of Boston, have raised $106,075 of a goal of $442,000.

The United Way campaign continues through Nov. 23.

Program For Children With Asthma At Quincy YMCA

An 18-week physical conditioning program for children with asthma will begin Nov. 14, at the Quincy YMCA, Coddington St.

Sponsored by the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, the sessions are designed for children six to 13 years old, and will be held 3:30-5 p.m.

According to Mrs. Mary Miller, executive director of the association, "...The program is to help youngsters learn how to manage their asthma." Each session includes breathing exercises, recreation and swimming.

Directing the program will be Jim Rendle of the YMCA, Wes Vokey, of the lung association, and a chest physical therapist.

There will be a parent's seminar, conducted by a physician, to create a better understanding of asthma and its affects on youngsters.

The lung association's medical committee has approved the program, now in its sixth year.

For enrollment information, call the lung association at 326-4081.

Brownell Supports Heating Aid Bill

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) recently appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee in support of two bills designed to provide emergency home heating assistance to the needy elderly and the working poor this winter.

Brownell told the committee that in light of the unprecedented rise in the price of heating oil, we are in desperate need of a crisis intervention system which will guarantee that those of limited income will be provided heat.

The mechanism set up should be free from red tape and able to be set in motion on a moment's notice, he said.

One of the bills before the committee would allocate $5 million for heat assistance by way of local community action programs.

"Our community action programs are organized so that they are close to people and their problems," said Brownell. "Consequently, it will be the best agency to administer and deal with heating problems this winter."

Under the bill a state program would pick up where the federal program leaves off by being available to those who have incomes from $5,100 to $13,350 and to any household whose sole source of income is derived from social security benefits.

JFK Wasn't There, But He Was, Really

Ted Kennedy looked deep in thought as he sat there on the rostrum, his right hand half-clenched and thumb pressed against his cheek.

Even when he shifted position in his chair or tried to smooth his wind mussed hair, the thumb automatically returned to the cheek.

He obviously was a man with mixed thoughts and emotions as he stared down at the blue carpet on the platform or looked out at the sea of faces (7,000) invited to witness this historic event: the long-awaited dedication of the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Library on the edge of picturesque Dorchester Bay in Dorchester.

EDWARD KENNEDY

He must be thinking, you tell yourself, of his brothers Jack and Bobby and how this library will be a lasting tribute to their political ideals and deeds.

And perhaps wishing if only they could have been here this Indian summer morning to participate in the ceremonies themselves.

Just two chairs away from him, is someone else he must also be thinking about: President Jimmy Carter.

The President, on his arrival with Rosalyn to the strains of "Hail To The Chief" had shaken hands with Kennedy and kissed Joan Kennedy, Lady Bird Johnson and Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. The latter seemed surprised if not startled.

Joan Kennedy, in a yellow suit, sat between and thus separated the President and the Senator -- and perhaps, soon -- the incumbent and the challenger.

Two Kennedys had sailed the Presidential course before. One reached his destination. One did not. Both violently died for it.

Ted Kennedy must be wondering what lies ahead for him.

Carter was in Kennedy Country and had to be doing some thinking himself. Ted Kennedy is his biggest political threat. And the official threat may come any day now.

Suddenly there was Joseph P. Kennedy, II son of the late Robert F. Kennedy, rattling the politeness, lashing out at the powerful and vested economic interests.

In his fiery, Kennedy style speech he called for a better, much better "America..." where no one anywhere is denied his or her dignity as a human being by virtue of race, sex or background."

He cited as among today's villains giant oil corporations, big coal companies, agribusinesses keeping the little people from earning decent livings while forcing them to endure terrible working conditions.

"And who's stopping them?", he asked, punctuating each citation. Once, he turned around to glare at Carter as though these questions were especially for him. And that he, as President, wasn't doing his job.

Some stood to cheer and applaud when young Kennedy had finished. They either agreed with him or liked the way he said it. But others thought he should have put a period on it half-way through and it would have been a great speech. His continuous "And, who's stopping them?" and his staring Carter down was rude they thought. The President, after all, was a guest in the Kennedy camp and this was no political rally.

One observer wondered if young Kennedy was ignoring his own campaign for his uncle's Senate seat if the latter runs for President and is elected.

Ted Kennedy seemed to be embarrassed about it. He said later he did not know what his nephew was going to say until he said it.

Young Kennedy's remarks left the crowd somewhat uncomfortable and the atmosphere on the rostrum somewhat tensed.

But that all changed a few minutes later after Carter accepted for the people of the U.S., the keys to the library. John F. Kennedy, Jr. presented him with the keys, substituting for his grandmother, Mrs. Rose Kennedy, who is recovering from surgery.

It wasn't in his prepared speech but Carter had brought along a little nugget to use if the opportunity presented itself. And apparently he felt young Kennedy's speech appropriately set the stage so. So he dug out the quote from a 1962 President Kennedy press conference during which a reporter said:

"Mr. President, your brother Ted said recently on television that after seeing the cares of office on you, he wasn't sure he would ever be interested in being President."

CARTER

The crowd stirred and murmured. Ted Kennedy appeared to be caught by surprise and seemed even to blush. But he was soon smiling as Carter continued.

The reporter, Carter said, then asked President Kennedy: "I wonder if you could tell us first, if you had it to do over again, you would work for the Presidency, and second whether you can recommend this job to others?"

According to Carter, President Kennedy replied:

"Well, the answer to the first question is yes, and the second is no. I do not recommend it to others -- at least for a while."

Carter then grinned turned to Ted Kennedy and said: "As you can well see, President Kennedy's wit and also his wisdom is certainly as relevant today as it was then."

Carter went on to give what many in the crowd thought was one of his finest speeches. Some of the Kennedy delivery magic seemed to have rubbed off on him. He was even emphasizing certain remarks by stabbing the air with pointed finger.

"This library," said Ted Kennedy "will be more than just a collection of photographs and objects under glass. It will be a living memorial at many levels."

"For those in other lands, it will be a beacon signalling the message of this nation, a lighthouse bearing witness to Jack's truth that America at its best can truly light the world."

As you listened and studied the figures seated on the rostrum, your own thoughts wandered back to November, 1960 when you covered the election in Hyannis Port.

You remember the party for the press in Ambassador Joseph Kennedy's home in the compound. Jack, Bobby and Ted were there and you chatted with them. So was Rose Kennedy, Pat Lawford, Jean Smith, Sargent Shriver. Jacqueline was pregnant with John John.

You remember Carohne, the Shirley Temple of her day, with a pony named Macaroni and a plane named after her.

And you also recalled that bitter January in 1961 when you sat on a cold bench with your feet in the snow to watch John Fitzgerald Kennedy raise his right hand and become the 35th President of the U. S.

And you remembered how much hope, promise and confidence he gave to his country and the world that day. And the inspiration he was to youth.

Suddenly, his voice is there again in taped excerpts from some of his speeches, ringing out again, this time over Dorchester Bay.

"...We dare not forget today that we are the heirs of that first revolution. Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans..."

Ted Kennedy listens, his head down, his right hand now pressed against his cheek. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis looks toward the sky. In the crowd, eyes moisten.

Jack Kennedy wasn't there -- but he was, really.

Board Bans Comics, Paperbacks

The Quincy Literary Review Board moved to ban 15 crime comic books, four 25-cent paperback novels and the complete works of author Nelson Algren from newsstands in the city.

The four-member board was also examining closely several "slick" magazines containing pictorial layouts of a New York City brothel, a nudist colony and "suggestive cheesecake."

Already on the proscribed list were all the novels of Donald Henderson Clarke.

The review board was made up of the Rev. Joseph D. Parkman, chairman; newly appointed Police Chief Joseph F. Hughes, Mrs. Ida Classer, and Mrs. Katherine Quinn.

Old Kennedy Man Returns

DiSalle Likes Ted's Chances, Recalls Jack At QHS

By TOM HENSHAW

It really wasn't a political speech but someone had asked him the question and so, of course, Michael DiSalle had to answer it.

"I think Ted Kennedy has an excellent chance to be President," he said. "It's no secret to say that I'd be for him. I think he's the man who can restore confidence in the government."

DiSalle, who was in town for the dedication of the John F. Kennedy Library in Columbia Point, Dorchester, spoke to students at Quincy High School, most of whom had to look him up in a history book.

They found that he is a former mayor of Toledo, Ohio, and governor of Ohio, and director of the Office of Price Stabilization, who was among the first to campaign for Jack Kennedy for President 20 years ago.

He's not campaigning for Ted Kennedy now but he left little doubt where his heart lies.

"There is something about a Kennedy," he said. "I think people today long for the feeling they had in the days of Jack Kennedy."

"Possibly Jack Kennedy's greatest contribution as president was the fact that people believed in him. He had a way of leading people when leadership was really required."

"The people of the United States at the time of his death had a greater feeling of belonging to a great country than they've ever had since. This was the gift he gave them."

DiSalle said it is possible that Ted Kennedy is the best of the three brothers (Bob being the third) because he has had the most experience in government.

"He has had to get along with more people," he said. "Jack and Bob never had the respect of the senators that Ted has. Of the three, the average senator would pick Ted as his favorite."

"I even know some Republican senators who like him."

DiSalle, now a Washington lawyer who is "making more money today than I ever made in politics," mostly told the students anecdotes of his relationship with John F. Kennedy.

He said he supported Estes Kefauver in 1956 when the senator from Tennessee beat Kennedy for the Democratic nomination as Adlai E. Stevenson's vice presidential running mate.

"I said to Jack, 'You know, you're awfully young. You've got a great future ahead of you. Today, if you are Stevenson's running mate and he is defeated, you'd get the blame for it,'" DiSalle said.

The Stevenson-Kefauver ticket did go down the drain.

"Later on," said DiSalle, "I made a speech at a dinner in Boston. Kennedy was there. I told them I was the one who kept him from getting the nomination for vice president so he was still alive politically."

"Jack got up and said, 'I just don't want Mike to make a career out of saving my political life.'"

He recalled that Gov. Robert Meyner of New Jersey didn't like Kennedy because they had certain ambitions that were in conflict.

"He and I were at a governors' conference in Idaho," said DiSalle, "and Meyner told me that Jack Kennedy had been in his town looking for support for the presidency."

"Mayer said he asked him, 'I suppose by this time you have your whole cabinet picked?"

"Jack said, 'No, I don't have anybody picked, but there are two people who can have whatever they want. One is Mike DiSalle and the other is Abe Ribicoff.'"

Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut became Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare but DiSalle didn't want any job because he would have had to resign as governor and he didn't think his lieutenant governor was a fit man to succeed to the office.

"I was governor of Ohio when John F. Kennedy made his decision to run for President of the United States," said DiSalle.

"We met a number of times and finally decided he was going to announce on Jan. 2, 1960, and three days later I would announce Ohio's support for him."

"After the election and his ascendancy to the presidency we became closer and closer. He was a great leader. His death deprives the country of leadership it has badly needed ever since."

"There is room today for young people in public life. Unfortunately, you find young people who look at it with a great deal of wonderment and who just dislike the whole thought."

"I don't know of anything I could have done that has given me more satisfaction. I can look back and feel that what I had an opportunity to do is still serving a purpose today."

"If the United States needs anything it needs more and more people who are willing to dedicate their lives to the welfare of their fellow men."

"It is something we are losing more and more each day."

Teachers Vote To Further Cut Services

UNKNOWN TEACHER accompanied by several colleagues, picketed the Huntley Rd. home of Mayor Arthur Tobin last week protesting the Mayor's refusal to approve a raise for teachers. Several wore the bags covering their heads, saying they feared reprisals for the picketing. Tobin said it reminded him of the Ku Klux Klan.

to send letters to School Committee member Mary Collins, a member of the committee's negotiating team, asking for a "reasonable settlement," according to Garner.

The QEA has already tried to make its point to School Committee Vice-Chairwoman Patricia Toland and also a negotiator, by picketing and face-to-face meetings, Mrs. Curtin said.

The third member of the school committee member negotiating team, Joan Picard, will probably be singled out for a protest action of some kind next, Mrs. Curtin said.

Boxes filled with the letters to Mrs. Collins were collected at the exits to the George F. Bryan VFW Post, where the QEA meeting was held.

Mrs. Toland said Tuesday night "it seems to me we (the school system) are being shorchanged."

"I think they're being irresponsible. Even without a raise, they're still among the top 15 or 20 best paid in the state," she said.

"They may be infringing upon the contract," she said of the teachers' 11 measures. She offered field trips as one example of "legitimate educational activities" that the teachers may have no right to reject.

Negotiations between the teachers and school committee are scheduled to enter the fact-finding stage this Friday. Newly appointed state fact-finder John Higgins of Melrose will meet with the two groups and, eventually, offer a non-binding compromise solution that may be rejected by either side.

The differences in the contract discussions center around a pay raise, the school committee's proposal that teachers work an extra 45 minutes per day without extra pay and how RIF (reduction in force) layoffs are to be conducted.

The first 10 motions, recommended by about 50 "buiding captains" and approved by the general membership are as follows:

- "... no additional field trips will be scheduled. Any field trips from Nov. 1 on shall be suspended until a settlement is reached. Any teacher who has collected money for trips after Nov. 1 shall return the money to the students, except those few instances where a deposit or payment already made would be forfeited.

- "... QEA will consider the possibility of no longer volunteering as bus monitors before and after school hours.

- "... no member shall handle any money (e.g. insurance, lunch, picture, football ticket sales, sports, Sal. Army, etc.).

- "... all QEA members shall insist on full duty free lunch period.

- "... Members will not meet or make calls to parents outside of the regular school hours.

- "... members will no longer provide any extra help for students beyond that required by the contract.

- "... to ensure that students are provided with maximum safety, teachers will no longer cover another class, or any portion of another class, in addition to their own when that teacher is required to be elsewhere (e.g. core, PPS, budget session, PAG, administrative meeting, etc.)

- "... no members shall supervise detention.

- "... no member shall provide supervision of any school activity outside contract hours (e.g. dances, athletic contests, musical plays, rallies, clubs, Student Government meetings, etc.). It is understood that physical education teachers must give forty hours after the contracted day. It is recommended that physical education teachers give these hours after the contract is settled.

- "... no QEA member, at any level, shall write any recommendations, (exclusive of counselors), (e.g. lab. school, college, QJC, job, etc.).

The 11th measure, suggested by members from the floor and approved, states that Quincy High School and Vo-Tech teachers do not take part in the school self-evaluation process outside of school hours.

Teachers have been performing this time-consuming work, part of the school's accreditation process, on their own time, said Mrs. Curtin.

Concerned Citizens for Michael Faherty

"As a senior citizen, I know what a struggle it is to pay bills on my fixed income. I know Mike Faherty will work to control city spending and hold down the cost of government."

—Joseph Vesco
125 Granite Street, Quincy Center

"As a Squantum resident, I'm concerned with the type and extent of development we are going to allow in the few remaining undeveloped places in the city. Mike Faherty is the kind of person who will demand that proper restrictions be imposed, and that developers install lighting, drainage, and other necessary elements to protect our neighborhoods and property values."

—Walter J. Hickey
156 Huckins Avenue, Squantum

"The need for the delivery of quality medical services is an important function of our city government which sometimes does not receive the attention it should. Mike Faherty will be a strong voice in making sure high-quality medical services are available to every Quincy resident."

—Catherine Caldwell
16 Bell Street, Houghs Neck

"I work hard for the money I earn, and I wish others shared Mike Faherty's concern for the way my tax dollar is spent. He will scrutinize every proposal and cut out waste and duplication."

—Roy F. Colman
75 Arnold Road, North Quincy

"As a housewife and mother, I'm concerned about protecting the quiet and safety of our residential neighborhoods. Mike Faherty, a retired state police captain, shares my concern."

—Margaret Mullen
24 Winthrop Avenue, Wollaston

"Mike Faherty will bring back the balance and good working relationship between the city government and city employees which so often seems to be missing. As a retired city employee, I know the frustrations city employees sometimes have to go through; and I know Mike Faherty is firm, but fair."

—John J. Zambruno
162 Summer Street, Quincy

"As a former city councillor and the present state senator, I know the qualities that are important in properly serving the public. I have confidence in Mike Faherty's abilities and forthright nature. He is one candidate this year who has addressed the issues, and he certainly merits one of our three votes for councillor at large."

Builder Drops Old Law Suit, Wins Zoning Variance

A law suit that has been pending for 11 years was settled in a City Hall conference room last week and, as a result, Louis C. Ouelette can add 11 parking spaces for his apartment buildings on Wollaston Hill.

When Ouelette built his 53-unit apartment building at 100 Grand View Ave. in 1968 there was so much opposition from neighbors that Ouelette sued them for interfering with his rights under the zoning laws.

Last week, Ouelette went before the Board of Zoning Appeals for a variance that would enable him to change the lines between 100 Grand View Ave. and 109 Warren Ave., where he has a 17-unit apartment house, to create the parking spaces.

Some 50 neighbors showed up at the hearing, obviously pleased that the new parking spaces would take cars off Grand View Ave. but also ready to bring a few concessions out of Ouelette.

Ouelette agreed to drop the law suit and also that he would not displace snow from his property onto the street, that he would maintain as much greenery as possible around his apartment houses, and that he would not increase the number of units.

He also agreed to extend an existing 100-foot retaining wall for another 25 feet in order to level a slope in the lot for the parking spaces.

Clara Yeomans, executive secretary of the Conservation Commission, said that several large trees will have to be removed to make way for the parking spaces.

One thing that was not settled last week was Ouelette's suit against the city of Quincy, Building Inspector Allan MacDonald and six city councillors, vintage 1968.

Ouelette brought suit against them for "maliciously preventing him from obtaining a building permit" and putting him to great expense to build the apartment house.

The case went to the State Supreme Court twice on technical points and twice the defendants lost.

Councillors of 1968 named in the suit were Arthur H. Tobin, John J. Quinn, Clifford H. Marshall Jr., J. Vincent Smyth, Edward S. Graham and George B. McDonald.

City Solicitor Robert Fleming said he plans to confer with Ouelette's attorney, former City Solicitor and City Councillor Richard W. Barry, to see if that case can be dropped, too.

Atlantic Center Invited To Join QCAO

Directors of the Quincy Community Action Organization, Inc., have voted to invite the Atlantic Neighborhood Center to have a member on the board, increasing neighborhood representation to four areas.

Brelsford, Southwest, at 471-0796, or Jane Ford, Atlantic, at 773-1380.

The board also:

Approved a $114,000 community services grant request to administer the Headstart, Family Planning, Energy, RSVP, Food-Nutrition, Southwest and Germantown Centers programs.

Approved a contract between the QCAO and the Quincy Housing Authority to weatherize the homes of public housing tenants who must pay their own energy costs.

Clement O'Brien, director of the OHA, praised Rosemary Wahlberg, executive director of the QCAO, for her initiative in coordinating efforts to solve the energy crisis for low income people.

Family Planning Director Laura Liscio announced the promotion of Helen Bowmar, a member of Family Planning since its inception in 1972, to the position of community educator.

The board approved the attendance of the executive director at the National Conference of Community Action Directors in Indianapolis, Ind., this week (Oct. 20-26).

City Engineer Viewing Wendell St. Abandonment

City Engineer Edward Leone is studying the engineering details of the proposed abandonment of a section of Wendell St., Wollaston, to help Eastern Nazarene College unify its campus.

Seven City Councillors voted last week to hand the matter to Leone, with Councillor James A. Sheets voting president because of his connection with the college. He is an ENC graduate.

The college owns land on both sides of the 200 to 300 foot section, which has created security and traffic problems on the campus.

Wollaston Park Dinner Meeting

The Wollaston Park Association was scheduled to hold its 23rd annual dinner-meeting and election of officers last night (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in Walsh's Restaurant on Billings Rd., Norfolk Downs.

MONEY TALKS

Trying To Cope In A Federal 'Swamp Of Alligators'

By Philip J. Lawrence, President

Colonial Federal Savings and Loan Association of Quincy, Holbrook & Wareham

8-6 Weekdays

8-7:30 Thursdays

The President of the United States has referred to it as "the horrible Federal bureaucracy". It is the nation's largest employer, and it is doing a disgraceful job of managing its 2.8 million workers. It consumes one-fifth of the Gross National Product. It spends tax revenues at the rate of $63 million an hour, is losing $60 billion a year in overspending, and has run up a national debt of $750 billion.

"No other President ever proposed a more ambitious revamping of the bureaucracy," U.S. News & World Report has noted. But Jimmy Carter's administration is making little headway as the entrenched opposition, including Congress, civil-service workers, and special interest groups, gird to blunt his efforts.

John Gardner, former secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and founding chairman of Common Cause, used the analogy of a checker game four years ago to illustrate the paralysis of government by our monstrous bureaucracy.

"Two urgent matters before the nation are the energy crisis and the economy. On both fronts policy making has been gravely complicated by the underground struggle of powerful interests.

"One might liken any top policy-maker today to a person who is trying to win a game of checkers when someone leans over his shoulder, puts a thumb on a checker, and says, "Go ahead and play. Just don't move this checker." Someone else leans over the other shoulder and puts a thumb on another checker. A third person covers still another. Pretty soon -- all thumbs, no moves.

"The thumbs are, of course, the special interests. The owners of the thumbs don't really wish to paralyze the nation's problem-solving efforts. Each just want to immobilize one checker. But collectively they prevent a solution."

Business firms which complied with the Government's understandable urging in postwar years to hire veterans, who were then predominantly white males, are now being cited with Federal charges for job discrimination against women and minorities because of the imbalance of their rosters. The U.S. ban on mandatory retirement has the effect of continuing the imbalance.

All of which is enough for every person who has to cope with Government regulations to exclaim with Harrison Wellford, director of reorganization of the Office of Management and Budget: "I'm up against a swamp of alligators."

Speaks At North Quincy H. S.

LBJ Aide Liz Carpenter Says Abigail Adams Idol

By BERNIE O'DONNELL

For a woman who has dealt with presidents from Franklin Roosevelt to Jimmy Carter, Liz Carpenter makes a surprising choice as her "idol."

But it was one which seemed to win favor with the several hundred students and teachers she addressed at North Quincy High School Friday.

"Abigail Adams has been my idol," she said. "If she had gone to Philadelphia with John, we women would have been written into the constitution then and saved about 200 years."

Mrs. Carpenter, former executive assistant to President Lyndon Johnson and a long-time observer of the Washington scene, was in the Boston area to attend the dedication of the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library.

The theme of her talk was "public service." She noted that the Kennedy Library was to be dedicated not only to the late president but also to all those "who through the art of politics, seek a better world."

She addressed her remarks to "all the future presidents, mayors and governors, diplomats, selectmen and other public servants here today; because I'm sure that's what I'm looking at."

"I'm sure that many of you here will find a piece of your life for public service, as so many who have walked in this city have," she said in her Texas drawl.

Mrs. Carpenter's own life in the political scene began in 1944, when she began covering Washington for a syndicate of national newspapers. She became a friend and confidante of Texas Congressman (and later Senator) Lyndon Johnson, and was named executive assistant to LBJ when he was John Kennedy's running mate in the 1960 presidential election.

After President Kennedy's assassination in 1963, she became press secretary and staff director for the new First Lady, "Lady Bird" Johnson. She remained in that post until the Johnsons left the White House in 1969.

She's now a consultant to the Johnson Presidential Library in Texas and occasionally barnstorms on behalf of the Equal Rights Amendment. She and her husband run a Washington-based public relations firm.

Despite her professed discomfort at visiting Boston "between a Pope and a president," Mrs. Carpenter offered opinions and reminiscence on a variety of topics:

● Washington, D.C.: "The only asylum in the world run by its own inmates."

● Working for President Johnson: "Lyndon Johnson was the kind of man who wanted everything done yesterday."

● On the campaign trail with Johnson: Carpenter joined Johnson on one of the last of the old-style "whistlestop" campaign tours during the Kennedy-Nixon campaign in 1960. In one backwater Virginia town, she recalls, the train was so far behind schedule that Johnson was advised to cut his speech to five minutes.

"Well, Hubert Humphrey used to say that Lyndon couldn't clear his throat in 30 minutes. You can imagine how tough it was to keep him to five minutes."

The five-minute deadline came and went, and Johnson showed no sign of cutting his speech short, and the decision was made to go ahead anyway. Thus, the residents of Culpepper, Va. were treated to the spectacle of a vice-presidential candidate trying to get in his last words as the train slowly chugged out of town.

As a parting shot, LBJ shouted, "What has Dick Nixon ever done for Culpepper, Virginia?"

One town wit was heard to yell back, "Hell, what has anybody ever done for Culpepper, Virginia?"

● John Kennedy's effect on American politics: Kennedy's election eliminated the taboo that a Roman Catholic could not hold national office and opened the way for other groups, as well, she said.

"We spent most of the (1960) campaign hitting the 'Bible Belt', trying to prove that Roman Catholics didn't have horns and tails. Well, President Kennedy ended the bugaboo that a Roman Catholic cannot be nominated. Now I hope that some of the other bugaboos, like you cannot be nominated if you are a woman, can be ended, too."

● The Kennedy Library: "A lot of people will think that, because it's a library, only books will be there. Actually, there will be fewer books there than anything else."

"It's meant as a sightseeing place, where you can learn about the Kennedy years. I hope that you will all find time to visit it."

LIZ CARPENTER, former aide to President and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson discusses her thoughts on the dedication of the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library with North Quincy High Students. Seated behind her are School Committee Vice-Chairwoman Patricia Tpland; Principal Peter Chrisom, and Michael Ricciulli, senior class president and master of ceremonies.

Squantum First Church Christian Art Festival

The First Church of Squantum held its second annual Christian Art Festival Sunday morning.

It began with a worship service on the place of art in the Christian's life, and ended with a display of art created by church members.

The service began with an Introit by the Senior Choir, a Call to Worship by Richard Williams and an Opening Prayer by Ralph Dougherty.

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, church pastor, described Solomon's Temple to the children present, and dedicated two new pieces of art for the church.

The two pieces of art were the Communion Table, given in memory of Peter Otto Olson by his family, with gilt lettering by David Mildram, and two stained glass windows in the narthex of the church.

The two window panels were in the original Squantum church building and have been installed in the narthex as a memorial to Edith Mullin by her sister, Ruth Danforth.

The carpentry was done by David Mildram, related electrical work, by John Malmgren.

Dorothy Abbe read the Scripture from the book of I

Kings. The Senior Choir sang, "Worship the Lord in the Beauty of Holiness", with words by Monsell and music by Sherwin. Dr. Langevin concluded a series of six sermons based on events in the lives of the first three kings of Israel.

More people contributed art for display this year than last, including:

Next Sunday morning at 10:15 a.m. the congregation will hold a special observance of Reformation Sunday which celebrates the Protestant re-formation of the Christian Church.

Lose an earring? There seems to be no function on earth for the odd one left behind. Here is a suggestion. Save the earring remnants in a box. When you have collected a few, string them up to make a bright, glittery mobile. Attach them to a costume gold chain to reflect extra sunlight and give them some spin. Hang them over a child's crib; they are sure to attract inquisitive eyes and provide hours of juvenile entertainment. Instead of putting your leftovers to pasture, you will transform them into an appreciated gift.

Your patronage is appreciated. When you want a piece of jewelry for yourself, or as a gift, we hope you'll come by and see our fine selection at GRONO & CHRISTIE, INC., 536 Adams St., East Milton, 696-1490. In addition to the sale of jewelry, we help to discreetly dispose of unwanted jewelry for private owners, banks and estates. Hours: 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. Mon. thru Sat.

Toland Cites Experience In Bid For School Relection

Mrs. Patricia Toland says she feels that the experience she has gained during her first four-year term on the School Committee will make her a more valuable member of the committee for the next four years.

Mrs. Toland, who is vice chairwoman of the School Committee and a candidate for reelection, spoke at a wine and cheese reception in her honor at the Presidents Golf Course.

She discussed her commitment to learning as much as possible about the issues facing public education and to seeking workable solutions to complex school problems.

She cited her monthly meetings with School Committee women from across the state as well as her attendance at national and regional meetings where issues facing other schools systems are discussed.

Mrs. Toland noted that, as vice chairwoman, she represents her colleagues and the school system around the state.

She also highlighted her involvement with the Citywide Parents Advisory Council and the Chapter 766 Parents Advisory Board as evidence of her commitment to involving parents in education.

The large number of phone calls she receives from parents, she said, indicates to her that they should have access to those who are responsible for setting policy.

PTA Gave Kennedy School Committee Start

School Committeeman Christopher F. Kennedy says the road to a seat on the school board began for him 25 years ago when he joined the Montclair Parent Teachers Association.

Kennedy, who is a candidate for re-election, told a meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. McGinnis, 23 Barham Ave., Montclair, that most of his life has been devoted to schools and their problems.

"When my first child went to kindergarten almost 25 years ago, I joined the Montclair PTA. Eventually, we had eight children, and so I became steadily involved in volunteer work for the Quincy Public Schools.

"Prior to my service on the School Committee, I was successively president of the citywide Parent-Teacher Council and chairman of the Educational Development Committee of the Quincy schools.

"Physically, I am the dean of students at Northeastern University - where I am completing my 32nd year.

"I believe that good schools with dedicated teachers are an indication of a strong city. Good citizens use them as a measure of the worth of a city with respect to moving into or remaining within it.

"The greatest resource we have is our children, and they deserve the best education that we can sensibly afford.

"Service on the School Committee is extremely important. School system policies, budget appropriations, personnel matters all relating to the education and treatment of our students are of vital and continuing concern to the School Committee.

"Competence, understanding, concern, and an awareness of the complexity and effect of their decisions are all critical to the committee members."

Condon Explains Role In Zoning

Joanne Condon, who is seeking re-election as City Councillor from Ward 6, explained the councillor's role in development at a house party in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Gougian, 13 Hillcrest Rd., Squantum.

"I believe that my job as Ward 6 councillor is to keep you informed on all development proposals, to give you the whole picture," she said.

"Planned unit development [PUD] is absolutely the best zoning for an area that is completely undeveloped. This gives the people the ability to see the whole picture before any construction takes place."

She said that in areas that are already developed, like the Boston Harbor Marina site, another type of zoning may be better than PUD.

"At present some of the land already has existing structures which are in deplorable shape," she said. "In order to get financial backing to rehabilitate these buildings, it is necessary to expand the industrial zoning.

"If the whole parcel becomes PUD, then nothing at all can be done until a comprehensive plan is proposed for the entire 300 acres.

"Presently, residential buildings cannot be constructed in the industrial zoned land. If it is changed, then we could have another proposal for thousands of apartments."

Mrs. Condon explained that a public hearing will be held before the City Council on proposed zoning changes.

"When the proposal comes before the City Council I will vote according to the wishes of the majority of my constituents," she said. "That's why I was elected - to represent the people of Ward 6."

Conroy Seeks More School Bus Safety

Patrick Conroy, a candidate for the School Committee, has written to School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon urging increased school bus safety.

Conroy praised Carl Leone and the school bus drivers for their efforts to insure the safety of school children. "However," he added, "cars that drive by the buses while the red lights are flashing, are a serious problem and pose a constant threat."

He suggested painting this warning on the back of each bus: "State Law Stop When Red Lights Flash."

Conroy acknowledged that the signs wouldn't stop anyone from intentionally violating the law, but he added:

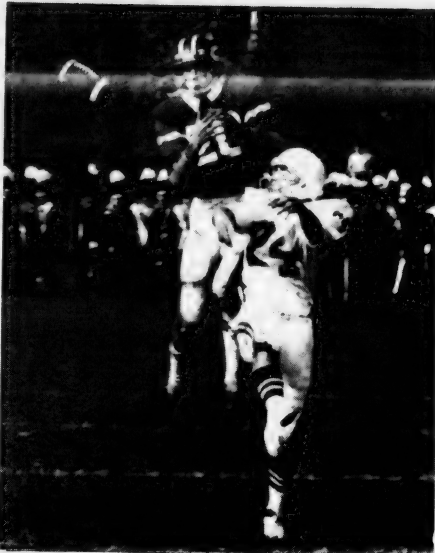

"If the signs prevent just one accident, they will be worth the effort involved."

Presidents Hope Nightmare Will Go Away

By TOM SULLIVAN

Last week's Quincy High football practices were a nightmare for Coach Tom Fitzgerald and the nightmare continued on Saturday when the Presidents, with three key backs injured, were fortunate to escape with an 8-8 tie with New Bedford, a Division 2 team with a 1-4 record, at Veteran's Memorial Stadium.

Fitzgerald hopes the backs will be all right for Saturday's 1:30 p.m. Suburban League game with Weymouth North at Weymouth's Legion Field where Weymouth will be trying to bounce back from two straight defeats.

Weymouth lost to Brookline, 30-20, last week after bowing to North Quincy, 14-6. The Maroons defeated Braintree, Cambridge Rindge and Latin and Boston Tech while losing a close one to strong Walham.

"We had an awful week of practice and I had to make all sorts of changes," said Fitzgerald, whose Quincy team takes a 4-1-1 record into Saturday's Weymouth game. "Halfback Ed Iodice had a bad back and practiced very little. Quarterback Dave Austin had bruised ribs and also worked out only lightly. Then we lost fullback Dan Goldrick on Tuesday when he injured his ribs. We were afraid he was seriously injured but it wasn't as bad as we thought.

"Goldrick didn't even dress for the New Bedford game and Iodice sat out the second half. Also, I didn't use Austin until the second half. I didn't want to use him at all, not wanting to cause him any further injury, but we needed a bit more speed to the outside.

"As a result of all these injuries, I had to move Billy Flynn from halfback to fullback and had to make other changes which resulted in a lot of confusion. I admit we were a confused team against New Bedford, but that was to be expected. Without Goldrick's fine blocking and the running of him and Iodice, they were able to key on Tommy Brennan and for the first time this year he was held under 100 yards."

Brennan did add 80 yards and after six games has gained 775 yards, an impressive figure.

Ron Pettinelli started and played the first half at quarterback. "Ron did an excellent job but Austin gives us a bit more speed to the outside and that is why I put him in the second half," Fitzie said.

Quincy's number one problem, a bad pass from center on a punt situation, handed New Bedford its touchdown in the final seconds of the first half. In four games this fall Quincy has given the opposition a touchdown in this way.

Defensively the Presidents were again outstanding. Asst. Coach Joe Goguen had special praise for the secondary.

"The secondary was just great again, especially Charlie McCall and Paul Martin, while Todd Veale also played well," Goguen said. "Martin threw a New Bedford back for a huge loss, then intercepted a pass to set up our touchdown. And McCall was just great again and nearly pulled the game out with his sixth interception of the year."

Another secondary standout, John Kavanaugh, was injured and missed the second half. McCall was a standout both ways and his pass reception gave Quincy the ball on the one-yard line to set up Brennan's seventh touchdown of the year.

Bulldogs Upset Hanna Club

The Quincy Bulldogs played one of their better games last Friday to upset the previously unbeaten Hanna Club, 10-6, and knock the Hannas out of first place in the Boston Senior Park Football League.

The Bulldogs (4-2) will play the defending champion South Boston Chippewas Friday night at 7:30 at Quincy's home field, the East Boston Stadium. The Chippewas two weeks ago ended Quincy's three-game win streak, 7-6, as the result of a blocked punt.

The Bulldogs' defense, the best in the league, again blanked the opposition last week and is unscored upon now in 21 straight quarters. The only touchdown for the Hanna Club came on a blocked punt in the third period.

● Cross Country

North Wins 3rd, Quincy Still Winless

The North Quincy boys' cross country team improved its record to 3-5-1 last week with a 21-34 win over Abp. Williams.

John Barrett and Gary Morin finished 1-2 for the improving Raiders. Barrett finishing the 2.3-mile course in 12:39, while Morin finished in 12:55. North's Mike Ricciuti was third in 13:03.

The North girls, also coming along well, topped Abp. Williams, 20-39, to improve their record to 4-5.

Sheila Barrett was the winner for the Raiderettes in 11:14 and team-mates Linda Kennedy and Deirdre Donoan placed 2-3.

Earlier the North girls had placed seven runners in the top 10 to defeat Boston Latin and Boston Tech in a tri meet at Franklin Park.

Sheila Barrett was again the winner in 20:13 over the 3.1-mile

The Bulldogs opened the scoring in the opening period when Paul Dube blocked a punt in the end zone for a safety.

They added a touchdown in the second period when quarterback Bob Scibilia, on a bootleg to the left, scored from the four-yard line. Doug Mullen rushed for the two points.

The Hanna Club had the ball on Quincy's one with four seconds to play but rather than rush against the Bulldogs' strong interior line led by Jim Rogers and Peter Rafferty, the quarterback went back to pass and was sacked by Dube and Rogers to end the game.

Rogers played his best game of the year with many unassisted tackles and continually put the pressure on the quarterback.

course, followed by Kennedy, while Nancy MacDonald placed fifth, Donovan sixth, Kara Crehan eighth, Michelle Millane ninth and Anita Perkins 10th.

The Quincy boys remained winless as they lost to Weymouth South, 20-43, but the Presidents' John Furey, one of the best runners in the area, was the individual winner in 14:03 over the 2.8-mile course. However, he was the only Quincy runner to finish among the top 10.

The Quincy girls were shut out by Weymouth South, 15-50, as the Weymouth girls swept the top seven spots. Donna Reardon in eighth place was the First Ladies' first finisher and Joanne Medice placed 10th.

Tuesday the Quincy and North boys and girls meet in the final meet of the regular season over the Quincy course.

Panthers Run Streak To 5, Apaches Win Northern Crown

By JIM NABSTEDT

The unbeaten Panthers rolled to their fifth win in a row, 34-18, over the winless Sailors Sunday in Quincy Youth Football action at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The Panthers clinched the Southern Division title with their 5-0 mark.

Mark Lamie opened the scoring for the Panthers with a 50-yard touchdown run and Bob Burns added the two-point conversion. Lamie scored again on a 20-yard pass from Kevin Cabez and Jon Beniers added the points.

Dave Britt scored the third TD from the two-yard line, Chris Shaughnessy scored on a 23-yard run and Lamie scored his third touchdown on a 50-yard run.

Standing out for the winners were Rich Pettinelli, Pat and Bob Glidden, Billy Chaison, Jim Kelly, Gerry Britt and Chad Jaohng. Gary Curly scored two touchdowns and Pat MacDonald one for the undermanned Sailors, while Billy Doherty drew praise for a fine game at quarterback.

The Apaches wrapped up the Northern Division crown with a 4-1 record as they walloped the winless Manets, 24-0.

Jim McCarthy scored the first touchdown on a 40-yard pass from Jimmy McNamara. McNamara scored the second on a five-yard run and Kevin Mahoney scored the third on a 38-yard keeper. Bob Varnado sacked the quarterback for a safety.

Mahoney, McNamara, McCarthy, Phil Dyer and Mike Gill played well on offense and Varnado, John Gosselin, Eddie Page and Steve Kearns starred on defense. For the Manets Billy Stanley, Bill Burkhead, Bob Carly and Greg Hanley played well. The Manets were without head coach

Sandy Burns, who was seriously injured in an auto accident last Friday night.

The Elks slugged the Raiders, 28-0, with Mike Ross opening the scoring on a three-yard sweep. Jiff Jaffarian hit Jack O'Callaghan for the conversion. Ross also scored the second TD on a 25-yard run. Paul Kenney scored the third on a 20-yard run and added the fourth on a 94-yard interception return. It was the third interception he has returned for a score.

The Elks played well as a team with John Cacciatore and Steve Curran playing well on defense. For the Raiders Bernie Walsh, Steve Stockbridge, Jack Armstrong, Don and Dave Norton and Mike Ross played well.

Sunday the Raiders will play the Sailors at noon, the Elks will meet the Manets at 1:30 and the Panthers will face the Apaches at 3.

Quincy, North Girls Swim Teams Win

The Quincy and North Quincy girls' swim teams continue to improve as last week North captured its fifth win of the season while Quincy took its third and fourth victories.

Last Friday Bill Walker's North girls defeated Weymouth North, to even their record at 5-5, 101-71, in a Suburban League meet led by double winners Jacqui Pike and Kit Harrow.

Pike won the 200-meter individual medley in 2:41.6 and won the 110 butterfly in 1:13.8. Both were team records.

Harrow won the 50 and 100-freestyle events, setting a school record 1:02.06 in the 100.

Other Raiderette winners were Mary Tenney in the one-meter diving, Diana Dawson in the 100 backstroke and Marjorie Bortolotto, who set a school record in the 100 breaststroke.

Judy Appleby's Quincy girls topped Cambridge Rindge and Latton, 84-78, in a league meet, led by Janet Sines' two wins.

Sines won the 200 individual medley and the 100-yard backstroke. Donna Marcin won the 200 freestyle and Cindy Pitts took the 50 freestyle. Pitts also took second in the 100 freestyle and Marcin was second in the 500 freestyle.

The relay team of Patty Howe, Sines, Pitts and Marcin won the 400 freestyle race.

Earlier in the week the First Ladies had defeated Blue Hills, 90-63, in a non-league meet.

Marcin won the 100-yard backstroke and the 200-yard individual medley in addition to helping the 400 freestyle relay team to victory.

Sines won the 100 butterfly. Howe took the 100 freestyle and Pitts won the 200 freestyle. The three joined Marcin on the winning relay team.

Young Laracy Shines In R.I. AAU Meet

Ten-year-old Bob Laracy of the Quincy Swim Club competed last weekend in an AAU specialty meet at Cranston, R.I.

He finished third in the 50-yard butterfly, fifth in the 50-yard breaststroke and sixth in the 50-yard freestyle.

This meet had the top AAU swimmers in their respective divisions competing in their specialty events.

Earlier young Laracy had competed in the Attleboro AAU invitational meet at Attleboro High School.

AAU swimmers from Massachusetts and Rhode Island competed in the day long meet and the young Quincy swimmer, the only entry from Quincy, won the 100-yard freestyle and 50-yard freestyle, placed second in the 50-yard butterfly and 50-yard breaststroke and took third in the 50-yard backstroke.

This was one of the first AAU meets of the season and Bob will be competing in meets for the next four weeks throughout Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Raiders Need Offensive Punch For Brookline

Another outstanding performance by the defense went for naught last Saturday as the North Quincy football team, following two wins in a row, bowed to a powerful Waltham team, 13-3, at Waltham.

Waltham is tied with Brockton for the Suburban League at 4-0 and 5-1 overall.

The Raiders, who had to play without two offensive standouts, Capt. Leo Graham and Bob McCormick, hope to rebound Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium against a vastly improved Brookline team in a 1:30 p.m. league game.

Brookline, which has had little luck in recent years, has come alive in the last two games with a 30-20 win over Weymouth North last week and a 44-8 runaway over Cambridge Rindge and Latin two weeks ago. Previously the team had edged Wellesley, 7-6, lost to Waltham and Brockton topped Weymouth South, 8-0.

"Our offense was weakened considerably by the loss of Graham and McCormick, but Bill Dailey, Pat Carroll and Ricky Anderson ran well," Coach Dave Burke said. "McCormick should be back for Brookline, but I don't know about Graham. It doesn't look promising." McCormick sprained an ankle in practice last week.

"Lou DiPietro, John Buckley, Ed Miller, Dave Penzo and Bill Feeney all played well in our offensive line," Burke said.

"Our defense was great again," said Ken McPhee, one of the defensive coaches. "Waltham had one good drive for a touchdown and they scored on a pass on which we missed an assignment. Every game the other team seems to come up with a big play but our kids have a lot of character. They are small and inexperienced, but they continually put out 100 percent and do a remarkable job."

McPhee had good words in particular for Chris Petrillo, who had another banner day with 11 unassisted tackles and seven assists; Tony Camillo, who had nine tackles; Anderson, who went both ways; Joe Crifo, Glen Segalla, Paul O'Sullivan, Glen Ross and Feeney, another fine two-way player.

Jack Leone put North ahead, 3-0, in the first period with his third field goal, a 24-yarder.

Waltham then came back with its one long drive of the game and Matt Corbett scored from the 12. Fred Keirstead kicked the point.

In the second period Mark Tabor hit Dave LeLievre with a 35-yard touchdown pass. The kick for point failed.

"We played them pretty even in a scoreless second half," Burke said. "Twice our defense held them on our 12-yard line. The kids on defense really did their job again today."

Presidents Hope To Chase Nightmare Away

Asst. Coach Bill Maver paid tribute to Walter Kilgallon, Chris Chevalier, Bill Murray, Ed Quinlan, Ed Mackey, Jim McNeil and, of course, the brilliant Lou Matthews, for their work on defense.

Offensively, Asst. Pete Chella, who handles the offensive line with Mark Conroy, singled out Paul Bandera and Fran Duggan for their performances.

"I am hoping the injured backs will be able to play at Weymouth, because they have a tough team and will really be up for us after losing two in a row," Fitzgerald said.

The Presidents hurt themselves with two roughing the kicker penalties, one in particular late in the game proving costly.

New Bedford controlled the ball for most of the first half, resulting in Quincy's defense being on the field most of the time.

With 40 seconds left in the half Quincy was in a punting situation on fourth down and the pass from center was bad, giving the Whalers the ball on Quincy's six. Quarterback Denny Huston passed to Bob Johnson for the touchdown and then hit Dennis Gomes for the two points.

Quincy's offense continued to bog down in the second half with New Bedford continuing to key on Brennan.

In the final period with fourth and 17, New Bedford punted from its 10 but the second roughing the kicker penalty against the Presidents gave the Whalers a first down on its 30.

Martin, after dumping the ball carrier for a big loss, intercepted a pass with 3:39 remaining and brought it to the New Bedford 32.

With fourth and seven on the 25, Austin, on a keeper, swept right end for 11 yards and a first down on the 14. Austin hit McCall with a pass to the one and Brennan scored. On the try for the tying points, Austin again kept and went around right end for the points.

McCall made the most spectacular play of the game when he grabbed a Whaler pass on his 15, raced down the right sidelines and appeared headed for a touchdown when a New Bedford player just managed to grab his shirt and bring him down on the Whaler 22 with 13 seconds to play. Quincy couldn't get another play away as the game ended.

"McCall is our fastest runner and if he hadn't been tired from playing both ways, they never could have caught up with him," Goguen said.

Quincy-Weymouth N. Game On WJDA

Radio Station WJDA will carry a play-by-play of Saturday's Quincy-Weymouth North football game at Weymouth's Legion Field, starting at 1:30 p.m.

WJDA will also bring in reports of Brookline-North Quincy at Veterans Memorial Sunday the station will do the play-by-play of the Abp. Williams at Pope John game in Everett.

Messina Completes Baseball Career At St. Anselm's

Paul Messina, former Archbishop Williams High hockey and baseball star, has completed his final year as a member of the St. Anselm's College (Manchester, N.H.) varsity baseball team.

The senior third sacker skidded to a .212 fall average, but his heady play and leadership helped guide the Hawks to a school record seven wins for the recently completed campaign.

North Makes Special Effort But Weymouth S. Ties

The North Quincy soccer team tried hard to win last Saturday's game for Steve Morrissey, whose mother died last week, but the best it could do was a 2-2 tie with Weymouth South at Weymouth.

The tie was the second for the Raiders, who also have two victories.

They will play at Brockton Friday at 3:30.

A moment of silent prayer was observed by the Raiders in their huddle before the game. "The kids were a little disappointed they couldn't pull off a win for Steve," Coach Paul Bregoli said.

A strong wind was a big factor in the game as the team going with the wind had much the better of the offensive play.

North won the toss and decided to go with the wind first and it paid off immediately as the Raiders dominated the first five minutes of play and scored on Tri-Capt. Joey Flynn's sixth goal of the season, assisted by sophomore wing Richie Palma.

Weymouth came back five minutes later to tie the score on junior goalie Paul Mallory, who played outstanding for the Raiders with 25 saves.

North Quincy came back to take a 2-1 lead late in the first period as junior wing Gary Donaghey scored his second goal of the year with an assist for sophomore halfback Steve Sacchetti, who filled in brilliantly for injured Tri-Capt. Bill Bradley. North kept Weymouth off the board thanks to the fine play of Sacchetti. John Keenan, Tim Burke and Chris Dunn.

Weymouth tied it up in the second quarter when a misplaced ball changed direction and a Weymouth player was able to hit it home.

Mallory made two outstanding third quarter saves to keep the Wildcats from going ahead while his teammates were must missing connections on offense. A Bob Biagini cross just missed and Donaghey also barely missed. A Dave Lapsley corner kick resulted in shots by Flynn and Sacchetti, but both missed.

North played a defensive fourth quarter with Keenan, another sophomore, saving the game by kicking a ball out of an empty net with seven minutes to play. Biagini moved from forward to fullback when Dunn was injured and played well as did soph Charlie Spiropoulos.

The check was presented in behalf of the Quincy Police Dept., which collected the money in the annual canister drive.
